ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF CHARITIES IN JUNE

Leading Philanthropic Workers on Continent to Speak at Buffalo.

The 36th Annual Conference of Charities, which opens in Buffalo on June 9th, and continues in session for a week, promises to be one of the big conventions of the year. Among the speakers will be the leading philanthropic workers of the continent and every phase of social and philanthropic work will be discussed. Anyone who wishes to make a study of social service will gain here in one week, more information than they could gain from books in a year. In addition to the various addresses and discussions there will be an exhibit of congestion in cities, tenement and slum life, a model playground, the various printed forms and literature used by societies in carrying on their work. It is expected that 1,500 persons will attend from all parts of the United States, and owing to the meeting being so close to the Canadian border, the officials hope for a large representation from Canada. All who can make it convenient to attend will be made welcome to the meetings. Any Canadians who wish to attend should notify Mr. J. J. Kelso, Toronto.

175 PEOPLE WERE HURT BY FALL FROM BALCONY

Guard Rail Gives Way While Spectators Were Watching the Indoor Track and Field Games at Seattle—Over 200 Fall to the Floor.

A TERRIBLE CATASTROPHE.

Special Despatch to The Examiner.

Seattle, Wash., May 7.—Between 160 and 75 persons were injured, many fatally, shortly before midnight, when an iron guard rail in the balcony of the National Guard Armoury on Western avenue gave away. Fully 5,000 spectators were assembled in the armoury on the occasion of the indoor trick and field championships of the Pacific, Northwest Association of the Amateur Union, when the accident occurred. The iron guard rail racing 300 feet along the each side of the structure gave way for its full length and from 200 to 250 people were plunged headlong a distance of sixteen feet to a hard floor.

Thrown From A Punt Into The Cold Water Of The Otonabee In The Early Hours Of Morning

Mr Louis Beauregard, George St., had an experience recently on Little Lake which laid him up for a day or so, and for the time being placed him in a rather hazardous position. He was out in a punt, near the C. P. R. bridge and, with a pike pole, was loading up with stray wood. He saw a rather large stray timber which he fastened to and stood up in the boat in order to bring it near, and make fast, the more easy to bring it ashore. The current was rather rapid, due particularly to the swollen condition of the river. The punt and stick of timber floated down with Mr. Beauregard still standing up.

Suddenly, one end of the punt caught on a bush that was standing out of the water, and the sudden jar caused Mr. Beauregard to lose his balance, and the next minute he was struggling in the cold water.

The boat was floating on, drawing away from him, and as he was a long distance from either shore he turned quickly, struck out for the punt and clambered in to it, chilled to the marrow, and rather exhausted. The experience at that early hour with the water not quite at summer heat was anything but pleasant, and as a result Mr. Beauregard was laid up for several days.

New Course To Be Adopted Now In The Kinrade Case

Examiner Special (2.45 p. m.)

Toronto, Ont., May 7.—Based on the report of the Crown's alienist in the case, George L. Blackstock, K.C., has recommended to the Attorney-General an important step in connection with the Kinrade case. Indeed it is so important that it is not probable it will be accepted upon the Attorney-General without the consent of Premier Whitney. The report of Dr. Bruce Smith and Dr. Clarke is understood to be of a very serious character and if adopted will have a sensational effect.

Band Concerts Will Be Held In Victoria Park As Heretofore

The proposed changes to Victoria Park will be made only on the southern half of the upper section and will thereby not interfere with the band concerts as long as the people will confine themselves to the north half which will be prepared late in the fall. The improvement that has already been made to the park seems to justify the Horticultural Society in their desire to make the park uniform and not as it was formerly, the loveliness of the lower part destroyed by the wanton and uncultured appearance of the upper section strewn with papers, peanut shells, orange, and banana peeling, and a general litter after every band concert.

The ground is being levelled and sodded, and presents an even swerve from Water street to the road in front of the Court House. Those who have seen the developments as they are materializing, are much in favour of the scheme and when the entire park is finished it should be decidedly beautiful.

Band Concerts.

As far as can be learned the 57th band concerts will be held at Victoria Park, as before, but the people will have to congregate on the northern part of the upper section. This should be no inconvenience and the authorities expect that no one will trespass upon the lot now set apart for improvements. It will probably be necessary, however, to have a policeman present to enforce this request, as there are always a certain number who have no respect for public property, which they seem to consider as their own, and yet not so, for they would treat their own property with much more consideration. There has been some feeling that the 57th concerts would be held in Central Park instead of Victoria and public feeling greatly prefers the latter. It will be with pleasure that they will learn that the concerts will be practically the same as in the past.

WATCH FOR THE EXAMINER'S NEW YORK MARATHON EXTRA

To-morrow, the Examiner will issue a sporting extra in which the $10,000 Marathon Derby in New York, and the Shrubb-Longboat fifteen-mile race in Montreal will be fully covered, complete details of the two races from start to finish being given. The Examiner has made arrangement with the C.P.R. Telegraph Company for a complete service on both contests and there will be a direct wire from the track in each case, so that the many hundreds of local people who are interested in the big races will be able to read all about them in the sporting edition of the Examiner, which will be issued at about 7:30 o'clock to-morrow evening.

The New York race is not billed to start until after four o'clock so that it will be about seven o'clock before it is over, which is the reason that it is not possible to issue an extra earlier in the day. Owing to the fact that two big races will have to be covered, the Examiner will not be able to give a service on the outside bulletins as has been the custom, and therefore, the Marathon fans will have to look for the special edition for information concerning the two contests. Both races will be covered in a satisfactory and complete manner, showing the progress of the races at different stages. The same descriptive report that have been given of the recent Marathons will be found in the Examiner's big sporting extra.

If you want to know all about the big Marathon or the equally as important battle between Shrubb and Longboat, you cannot afford to miss the Examiner Extra. Watch for it on the streets at 7.30 o'clock, or call at the office.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER'S BIRTHDAY ON SAME DATE

The large gathering at the residence of Mr. Hawthorne, 102 Gladstone avenue last night had a double cause d'etre, i.e., to celebrate the birthday of Mr Hawthorne himself, and also to honour the natal day of his daughter, Miss Lily Hawthorne. A most enjoyable evening was spent by those present, who, in addition to the relatives of the family included a few invited guests who added to the enjoyment of the occasion by songs and music.

Among those who contributed to the programme were Mr. Monk, overture; Mrs. Farmer and Mrs. Giles, a duet, "Old Love's Song"; Mr. Hawthorne, "An Old Dutch Clock"; Mr. Moher, "Things That a Man Can't Do"; Mr. Giles, "The Monarch of the Woods"; Miss Beatrice Hawthorne, "Just By the Stroke of the Pen," and Mr. Alfred Hawthorne, Jr., "The Old Arm Chair."

HEADSTONES USED IN BALL GAME

Port Hope School Boys Had Made Bases of Them.

Port Hope, Ont., May 7.—At a meeting of the High School Board, Trustee Clarke called attention to the condition of the deserted Methodist cemetery, adjoining the school grounds.

As the deeds and papers have been lost for years the place has fallen into a bad condition.

"Boys on Saturdays play ball on the High School grounds," said Mr. Clarke, "and last week I saw a number of lads busy at the game, using the headstones from the graves as bases. One stone with name of a Reverend doctor of divinity on it was the home base. It's a shame."

No action was taken, as several attempts to settle the question of the costs of he repairs have been made.

MR. PUGSLEY'S TRIUMPHANT DEFENCE

The discussion in the House of Commons on Wednesday of the incidents arising out of the report of the New Brunswick Commission, demonstrated the length to which partizan rancour will gratuitously go to injure a political opponent. Hon. Wm. Pugsley, whom the partizan commission, was evidently designed to injure, was a man of such outstanding prominence and influence in New Brunswick politics that, to injure a reputation and weaken an influence, that was proof against fair and legitimate party tactics, unfair and illegitimate means were considered justified. The rancour of local politics has been transferred to the House of Commons, whose time has been occupied with an extra-parliamentary matter, which has no other justification than the desire to translate the pursuit of Mr. Pugsley from the local to the broader field, to exploit the Parliament of the Dominion for the promotion of party interests. The report of the commission of the New Brunswick Government, charges Hon. Mr. Pugsley with failure to account for certain moneys in connection with the administration of the New Brunswick Central Railway, when, years ago, he was a minister of the Government and ex-officio director of the government-aided railway. With the report of this commission, as evidence, the opponents of Mr. Pugsley in Parliament essayed to put him on trial. As things turned out the report itself was put on trial and Mr. Pugsley in the course of a splendid speech, not only completely vidicated himself, but contributed a scathing denunciation and exposure of the one-sided and partizan character of the commission and its report, scarcely a paragraph of which permitted any fair-minded man who wished for truth and justice to regard it with the least degree of reliance.

Mr. Pugsley's address contained the most convincing proof of the bias of the report as was to be expected from its composition and the circumstances of the creation of its authors. The commission was composed of three "good Conservatives." The judge who was the head of it was a judge, is described as an "aspiring politician," who, masquerading as a judge, is found at every election, coquetting with the politicians for a nomination in one or the other of the New Brunswick constituencies.

So much for the composition of this commission. Its report and the "investigation" upon which it purported to be founded, correspond in character with the procedure of the investigation. The report itself is full of flagnant errors, as they may be charitably called. There was a failure in the investigation to call witnesses who might have contributed to an extraction of the whole truth. The report is shown to be a "perfect" tissue of erroneous statements which would require a great deal of charity to believe to be anything else than wilful misstatements." The charge that Mr. Pugsley failed to account for certain moneys is sought to be made good by omitting to take into account large payments which aggregate the total amount which the report charges is unaccounted for. Mr Pugsley has been heard in his defence and challenges and refutes all the essential statements of the report, so far as it implies wrong doing in office or improper conversion of, or failure to account for, public moneys. To show his desire to test the correctness or rather the incorrectness of a palpably partizan report, evidently founded upon a determination to slanderously impugn his character as a public man; to show that he is not afraid of all the truth coming out, in conection with the Central Railway Company, Mr. Pugsley has instituted proceedings in the Supreme Court of New Brunswick to procure a full accounting of all the receipts and expenditures. This procedure was taken after waiting in vain for the Conservative Government of New Brunswick to take such an action; an action which it was in duty bound to have taken if the Government had had the slightest belief in the—even approximate — correctness of the findings of its own "hand-picked" commission.

Mr. Pugsley has made his defence. He has shown that the charges implied in the report of the partizan commission, are without foundation and evolved from an investigation that was purposely incomplete; and, as evidence of his sincerity he has invoked the powers of a Supreme Court to bring out the whole truth.

THAT DAYLIGHT BILL

The following apt criticism of the proposal to juggle with the clocks of the country and so disorganize the routine of events in social, commercial and industrial life, is taken from the Montreal Herald. The matter has not evidently been thoroughly considered by the proposer and the committee which reported the bill, nor its bearing upon the practical life of the country fully estimated. The Herald says:

> The so-called daylight saving bill has been favourably reported on by a committee of the House of Commons. A main reason for this action seems to be that only those who were caught by the title of the measure took pains to make their views known. There are objections to its being made law. The time of day is an astronomical matter. In Great Britain, for the sake of general convenience and uniformity, this fact was partly ignored and Greenwich time was accepted as that of the whole country. Canada and the United States later took action on the same lines and established certain meridianal belts within which local geographical time differences were ignored and the noon of a central point became the noon of the whole belt. This set up what is known as standard time. On it the railways and transportation companies have arranged their train tables. To change it would create confusion on international roads and roads having international connections, and they would have either, as in the days before standard time was adopted, to maintain a time of their own to agree with that of their connections, or to complicate their time tables with double sets of figures for the guidance of their through passengers and train hands. All this would make for confusion in an important department of commerce. There is nothing in the proposals of the bill to promise adequate compensation for this and other inconveniences it would cause. It is only a bill for the cities. In the country, where domestic considerations fix the hours of labour, it would never be thought of, save as a cause of inconvenience and confusion in connection with railway and postal arrangements. In the latitude of Winnipeg, where in midsummer the sun does not set till 8:40 p.m., and there is practically daylight till 9 o'clock it would be unnecessary. At Edmonton, where the people call their summer baseball games at 7 o'clock and finish them before dark they want no "saving" of daylight. A little more darkness during which they could sleep might even be welcome. The meaning of the measure evidently has not been thought out by those who have given it their approval. It purposes to "save" daylight by putting the clock hands forward one hour in April, and keeping them ahead of time till October. It is expected this will fool people into beginning work earlier, and, of course, finishing earlier, and having daylight for a greater part of the evenings. It ignores the fact that times for beginning and quitting work have been settled by considerations of what is convenient, and these cannot be changed by statute. In the few places in Southern Canada which would be likely to be concerned in the working of such a measure, in these times when the ordinary worker only puts in nine or eight hours a day, anything like a united demand by those who thought they were interested would secure by mutual arrangement what the bill proposes to establish by law where it would be unnecessary or inconvenient. Parliament has better work to do than in passing such meddling and muddling enactments.

REFORM THE CRIMINAL DEPARTMENT.

Toronto World, (Con.)

What Ontario needs is a more vigorous and better organized criminal department. The public have been hearing for some years now that reforms were intended in the provincial police system. The present local system has not worked out well, and the recent Hamilton affair is sufficient example of its general inefficiency. Things did not begin to move in the mysterious case until Provincial Detective Miller was sent down from Toronto. Several days were lost through the inactivity of the local chief, whose retirement is understood to have been pending for the last year or so. This ought not to have happened under a vigorous administration of the present system at Queen's Park, but it could not have occurred at all if a central system had been in operation with a thoroughly alert head.

There may be zeal in the present department, but there is so much prudence and discretion that the zeal of the criminal in making his escape is much the more effective. In nothing is the necessity of prompt action so obvious as in the administration of justice in criminal cases. With a thoroughly competent central provincial system, closely in touch with all local organizations, the machinery of detection in crimes like the Kinrade murder would lose not an instant of effective action. As it was, the paralyzing influence of a too deliberate local officer leaves the crown in an almost hopeless predicament. The attorney general's scheme of law reform will not be complete until he reconstitutes the provincial criminal police department or creates an entirely new one. The cost of a policy of prevention would not be so great as the expense the present practice compels by making it necessary to overtake the results of delay, error and omission.

I have taken three boxes of Gin Pills, working all the time at heavy work on the railroad and did not lose a day.

INTERIOR WORK AT ARMOURIES

Tenders Have Been Called for Concluding Fittings.

Tenders are called for interior fittings of the armouries, the notice of which may be found in another column. As far as can be learned this is largely the Company lockers and other wooden work. Each company has its own room, and these have to be fitted up for the volunteers' "kits." The fittings of the band room have also to be done, and work of a similar nature in other rooms.

TENDERS FOR BOOTHS AND DINING ROOM.

Tenders will be received up to six o'clock p. m. on Wednesday, 12th of May, 1909, for refreshment booths for the season on the steamers Otonabee, Monarch, Water Lily and Manita, and for the dining room on the steamer Otonabee. This will be a favourable opportunity for a good, hustling caterer, who will have the full privileges as above on the Company's boats for the season, and will also be required to board the crews of the boats. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted. For full particulars apply at the offices of the Company, Times Building, Hunter St. W. H. Robertson, President. 3d-105

FRUIT AND FISH NEWS FROM HARRY BRADSHAW'S STORE

Starts His Third Year in Business With a Growing Patronage.

Mr. Harry Bradshaw began this week his third year in business with brighter prospects than ever, thanks to his numerous customers, whose numbers are growing larger each year. He wishes to announce that he will have a nice shipment of early strawberries on Saturday. Pineapples are coming in fast because of the hot weather down south. The cool weather in Canada, however, will make them cheap until about the end of May, so that now is the time to lay in a good stock for preserving.

Mr. Bradshaw has also made arrangements to handle fish on a large scale this season. He has contracted with an independent fisherman for daily supplies of trout and whitefish, of just the right size, fresh from Lake Superior, as soon as caught. 2d-107

POST CARD COLUMN.

Editor Post Card Column:

Peterborough, May 6, 1909.

Sir,—If you consider the subject of interest kindly say what are the qualifications for citizenship in Peterborough, and also what is the meaning of a Poll Tax? I may say some of the city officials are anxious whether my dog has a tax. It is not resident in Canada twelve months yet, but has had two tags, one dollar each. Perhaps, seeing that the citizens of Peterborough are so anxious to get their money, those indebted to me might "pay up." How many dollars do you think?

REHEARSAL FOR CHORAL FESTIVAL

The second rehearsal for the choral festival to be held in St. John's Church on May 19th, was held in the schoolroom last evening.

There was a good attendance of choristers despite the thunderstorm.

To sing the "Hallelujah" chorus is by no means an easy task, but at the rehearsal last night without orchestra, the singers put in splendid work.

The next rehearsal with orchestra will be held on Sunday night, after Evensong. Mr. Edward Barton, bass, of Toronto, was in the city on Wednesday and he will sing the solo parts in Stainers' "Daughter of Iairus"; also "Honour and Arms," with orchestra from the Oratorio "Samson." The score of the music, also the standard orchestral accompaniments, are all on hand from Novello & Co., of New York, and all will be ready for the 19th.

The conductor, Mr. R. J. Devey, heartily thanks the many friends of the choristers who have signified their approval of the arduous but pleasing work they are engaged in producing. Complete programmes will be issued shortly.

My big lots and small Houses just suit wise wage earners for Homes or the most profitable place for their savings. Men should not forget the high rents they were compelled to pay for poor houses a short time ago, and they may rest assured that similar conditions will soon return. In many cases the Rent you are paying will buy you a Home of your own. Interested parties tell you my lots are to far out. Did you ever hear of any person dying because he had to walk half a mile twice a day? Ask your Doctor. If you would like to be your own land lord go and see my Lots, then with five dollars in your pocket, come and see me, the rest will be easy

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I wrote to her some time ago I was a very sick woman, suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the female organs, and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend this medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and think they are fine."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, Lindsay, Ontario.

We cannot understand why women will take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, without first trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

TWO BOYS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING BOLT

One Is Killed and One Injured by Lightning at Woodstock.

WERE RUNNING TO SHELTER

James Merrigold Is Instantly Killed and Edgar Knight Is Seriously Hurt—Boys Were Students at Woodstock College — Foot Bridge Wrecked at Fort William—Chatham Library Damaged.

Woodstock, May 7.—In an electrical storm of no great magnitude, save for the one fatal bolt that passed over Woodstock shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, James Merrigold, aged fourteen, son of Mr. Robt. Merrigold, a hotelkeeper in Hamilton, and formerly of this city, was instantly killed and Edgar Knight of Burk's Falls was dangerous injured, but is expected to recover. Both were students at Woodstock College, and it was under a tree on the campus that they were struck.

Several boys were running to escape the storm and just as they neared the door of the college the unfortunate lads were stricken down.

Bridge Wrecked.

Fort William, May 7.—An electrical storm, accompanied by strong wind, struck the city early yesterday morning, increasing until about 10 o'clock, when it began to abate. At 9.30 the C.P.R. footbridge, connecting the depot with the dock and freight sheds, was carried away. The yards, which at this point are of considerable width, were filled with cars, on which the wrecked footbridge fell.

Public Library Struck.

Chatham, May 7.—A terrific electrical storm passed over Chatham and surrounding district on Wednesday night, doing much damage. The dome of Chatham's public library was splintered by lightning, tearing a chasm seven feet long and one foot wide.

$25,000 for Peace.

Chicago, May 7.—The first material fruit of the National Peace Conference which closed here Wednesday night is a fund of $25,000 donated to Northwestern University by John P. Lindgren, Swedish consul to Chicago and cashier of the State Bank of Chicago, to be utilized for founding a permanent series of lectures and to secure the annual payment of prizes for essays upon the questions of international peace and interdenominational religious harmony.

A second gift of $25,000 additional to the same institution to found a chair of Scandinavian literature also was announced by Mr. Lindgren.

Exonerated of Murder.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 7.—Two sensational killing episodes were ended here yesterday when the grand jury ordered the release of Miss Jessie Brown and R. A. Humphreys.

Miss Brown shot and killed Earp P. Adams, her sweetheart, following the announcement of Adams' engagement to another woman

Humphreys shot and killed both his 16-year-old wife and Thos. McManus when he found the two together in his home. The mother of Mrs. Humphreys committed suicide because of grief over her daughter's death.

Found Glasses With Foam.

Brantford, May 7.—At the Police Court yesterday R. D. Campbell proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, was fined $75 and costs by Magistrate Livingstone for selling liquor last Sunday afternoon. The police made a visit to the hotel. In proceeding upstairs they met the bartender coming down. The latter on seeing them retraced his steps, closely followed by the constables, who found a number of empty bottles in an upper room. There were also two glasses still with foam on them.

Dock Hands Strike.

Owen Sound, May 7.—The truckers and laborers employed at the C.P.R. docks went out on strike yesterday afternoon. They are being paid 15 cents an hour, and are asking 17 1-2 and 20 cents an hour.

The Assiniboia is expected to arrive to-day from Fort William, when the strikers may make a demonstration if any attempt made to unload her by strikebreakers.

Too Many Holidays.

St. Petersburg, May 7.—Contending that Russia suffers from too many holidays the Council of Empire has entrusted to a special commission a bill which would eliminate 25 of the annual holidays.

There are at present 91 public holidays in Russia, including Sundays, the celebration of which is declared to involve an annual expense of a billion dollars. Many of the holidays fall upon the season of work in the fields and it is said that this is one reason why agriculturists are so backward in this country.

Will Give $50,000 to Picture Fund.

London, May 7.—Lewis Harcourt has promised the Government a contribution of $50,000 provided the public will subscribe the balance of the sum required for the purchase of the famous Holbein portrait of Christiana of Denmark. This portrait has been a loan from the Duke of Norfolk to the National Gallery for 36 years, but an option has been granted for its sale for $350,000.

Emperors to Meet.

St. Petersburg, May 7.—The Novoe Vremya yesterday declared that Emperor Ferdinand of Bulgaria is expected in St. Petersburg this month to take part in the dedication of a monument to Alexander III., and to thank Emperor Nicholas personally for being the first sovereign to recognize Bulgarian independence.

Red Cross Incorporated.

Ottawa, May 7.—The private bills committee of the House of Commons yesterday morning reported the bill incorporating the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Independent Lines May Be Installed In Stations.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Railway Commission yesterday handed out a very important judgment defining a general rule under which independent or other telephone companies may be allowed to install their lines in railway stations without regard to the fact that such are already served by the lines of another company.

The question has long been agitated, the railways, most of them served by the Bell Co., opposing the independent lines being admitted. The judgment is a win for the independents.

The application came from the People's Telephone Co. of Sherbrooke, and Caledon, Ont., Telephone Co., for orders compelling the railways to permit them to place their telephones in the stations already served by the Bell Co.

In the judgment presented by Assistant Chief Commissioner Scott, reference is made to the power of the board to grant such an order without reference to any exclusive privilege given by the railway to another company.

The general principle is laid down that if a telephone company's instruments are in general use in the district surrounding the station, and if it would be of substantial convenience to the public having business with the railway, while not unduly oppressive to the latter, the applications should be granted subject to an agreement, the general form of which is prescribed.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Three alienists testified at Flushing yesterday that Capt. Hains was insane when he slew Annis.

The French Government has bid defiance to the labor unions that are trying to force its hand.

Governor Harmon of Sandwich jail has been sentenced to ten days in his own prison by Judge Smith for contempt.

Geo. Atkinson was acquitted on one charge of forgery at Levis, Que., and it is probable that the other charges will be dropped.

Lieut. Calderara, who was operating one of the Wright aeroplanes at Rome, fell with his machine yesterday and was injured.

James Boyle was yesterday found guilty of kidnapping Willie Whitla. His counsel entered a plea of nolo contendere, or a refusal to offer evidence. Mrs. Boyle was then brought to trial.

Among additions to the prizes of Bisley is the Standard of the Empire, confined to entrants from overseas. A shield and 21 pounds will be given the highest scorer in the Jubilee King's Prize.

At the annual meeting of the Colonial and Continental Church Society it was stated that one hundred sums of $250 and upwards had been contributed for prairie churches in the northwest of Canada.

M. Gilbert, a retired merchant of Paris, whose declining years have been made miserable by speeding automobiles, has bequeathed his entire fortune to churches in certain French cities for masses for the repose of the souls of the victims of the "diabolical machines which have pained my last days.

This Threat a Boy's Joke.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 7.—The police yesterday discovered that the writer of the letters to Max Apt threatening to kidnap his eight-year-old son Albert and blow up his house unless the father paid a ransom of $10,000 was a 14-year-old boy, a schoolmate of little Albert's 13-year-old cousin. The boy said it was a joke.

Carnegie's Gift.

Lexington, Ky., May 6.—President W. G. Frost of Berea College, announced yesterday that the great industrial school for negroes had been established near Shelbyville, Ky., and the erection of buildings would be begun in a short time. He gave the names of the largest individual contributors to the movement as Andrew Carnegie, $200,000; Mrs. Russell Sage, New York, $25,000; Mr. Henry Pickering, Boston, $25,000.

Ottawa Masons Plan Temple.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Masonic order has purchased a site adjacent to the Y.M.C.A. building on Metcalfe street, and will erect thereon a big temple to cost in the neighborhood of $50,000.

The plans are already under way and the building will be one of the most handsome in the city. Owing to a number of unexpired leases on the buildings now on the site work on the temple cannot start until next spring.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, May 7.—Industrial issues lead by U. S. Steels, Amal. Copper and Smelters were the feature of a strong broad market during the forenoon. Copper rose nearly 2, Smelters 1 and Steels 1 on heavy transactions. Later on Reading was again brought out and advanced two and the Gould shares became active and strong with sharp gains in Mo. Pac., Wabashes and Teras Pacific. The leading rails wer quiet and firm. C. & O. was boosted to a new high record. Although an unfavourable government crop was expected at 1 p.m., the bulls paid no attention in their efforts to put the market up. Heavy profit-taking was noticed again but the market seemed to absorb this very well. If this market stands up under a bad crop report it will be wonderful, but the bulls have things so strongly in their grip that they may do almost anything. At noon the market was strong and at the high of the day so far.

Government crop report to-day at one o'clock.

Senate still greatly divided on tariff discussion.

Demand for copper steadily improving.

Upward trend steel market continues.

Price of steel bars advance 1 dollar a ton.

American in London irregular but Harrimans strong.

Conspicuous strength in all copper stocks in London.

Rumoured Lead combination denied.

Ex-dividend to-day: Steel preferred 1¾ per cent.

Toronto—Firmness in Crown Reserve and La Rose wer the chief features of a rather quiet Cobalt market this morning

Baring says: Can add nothing to former advices except to keep long of shorts. Especially like S. P.

Town Topics: Crop report to-day may cause temporary setback but expect best kind of support and advise purchases on setbacks.

Joseph: Bull Smelters. Take on U. P. for yurns. Follow Coppers upward. Get long of some St. Paul.

B. & O. is in market for 4,000 steel cars and heavy contract for steel rails. Harriman roads will soon place orders for steel rails, estimated amount to be above 50,000 tons.

Grain News

Chicago, May 7.—Although Liverpool cables were ⅝d. to 1⅛d. lower wheat opened but a shade under last night and soon regained the loss. Bull leaders were good buyers and offered support on all weak places early. About noon a fierce drive was made at July wheat carried it down over 3 cents and caused weakness in the entire grain market. Corn and oats about a cent lower with wheat.

DANGER OF CANOEING

The Boston "Post" declares that the canoe is the most dangerous craft known to civilization, which it assurerly is if one is not skilled in the management of it. The whole secret lies in the centre of gravity, and safety can only be had by sitting quietly on the bottom of the canoe. The "Post" offers the following suggestions to canoeists or those who contemplate canoeing:

It is an act of premeditated murder either to tip the canoe wilfully or to bend over and pick a flower.

It is suicide and manslaughter combined to change places in a canoe.

It is an act of insanity to go out in a canoe, either on salt water or on fresh water, when the wind is blowing or a storm threatens.

Another suggestion may be added to these, namely, never go out in a canoe unless you can swim, and never take any one for a ride unless he or she is able to swim. Even to know how to swim is not always a guarantee against accident, but natatorial skill inspires confidence, and confidence in a canoe makes for safety.

MRS. SIDER, James Street, Hamilton, Ont., says: "I have felt miserable for five years; my liver was all out of order, my skin was dry and hot, I hardly knew what it was to be without a headache; headache powders would relieve me just for a short time. I was advised to try Fig Pills, and my, what a change. My whole life is different; I am strong and healthy; Fig Pills cured me. I gladly allow you to tell others through the press. Astronomical Questions Were Answered By Rev. Dr. Marsh

This Interesting Meeting Deserved Large Attendance Last Night—Practical Topics Discussed—The Importance of Locating the North Pole.

NUMBER OF NEW SLIDES.

The meeting of the Astronomical Society last night in the Collegiate Institute was fairly well attended in spite of the fact that the weather was anything but agreeable. The practical value of the discussions warranted a record attendance, but apparently the science of the heavens appeals only to the members, who, in point of zeal, make up for the deficiency of the rest of the citizens. It was an instructive discourse on various subjects, given by Rev. Dr. Marsh, and illustrated by lantern slides, which were in charge of Mr. H. O. Fiske. A set of questions had been arranged and were explained by Dr. Marsh. One was the importance of the finding of the poles.

Among the reasons advanced was that the whole magnetic chart was involved. The atmospheric currents, also, could never be solved until the poles had been reached.

If we could reach the poles it would give us a better idea of the earth's rotation. While the earth is apparently rotating with uniform velocity, still this great problem cannot be solved until the poles have been reached. We could get a better idea of the earth's revolution if we were permitted to find the poles.

We are aware that the earth was not always in a fit condition for man to live upon. There must have been a time when it was prepared for him, and a portion must have been prepared before some other part of it. If an iron mass, molten, were revolved it would cool first at its two poles. If we could get at the poles there would be considerable light thrown upon anthropology and biology.

To a certain extent the mathematical curves of the earth are in our imagination and if either of the poles could be found these curves would be known and completed, and the shape of the earth at the poles would also be determined for a certainty. That is it would be proven whether the earth was an exact globe or as is believed is flat at the poles.

Changes in Latitude.

Regrding the change of the latitude of a place, Peterborough' latitude is 44 deg 17 min. Latitude is our distance in degrees from the pole or equator. Practically it is always the same, but examined to a nicety and there is a variation. Owing to the motion of the earth there is a slight "wabble" in the polar axis, and the physical pole varies slightly, about 50 feet, and there is the same difference here.

The next question was when the sun spots would be most numerous again. The maximum sun spot period occurs every eleven years. The last time was in 1904. Therefore the maximum period will occur in 1915. Regarding the effect of sun spots on the weather, Dr. Marsh stated that he considered there was no effect. So far as investigation has shown it has been found that the effect is nil.

The earliest trace of Halley's comet as far as Dr. Marsh could ascertain, was in 689 A.D.. A slide was shown displaying the fact when last seen, in 1835, its form had been changed. It should be seen again very nicely in October. It can be seen every 75 years. The last total eclipse seen in Canada was in 1905. There will be a total eclipse of the sun next year, on June 17th. It will be total in the far north. Ontario will see the next total eclipse in January, 1925.

An Awful Force.

The question of the force necessary to hurl a ball of iron completely away from the earth was discussed. It was stated that it would have to be thrown far enough so that the attraction of some oher body would be greater than that of the earth. The nearest body is the moon, and as it is much smaller than the earth it would have to go very close to the moon before its attracting influence would be felt. It was shown that the initial velocity would have to be enormous, and would also depend upon the mass of the object.

In conclusion a number of new slides were shown and were explained by Mr. H. B. Collier.

POWER COMMITTEE WILL TAKE UP SEYMOUR CO.'S PROPOSITION

Was Discussed Last Night and a Representative of the Campbellford Concern Will be Asked to Meet the Committee.

MORE POWER FOR CITY.

At a meeting of the Power Committee of the City Council last night, the proposition of the Seymour Power Company of Canada to supply power to the city was taken up and it was decided to have a representative of the company meet the committee in the near future to go into the matter.

Chairman Alderman McIntyre opened the meeting by reading the letter from the Seymour Electric Power Co., asking for the privilege of doing business in this city. The company is now erectng a 400 h.p. house and want to start the construction of their lines to this city.

Alderman Bradburn said that in his opinion the first thing to decide was whether it would be advisable to give the company a franchise to use the city streets. To have them build a conduit would cost too much money He thought it would be better to have them sell their power to some other company in the city, but if the city was to give them a franchise to use the streets he wanted to know upon what terms it could be granted.

Alderman Gillespie asked if anything had been done yet towards bringing in other powers by the city. It would be necessary for the city to have a pole line.

Alderman Hicks stated that as it appeared to him the best thing to do was for the chairman to interview the company and arrange with them at what price they would seel power at and how much money they could supply.

It was moved by Alderman Hicks that the Water Commissioners be asked to meet this committee as to how much power can be developed at the waterworks dam and delivered to the city and at what price on the switch board and to the consumer. Carried.

Moved by Alderman Bradburn that the chairman write the Seymour Electric Power Company of Campbellford, to send a representative here to discuss the question with the committee. This was seconded by Alderman Phelan and was carried.

Boys Cut Clothes From Line And Had To Pay For Them In Court

Two boys appeared before the magistrate at the police court this morning, charged with pulling clothes off a line in the yard of a resident on Dalhousie street, on Tuesday evening last. The boys pleaded not guilty but afterwards stated that when they were running through the yard they ran into the line and hurt hemselves. This made them mad, they said, and in their anger, pulled the clothes down.

The woman of the house produced a table cloth, a pillow case and an apron, all of which were badly torn. His Worship thought that the woman should be compensated for her trouble and the fathers of the boys offered to pay her. When aswed as to the amount she was fair, she said five dollars. The magistrate told her that it was too much, the police court, he said, was not the place to make money. He rewarded her three dollars which was paid her before she left the room.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

The session of the Sunday School Convention yesterday afternoon, was opened by Rev. Mr. Henderson leading in the devotional exercises.

The subject of Missions in the Sunday School was discussed by Rev. G. A. McLennan. The Sunday School should be looked upon as a part of the church and provision for its maintenance should be made by the church so that the whole of the contributions of the school should be devoted to missionary and benevolent purposes.

The school should train the children early to take an interest in missions. This can only be done by first giving information as to conditions in the mission fields. When the Sunday School does its duty it will not then be difficult to find those who not only take a deep interest in missions, but are informed on the conditions prevailing and of the work being done. Young people will begin to see that this is a work for which they are fitted and to which they are called. The importance of this lies in the fact that the children are early given that knowledge and interest that will make them not only the working missionaries but those who at home have such a loving interest in missions that as make possible the carrying on of the work abroad. Some definite missionary object should be placed before the school so as to provide a living link between the school and the mission field.

There should be in the school a number of missionary charts, and there should be in the library a missionary department. Books like those that are published by the Students' Volunteer Movement are helpful.

Children from their earliest years should be taught to give some of their savings for the cause of missions. This has a tendency to excite interest in the parents. The girls and the women are the ones who have been interested, because they have been informed, and have kept up their interest. If the children, both boys and girls, can be taught in youth to take an interest in this work, there will be no need of special movements for the purpose of rousing the men to a sense of their duty.

The relationship of the Denominational and Interdenominational Sunday School work.

Mr. J. A. Jackson, B.A., General Secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association, led in the discussion of this question. There are those who believe that interdenominational association has completed its work and ought to retire from the field. Is this so? The interdenominational organization does not organize schools, or legislate in regard to the work of the schools. It strives to provide uniform lessons, promulgate the best methods of teaching, arranges for the best and most advanced plans for teacher training, and organizes instructive and inspiring conventions. Illustrations were given as to the work of organizing classes and other work for the denominations in bible classes and teacher training work. The organisation is supplementary to the denominational work. In the work of pioneering, for instance, the great Bible class movement, the nondenominational organizations have taken the lead and made subsequent progress possible.

The Sunday School Teacher and His Work.

This was the subject of an address by Rev. H. R. Trumpour. The teacher holds the key to the Sunday School situation. The speaker first wished to speak a word of encouragement to the teacher. Boys are not religious, or appreciative. Often the home is not behind the school. The attractions of the world compete keenly with the Sunday School. The church and the Sunday School, if they degenerate into places of entertainment can only be second class. Teachers lack training and equipment. Yet Sunday School teachers are sowing seeds of which no man can see the fruitage. The work is the Lord's. The work and the opportunity is the greatest of any age of the world's history.

Simple requirements for a Successful Teacher: Regularity, Punctuality, Preparation.

Make use of all the means at your disposal. Bad boys should be reported rather than let them break the heart of the teacher. It is of immense value to cultivate relationship with the boys and girls outside the school in every way possible.

The address was on the the whole inspiring and very helpful.

Reported Scarcity Of Potatoes Has Not Been Experienced Here

While the situation has not been experienced here it is learned that the potato crop in many places may run short before the next crop relieves the conditions which are reported to exist. It has been rumoured that the prices in outside towns have gone up now that the supply has been found to be diminishing. There has been no material change here and the supply has been plentiful, in fact they have been shipped from this district. The market price has been about 90 cents, and of late has shown no variation. At the beginning of the winter season the grocers secured a good supply and up to the present the farmers have not sold very much of their stock. It is therefore expected that there is a plentiful supply throughout the country.

ALD. GILLESPIE STRONGLY SUPPORTS THE PROPOSITION OF PURITY WARE, LIMITED

Ald. Geo. A. Gillespie is a strong supporter of the proposition to assist the Purity Ware Company to establish a branch of their business in Peterborough and speaks most enthusiastically of the measure.

"As chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee of the City Council, and as a citizen and business man I strongly recommend to the citizens of Peterborough the acceptance of the Purity Ware, Limited, proposition," he said yesterday. "I have followed the matter very closely from the beginning and the more I think of it, and the more thoroughly I investigate it, the more convinced I am that the city is getting an exceptionally good thing. I would like the people to go into this thing carefully. In the first place what is it costing the city in actual cash? There is the site of ten acres for $3,000, a mere bagatelle. It's the cheapest piece of property which has been purchased around the city for years. Then there is that loan of $50,000. Here is the beauty of that portion of the agreement. The company pays 4 per cent. interest on that loan from the start. The city can at the present time sell its debentures at 4½ per cent. par. That leaves only one-half of one per cent. for the city to pay, or in cash $250 per year. As the summer advances and the time draws near for debentures to be sold, there is every reason to believe that they can be successfully floated at 4 per cent. In which case the city does not pay a dollar, and it leaves only the cost of the site, $3,000, for the city to put up. Can anyone ask for a better proposition, so far as the city is concerned?

"I understand the promoters have already got practically all their stock, $100,000 worth, sold. Peterborough people will not be asked to subscribe for one share. Then the company furnishes its own fire protection, waterworks and sewer. It will cost the city nothing for these. So you might say that all Peterborough is really doing is furnishing a free site and making a loan, or which in this case is practically guaranteeing the bonds. It arrives at the same result.

"I would like to see the by-law carried by a large majority."

The Conservatives End Pugsley Attack With a Fizzle.

CATCH LIBERALS UNAWARES

Hon. Mr. Foster Fails to Reply to Mr. Turgeon and Question Is Put on Crothers' Resolution While the Government's Supporters Are Away—Endorsement of Minister Carries by 27 Votes.

Ottawa, May 7.—The so-called impeachment of Hon. Wm. Pugsley terminated ignominiously yesterday afternoon, the Opposition suddenly throwing down their arms and beating a hasty and undignified retreat. Rather than continue the fight to a finish and so avail themselves of the opportunity of the fullest discussion of the issue, which they themselves had raised, Mr. Borden and his following chose to take advantage of the temporary absence of a large number of Liberal members, who had not anticipated an end until late at night, to spring a division in the hope of reducing the Government's majority. The move succeeded, for, having received no notice of the Opposition's intention, and being caught off their guard, the Liberal Whips were unable to muster anything like the full strength of the party, and the Opposition amendment was defeated by the comparatively small majority of 27. It was shortly after 5 o'clock that the unexpected happened. Practically the whole day had been occupied by Mr. Crocket in an attempt to minimize the effect of Dr. Pugsley's magnificent defence.

Mr. Crocket spent the whole afternoon levelling all manner of charges at the Minister of Public Works, and after Mr. Turgeon replied to him there was a lull.

All looked for Mr. Foster to go on with his expected speech in reply to Mr. Turgeon. Mr. Foster did not, and in the embarrassing silence that followed some one shouted "Question."

The vote was then taken.

Four Ministers were absent: Hon. Sydney Fisher, Sir Frederick Borden, Hon. Charles Murphy and Hon. J. Bureau.

Mr. Emmerson and Mr. Todd, two New Brunswick members, were also out of their places.

"He made a statement that was false and knew at the time that it was false," was a comment made by Mr. Crockett in the afternoon in reference to Mr. Pugsley's statement to the New Brunswick Legislature that $180,000 had been paid for the Central Railway.

Referring to the evidence of Geo. McAvity, Mr. Crocket read the statement that there was not a meeting of directors since he became president, Mr. [illegible] had managed the whole business.

Most serious of all charges, said Crocket, was that $39,000 had been misappropriated out of the $180,000, which the province was to pay for the railway, a charge "to which there is absolutely no answer." This charge, said Crocket, if established, should be sufficient to put Mr. Pugsley out of the Government.

"I ask you if any more serious charge could be made against a public man? It charges misappropriation of money." Crocket went for his proofs to the record of Pugsley's evidence, saying, "If the commission erred at all, it was on the side of leniency."

Mr. Crocket concluded his speech at 4.30 o'clock.

Mr. Turgeon of Gloucester spoke of the respect in which he held Judge Landry, but felt compelled to dissent from the findings of the commission. He said there had been two attacks this session by the Opposition upon Mr. Pugsley, but it was impossible to damage the reputation of the Minister of Public Works, who was held in high esteem all over the country.

The evening session was occupied by the estimates of the Department of Agriculture.

In the Upper House yesterday Senator Davis moved the second reading of his bill respecting the incorporation of railway companies. The bill proposed, he said, to do away with the incorporation of railways by Parliament and giving the work to a state department on recommendations from the Railway Commission. He did not expect the bill would pass this session, and anticipated that it would be amended with improvement before it did pass.

His bill would discourage charter mongers and would save the time Parliament had been giving to gentlemen who were after charters, not to build but to sell. In the past nine years Parliament had granted 116 railway charters outside of those given to three big companies, the C.P.R., Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern, and there was authority to build 57,862 miles, and of that only 465 miles had been built, and that had been done by only fifteen companies.

A WOMAN'S BACK WAS NOT MADE TO ACHE.

Thousands of Women Suffer Untold Misery Every Day With Aching Backs That Really Have No Business To Ache.

Under ordinary conditions it ought to be strong and ready to bear the burdens of life.

It is hard to do housework with an aching back. Backaches come from sick kidneys, and what a lot of trouble sick kidneys cause.

But they can't help it. If more work is put on them than they can stand it is not to be wondered that they get out of order.

Backache is simply a warning from the kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney trouble.

SEVERE PAINS IN BACK.

KIMBALL GOES FREE.

Judge Lets Police Chief Off But Warns Constables.

Chatham, May 7.—E. J. Kimball, the Leamington ex-policeman, who on July 28 last shot and killed W. J. Healey while he was escaping arrest, was let off on suspended sentence.

In addressing the prisoner Judge Teetzel said there was certainly negligence in the handling of the gun, and while no one thought that he intended to kill the man, he did not use proper precaution in using his revolver.

It may have been discharged accidentally, but the jury had taken the ground that he was guilty of manslaughter.

The prisoner, however, had gone through the worry of two trials, and for the offence committed there was no doubt he had been sufficiently punished for his mistake.

The constables throughout the country, however, should take a lesson from this trial to be very careful in the use of firearms. There was altogether too much carelessness on the part of constables in using guns, and many of them are too eager to pull their guns, shoot, and otherwise show their authority.

The judge dwelt upon the excellent character of the prisoner. Even after the shooting in Tilbury a large representation of people were present from Leamington at the trial to testify as to his former good character, and this was a big point in his favor.

Kimball will not have to appear to have his suspended sentence removed unless he is called upon. The sentence is meant more as a warning.

Killed on Track.

Guelph, May 7.—Run down by a C.P.R. passenger train about a mile from the village of Belwood, Mrs. George Elliott, an aged widow, was instantly killed.

She was 75 years of age and lived alone about a mile from the village, into which she was walking along the track, when she was killed. She got clear of the track, according to the engineer, and then in her bewilderment, caused by fright, she jumped back on to the track again just as the engine reached her. She was thrown quite a distance.

David Keating was yesterday sentenced by Magistrate Saunders to two months for indecent assault on a young domestic in the home of Sheriff Allan.

Lost Life In Prairie Fire.

Moosejaw, Sask., May 7.—Theodore Bruning, aged 38, who came from Minto, N.D., less than a year ago, and who was farming south of here on a large scale, having two sections of land, proved a victim of prairie fire, which swept that district early this week, losing his life in a gallant effort to save his neighbor's stock and house. He lived about 35 miles southwest of Moosejaw in the district being rapidly settled with Americans, and when the fire started Bruning left his own place, which was well protected by fireguards, and went over to his neighbor's homestead.

Settlers throughout that district suffered heavily, losing stock, lumber and homesteads.

Presbyterian W.F.M.S.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Presbyterian W.F.M.S. yesterday decided to meet next year in Chatham. Officers were re-elected: Pres., Mrs. Shortreed, Toronto; vice-pres., Mrs. McLaren, Mrs. Telfer, Mrs. A. Jaffray, Mrs. G. H. Robinson, Mrs. J. C. Robertson; recording secretary, Miss E. C. Clark; corresponding secretary, Miss Martin; treasurer, Miss George; editor Tidings, Mrs. McGillivray; mission band secretary, Miss B. McMurchy; home secretary, Miss M. Reed; foreign secretaries, Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Henderson; secretary publication, Miss Parsons; Northwest Indian work, Miss A. M. Craig; British Columbia, Mrs. C. Clark.

Shoots Wife and Self.

New York, May 7.—Following a quarrel in their flat in East 96th street, S. Spelaner, a brewery worker, yesterday shot and killed his wife and then put a bullet in his own brain, dying instantly. Two young children of the couple were in the house. Neighbors heard the quarreling and saw Mrs. Spelaner come to the window. After a few seconds she was violently pulled away and then two shots were heard. The two bodies were found in the kitchen and on the table was a sealed letter, which was taken by the police.

British Soldier's Suicide.

New York, May 7.—Enquiries concerning the identity of Geo. P. Armstrong, who was found dead in his cottage in East Rutherford, N.J., a suicide from gas, indicate that he was formerly a captain in the British Royal Artillery, and had won a medal for gallantry for service under Gordon in the Soudan, and has carried himself off with credit in India. His suicide followed the departure of his bride for New York Friday evening.

REV. CANON WELCH IS RETURNING HOME

Widely Known Toronto Clergyman Leaves St. James.

GETS LIVING IN ENGLAND

Rector of St. James' Cathedral Came to Canada In 1885 and Was Made Provost and Vice-Chancellor of Trinity — Successor May Be Either Bishop Reeves or Rev. Patterson Smythe, Montreal.

Toronto, May 7.—Rev. Canon Welch has been offered by the Bishop of Wakefield the living of Wakefield parish church, which is also the cathedral of the diocese. Canon Welch has accepted the appointment and will shortly resign the rectorship of St. James' cathedral here.

He will be dean, canon and rector at Wakefield, and will have two associate canons.

The announcement that Rev. Canon Welch had accepted the appointment to Wakefield has aroused considerable curiosity as to the selection which the Bishop of Toronto will make as his successor. Two names mentioned yesterday were Rev. Patterson Smythe of St. George's church, Montreal and Bishop Reeves.

Canon Welch became rector of St. James' Cathedral Dec. 1, 1900 and resigns to return to England to be near his aged father in his declining years.

Canon Welch is rural dean of Toronto and sub-dean of St. Alban's Cathedral; chaplain of the Governor-General's Bodyguard, and past chaplain of St. George's Society. He is a son of Rev. Andrew Welch, and was educated at King's College, London, and Cambridge University. He graduated with honors in arts and theology. In 1884, when in his 24th year, he became curate of St. Paul's, Haggerston. In 1886 he became domestic chaplain to Bishop Lightfoot of Durham. On the latter's death he became vicar of Ven. Bede's Church, Gateshead.

In 1895 Canon Welch came to Canada and in November of that year was installed provost and vice-chancellor of Trinity College, receiving the degree of D.C.L.

Must Give Equal Rates.

Ottawa, May 7.—The Railway Commission yesterday granted an application by The Times Publishing Co. of London, Eng., with Canadian head office at the City of Ottawa, for an order directing the C.P.R. Co.'s telegraph, the Great Northwestern Telegraph Co. of Canada and the Western Union Telegraph Co. to transmit press messages to the Marconi wireless station at Glace Bay, at the same rate as is charged to other points along the Atlantic coast of Canada.

This One Five Years.

Stratford, May 7.—Aloysius Guerin was sentenced to five years in Kingston Penitentiary yesterday by Justice Riddell, following upon the conviction of the prisoner by the jury on the charge of manslaughter of Alex. Sutherland of East Zorra. The judge intimated that he did not believe Guerin intended that the man should die through his neglect and this, coupled with the fact that Guerin was under the influence of liquor, led him to lighten the sentence.

Still Cool In West.

Winnipeg, May 7.—The weather turned cool again, but conditions everywhere are perfectly suited for seeding and farmers have made more real progress during the present week in the spring wheat districts, than in all the previous weeks, of unsettled weather. Another week will see the bulk of the wheat in the ground.

Babe's Body In River.

Berlin, Ont., May 7.—The body of a lifeless new-born child was found by two men along the Grand River bank at Bridgeport yesterday afternoon. By appearances the babe had been thrown in the river shortly after birth. An inquest was ordered by Coroner Honsberger.

Big Fire at Bracebridge.

Bracebridge, May 7.—Fire broke out in Ecclestone's hardware store at 6.30 o'clock yesterday morning, doing considerable damage to the stock, which was valued at $25,000; insurance of $14,000 was carried. Mr. Ecclestone left for California the night before.

Folloing were the scores at twenty birds:

J. D. Collins, 14; C. James, 11; H. Routley, 16; C. Wood, 14; L. Hall, 13; A. O. Meyers, 11.

HOAGLAND AND HARRISON OFF FOR MILWAUKEE'S BIG WALK

Will Start in the Seven-Day Walk Which Commences on Monday Night---Both Men are in the Best of Shape and Should do Well in the Contest.

Jim Harrison, the well-known local long distance walker, left on the 4:48 C.P.R. train, this afternoon for Milwaukee, where he will be a starter in the big seven-day walk which commences in the Brewing City on Monday night. He is accompanied by W. A. Hoagland, who has been visiting in town for the last couple of days, and who will also start in the Milwaukee grind. Harrison is in fine shape, although he has had very little opportunity of training, and is confident of getting into the money, although he knows that he is up against a classy field. Blake, Slater, and other men who walked here last spring are among the starters as well as a number of younger men who have the reputation of being veritable speed marvels. All these men will be in Peterborough for the local walk which commences May 24, and from here it looks like a big week, that week.

KELLY AND DALY MEET IN BROCK ST. RINK NEXT WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The date has been settled for the ten-round bout between Tommy Daly of Toronto, and Jimmy Kelly, of Buffalo, and the two will come together in Brock Street Rink on Wednesday night of next week. The rink is thoroughly dry onw, and should prove an ideal place for the bout which will be about as lively an affair with the padded mits as it has ever been the fortune of local fight fans to witness. Peterborough followers of the game know Daly pretty well as a clever two-handed boxer, fast on his feet, and with a wicked punch that has laid low a good many ring artists. The fans who saw the Burns-Kelly bout know that the Buffalo boy is good. Judging him from that "go" he is just as clever and as aggressive as Kelly, and he looked as if he too, had a knockout hit away that he could use if necessary. It will be a real fight all the way, and the crowd will get a run for their money.

THIRD BODY MAY BE FORMED TO SETTLE THE ATHLETIC WAR

Montreal, May 6.—The joint conferences of the Federation and the C. A. A. U. were held yesterday simultaneously in Montreal, at the M. A. A. A. club house, and at Toronto, at the St. Charles Cafe.

In neither case was anything given out for the press.

At both meetings the propositions, whatever they may be, of the delegates who attended the joint conference in Toronto a few weeks ago were considered and were offered for further consideration by the respectiv bodies.

Except that peace is practically assured no news can be gathered from either side.

But it would not be hard to read between the lines.

There are three possibilities.

First that the M. A. A. A. may leave the Federation and join the C. A. A. U. as has already been suggested.

Secondly that the C. A. A. U. may undertake the governing of track athleics leaving the Federation to control team games.

Thirdly there may be an understanding between the two bodies that may eventually lead to the formation composed of clubs at present forming the C.A.A.U. and Federation.

The bone of contention, as has been already stated time and again is the legalization of professionalism in lacrosse and hockey, and by legalization is meant that it is no offence against amateurism for an amateur player to compete against the professional in team games or play with the professional in team games.

The rumor that the M. A. A. A. contemplated deserting to the C. A. A. U. can be nailed down at once as a rumor according to some of the men who are in a position to know best.

The second alternative mentioned above is not looked on with favour in Toronto.

The formation of a third governing body will probably be the solution of the difficulty.

The next development in the peace negotiations will be the calling of another meeting of both sides at which the decisions arrived at by both sides last night will be made known.

ANOTHER ENTRY FOR LOCAL WALK HAS BEEN RECEIVED

Peterborough will have three representatives in the six-day walk to commence here on May 24th. Jim Harrison and W. Spencely are two of the men who will do their share to uphold this city's athletic prowess and a third entry has just come to light. This morning John Blatchford signified his intention of being a starter and will commence training at once. He is well advanced in years, but has no superfluous flesh, and looks like a walker all right. This is his first race, although he has done quite a bit of walking outside and may surprise the talent when he gets under way. He will start training in Brock Street Rink next week, and promises to give a good account of himself when the big walk commences on the evening of the holiday.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

Joe Kelley's Toronto braves got away to a good start on their home series yesterday by trimming the Baltimore Orioles handily by 3 runs to 1. The Birds never had a look in, mainly due to the fact that Mr Rudolph, the youthful, but accomplished box artist of the Leafs, had his "spitter" working over time, and three hits were all that the hardy bastmen who work for Manager Dunn, could accomplish with the stick. And then, too, the Kelleyites wanted to show that they were some fielders, too, and threw in two lightning-fast double plays for good luck. Torontos got eight hits, of which Mahling and Houser contributed two each. Kid Mahling scored all three runs for Toronto. Doc Adkins, Baltimore's favourite son, was on the slab for the birds, but Toronto hit him opportunely.

Casey Smiled, Too.

Meanwhile Jimmy Casey was demonstrating to the frenzied Montreal fans on his first appearance at home that he had collected an assortment of ball experts that are all to the approach. Winters, who was discarded by Detroit because he had the reputation of a "hard luck," had Newark's goat for fair, and Iron Man McGinnity's Sailors, with the owner himself on the slab, were beaten 9 to 1. The Royals scored an even half dozen in the opening act, and after that were on Comfort Avenue for the rest of the afternoon, while the fans made Atwater Park resound with cries of "Vive La Casey."

Jersey City Down Again.

The Jersey Skeeters went under once more, and are now backed into second place. They hooked up with Buffalo yesterday, and the Bisons shut them out one to nothing after a pitchers' battle, between Kissinger and Doc Manser, in which the Buffalo Rube had the best of the argument, allowing but three hits. It was a well-played game, and always interesting.

Bronchos First.

Rochester gave Berger a gilt-edged support, and as a result the Bronchos beat Providence 6 to 1, and climbed into the front seat of the championship chariot. Rochester hammered Hardy out of the picture before two men had been retired in the first innings.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

In the National League the Giants took a double-header from Boston after two hard-fought games, the first by 2 to 1., and the second 1 to 0, in twelve innings. Wiltz, who pitched the first game for New York, was very effective after the first innings, while McGraw's men won by bunching hits on Ferguson in the fifth, coupled with a base on balls and an error. In the second game Bugs Raymond was in grand form, holding Boston to seven hits. McCarthy, his opponent was wild, but was very effective with men on bases. A wild throw to the plate by Sweeney was responsible for the one run of the game. New York made 10 errors in the two games.

Pirates on Rampage.

Pittsburg's winning streak keeps up. The Pirates had to go eleven innings to beat St. Louis yesterday, but they did the trick in the end. They had the game well in hand at one stage, as Leifield had the Cardinals at his mercy throughout until the ninth, when he weakened, and St. Louis scored three runs, tying up the game. Camnitz finished out. Beebe and Sallee worked for the losers. Pittsbourg won, 6-5.

Cubs Beat Reds.

The Chicago Cubs are coming back to their own. They took another from Cincinnati yesterday, thanks to some very amateurish errors in the first innings, which, with a couple of timely hits, resulted in four runs. They did not scor again, but the Reds got but two with three singles and a two-bagger, a double play saving things for the Cubs. Kroh, for Chicago, and Campbell and Rowan, for Cincinnati, were the pitchers.

Covaleski Got His.

Brooklyn's busy sluggers stopped Covaleski, Philadelphia's Polish phenom yesterday, driving the Giant-Killer out of the box in the fourth, when they scored five runs on three hits, a pass and four errors. Ritchie who finished out, was more effective. McIntyre held the Phillies to four hits.

Detroit Won.

In the American League Detroit beat St. Louis 7 to 3, knocking Jack Powell out of the box in the fifth, and handing it to Bailey, who succeeded him, in the ninth. The Tigers had twelve hits. Mullin has still to be beaten, and held the Browns to seven safeties yesterday. The New York Highlanders suffered their first defeat of the season on the home grounds. Steele and Cicotte worked grounds yesterday. Boston beat them four to three, in a fine exhibition. Steele and Cicotte worked for New York.

Scott Was Beaten.

Cleveland beat Chicago 2 to 1 yesterday, trimming Pitcher Scott, Chicago's new recruit. A single by Stovall, an error by Craveth, and Lajoie's timely hit, in the ninth, won the game for the Naps. The Wichita boy, however, held the Blues to six hits, while the Sox got but three off Berger

Senators Lost.

The Athletics trimmed Washington 2 to 1 yesterday, Bender pitching against Groom. It was a pitchers' battle all the way.

WILL EXTEND TELEPHONE LINE FROM APSLEY TO LASSWADE

Annual Meeting of the Apsley Telephone Co. Held on Wednesday Evening Last—Company Has Now 16 Miles of Line.

DIRECTORS ELECTED.

The first general annual meeting of the Apsley Telephone Company was held on Wednesday evening last, in the village town hall, when there were thirty-five of the shareholders present.

Mr. Duncan Brown occupied the chair, and the by-laws for the regulation of the affairs of the Company were passed and confirmed. The company has now sixteen miles of line with four public stations. Apsley is connected with Mount Julian, and during the coming summer the line will be extended to Lasswade. There have been twelve applications made from private individuals to have the telephones placed in their homes.

A resolution was passed by the shareholders of Apsley Telephone Co., Limited, expressing their deep appreciation and gratitude for the valuable assistance rendered by the Honourable Mr. Stratton, M.P., both financially and otherwise, in the promotion and organisation of this Company, giving to residents of Burleigh and Anstruther, and Chandos, telephone communication with the rest of the Province.

Election of Officers.

The directors of the company are Messrs. B. Coons, Geo. A. Bullied, Alex. McColl, John Hales, Z. Tucker, D. Brown, and W. S. Davidson.

Mr. Brown was elected President, Mr. W. S. Davidson, Secretary-Treasurer, and Mr. T. G. Eastland, Auditor.

Telescopes Will Be Set Up On Central Park For Astronomers

The Astronomical Association will during the next month or six weeks arrange to have an interesting evening for its members and their friends.

Last night it was announced that one or more outdoor meetings will be held during the summer in which a number of telescopes and other instruments will be used, permitting the members and their friends viewing many of these interesting celestial obpects directly. It is quite celesly that the grounds adjoining the Collegiate will be selected for this purpose as being most central. And as Dr. Marsh has kindly consented to set up his large telescope for the occasion the affair should prove of general interest.

At least three instruments will be in use and the members and their friends will have ample opportunity for obtaining a close view of fair Luna and some of the constellations and also to gaze along the milky way. The Peterborough branch of the society is doing all in its power to interest the citizens in astronomy and this means should give many the opportunity which they have longed for of seeing the heavens through fairly good instruments.

Oil Company Will Test Near Here Before Trying At Lindsay

Lindsay, May 6.—In conversation with Mr. R. H. Leary, who is interested with Mr. Dettman, of Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, in boring for gas and oil in Victoria and Peterborough counties, Mr. Leary stated that the reason the company had not started operations in Peterborough, was because of the fact that they were waiting the arrival of an expert and a boring machine which was being used in the western oil fields.

He further stated that everything was in good shape and that the company meant business. Just as soon as they make a test near Peterborough they would investigate conditions at Lindsay, and if the oil was secured at Peterborough and not at Lindsay it would be piped here, or vice versa.

Mr. Leary further stated that they had no trouble in finally securing the block of land required at Peterborough, and even the farmers are now anxious to see the work commenced. He did not think they would have any difficulty in securing the land around Lindsay.

STRIKING CASE OF FRENZIED FINANCE

Grocer Keeps His Account Out of a $5 Bill Sent to Him for Change.

A woman in this city recently sent a five dollar bill to a local grocery store to be changed. It did not belong to her, she merely sending it as a favour to another lady. The grocer, it is said, thinking it belonged to the first woman, took $1.20 out of it for a bill he claimed she owed but which she said she didn't. The woman consulted the magistrate about the matter and she was informed that the grocer had on that occasion, no right whatever to take the money whether she owed it or not.

WEDDING BELLS

BURRELL—SHERWOOD

A quiet wedding was celebrated at St. Andrew's Manse last night at 8:30 o'clock, when Miss Eva A. Sherwood, daughter of Mr. J. H. Sherwood, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. W. A. Burrell. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. G. Potter, in the presence of a few of the friends of the bride and groom, who were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Burrell will reside on Bethune street.

THE BELL OF THE BURG

Famous the bells of Shandon town,
The bell in the Strasburg tower,
The carillon peal of Notre Dame
That so sweetly chimes the hour.

Ponderously great the shattered bell
In old Moscow's open square
Where the pius bow, their beads to tell
And devoutly offer prayer.

The Angelus ringing in many lands,
At sunrise and high noonday,
Sounds from the hill where the old Church stands
Like the Muezzins' call to pray.

Magic the spell cast o'er the friar,
O'er the monk in cloistered cell,
As heavenward there his thoughts aspire
At sound of the Vesper bell.

Forsooth at sound of the curfew bell
Each urchin was hidden from sight;
But lo! his gloomy forebodings dispel—
"The curfew'll not ring to-night."

Fiercer the Bell our city boasts
Sounding oft with a clangerous din—
When the "Laurier Tariff" he roasts
'Tis a tocsin clavercin.

Starting as those false alarms
Which firemen will ever regard;
And they'll fly at the midnight call; to arms,
Rung in from the fourteenth ward.

Then ring your rhymes a passing knell—
The Muse would all such crimes beshrew'
She'd send them where lost poets dwell—
"Ring out the false! Ring in the true!"

A Priest On Special Duty Assaulted By Saloonist

Tables Turned on the "Bar-Keep"----"Held Up" by His Own Weapon and Arrested.

The Examiner has received from Rev. Father Patrick J. Murphy, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Henrietta, Texas, a newspaper clipping, from the Henrietta Independent, relating how the reverend father nearly suffered martyrdom for his zeal in a good cause; and bringing out one phase of the anti-saloon fight in Texas. Rev. Father Murphy is an old Peterborough boy, Mrs. Patrick Murphy, 172 Lake street, being his mother. His many friends in the city will not be unpleasantly surprised to note his development as an exponent of muscular Christianity — an extemporaneous "gun-fighter"—with an aplomb and readiness of resource which would make him a creditable member of "the finest," the Northwest Mounted Police. His action as recorded in the subjoined report, and the round turn with which the "bar-keep" was brought up, happily illustrates the Shakespearian incident of "an engineer hoist with his own petard." The newspaper clipping reads thus:

Late Tuesday afternoon, Ed. Harrison, bartender at the St. Elmo bar, struck Father Murphy, pastor of the Catholic Church, on the head with a revolver, knocking him to the sidewalk. Harrison struck the priest with such force that the pistol fell from his hand and Father Murphy pluickly picked it up and covered Harrison with it, made him put up his hand and marched him to the Et. Elmo hotel office where he left him and went in search of an officer. He found Marshall Schwend and delivered the gun to him. Harrison was taken in custody and released on bond. The difficulty occurred near the European hotel.

The trouble grew out of the recent change of priests in the church, Father Murphy is a teetotlor and a prohibitionist, and it is said he has set about to reform some of the policies of his predecessor. Mrs. Harrison was the organist at the church, and because her husband is a saloon keper Father Murphy requested her to resign and selected another organist. The deposition of his wife angered Harrison and the chance meeting on the street afforded him an opportunity to even matters.

Two complaints, one for carrying a pistol and one for aggravated assault, have been filed against Harrison. He has given bond in each.

When Men Were Sold In The West Indies As If They Were Furniture On Plantation

An Interesting Reference to a Copy of a Paper Printed in Jamaica, 1817—Small Rewards for Return of Runaways—Slaves Were Sold Cheaply.

RECOLLECTION OF THE PAST

A Jamaica, British, West Indies, journal repulishing "Some Sketches of Old Times," reprints the following from the "Cornwall Chronicle of 1817. The reference to runaway slaves suggests the American notes of Charles Dickens. It seems strange to the readers of to-day to read matters like those reproduced below appearing in a paper published in British territory. But we must remember that we had black slaves in Canada as late as 1829 when the parliament at old Niagara led the Empire in passing an act abolishing slavery. Two or three years later the Imperial Parliament abolished slavery in all Bristish possession, and the system in Jamaica, of course, came under the ban and made impossible the publication of such advertisements as those given below.

Clarendon Workhouse,
Jan. 11, 1817.

Made their escape in the afternoon, from the Botswain, the following negroes, viz.:

George, sentenced to the Workhouse for six months, belonging to a Mr. George Archer, he is a worthless negro.

James Williams, a mulatto creole, 5 ft. 5 in. He pretended to be free, but now says he belongs to Mr. Cuthbert, St. Thomas-in-the-East, or Belvilere Estate.

Duke, a Moco, 5 ft. 2 in., marks of a flogging on his back, says he belongs to Mr. Gordon, Lemon Hall Estate, St. John's.

Harry, a Moco, 5 ft. 4 in., marked RB reversed, on the right shoulder, and his right leg fractured near the knee, says he belongs to Mr. John Tulloch, Spanish Town.

A reward of thirteen shillings and fourpence will be paid for the first negro, and a Pistole will be paid for the remaining three on lodging them in any Gaol or Workhouse or bringing them to the subscriber.

It is strongly suspected that the Boatswain let them go intentionally, as he has likewise absconded. He is a brown man, about twenty years of age, named Richard. A reward of six dollars is hereby offered for the apprehension of the said boatswain.

Foster Predicts Cool Wave From Sunday Until Thursday 13th

Weekly Weather Bulletin Reviews the Near Future and What May be Expected—Rise in Temperature After the 13th.

TWO WEEKS OF STORMS.

Washington, D.C., May 8.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross conintent 7 to 11, warm wave 6 to 10, cool wave 9 to 13. This disturbance was expected to cause a great rise in temperatures and to inaugurate a two weeks period of storms of greater than usual force. The cool wave is expected to inaugurate the blackberry winter and carry frosts further south than is usual for the season.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about 11, cross Pacific slope by close of 12, great central valleys 13 to 15, eastern states 16. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about 11, great central valleys 13, eastern states 15. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about 14, great central valleys 16, eastern states 18.

This disturbance will be notable because of its unusually cool weather. The seven days centering on May 16 are expected to average cooler than any other seven days of the week. A great fall in temperature is expected from May 10 to 16 and during the fall the heaviest rains of the month are expected. But not much rain is expected from the lakes westward, nor in the Ohio valleys, nor in the lower Mississippi valleys. Most rain of May is expected from the lakes eastward, in Florida, in southwestern Texas and within 100 miles of St. Joseph, Missouri.

I am of the opinion that we are to have rather poor crop weather during May as a general average, and that if the weather has any control, prices of farm and garden products will be firm throughout the month.

Fourth disturbance of May will reach Pacific coast about 16, cross Pacific slope by close of 17, great central valleys 18 to 20, eastern states 21. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about 16, great central valleys 18, eastern states 20. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about 19, great central valleys 21, eastern states 23. This disturbance will bring a recovery from the unusually cool period and will bring the most severe storms of the month. While the chances are very largely against these dangerous storms visiting your locality the best way is to be on the lookout for them. I am not yet ready to undertake the location of dangerous storms. I do definitely locate nine-tenths of the weather changes I forecast but dangerous storms are exceedingly difficult to locate. I advise all to be on guard for bad storms May 19 to 21 and near those dates. Not much rain with this disturbance and not much during balance of May.

ANTHONY HOPE

Copyright, 1908, Anthony Hope Hawkins

The night broke toward dawn, the horizon grew gray. Lukovitch drew in his rein, and the party fell to a gentle trot. Their journey was almost done. Presently they halted for a few minutes, while Lukovitch and Peter Vassip held a consultation. Then they jogged on again in the same order, save that now Sophy and Dunstanbury rode with Lukovitch at the head of the party. In another half hour, the heavens lightening yet more, they could discern the double row of low trees which marked at irregular intervals the course of the river across the plain. At the same moment a row of squat buildings rose in murky white between them and the river bank. Lukovitch pointed to it with his hand.

"There we are, madame," he said. "That's the farmhouse at the right end and the barn at the left, within a hundred yards of the lock. There's our shelter till the colonel comes."

"What of the farmer?" asked Dunstanbury.

"We shall catch him in his bed—him and his wife," said Lukovitch. "There's only the pair of them. They keep the lock and have a few acres of pasture land to eke out their living. They'll give us no trouble. If they do, we can lock them in and turn the key. Then we can lie quiet in the barn. With a bit of close packing it'll take us all. Peter Vassip and I will be lock keepers if anything comes by. We know the work. Eh, Peter?"

"Aye, captain, and the man—Peter's his name, too, by the way—must give us something to hide our sheepskins."

Sophy turned to Dunstanbury. She was smiling now.

"It sounds very simple, doesn't it?" she asked.

"Then we watch our chance for a dash — when the colonel's off his guard," Lukovitch went on.

"But if he won't oblige us in that way?" asked Dunstanbury, with a laugh.

"Then he shall have the reward of his virtue in a better fight for the guns," said Lukovitch. "Now, lads, ready! Listen! I'm going forward with Peter Vassip here and four more. We'll secure the man and his wife. There might be a servant girl on the premises, too, perhaps. When you hear my whistle, the rest of you will follow. You'll take command, my lord?" He turned to Sophy. "Madame, will you come with me or stay here?"

"I'll follow with Lord Dunstanbury," she said. "We ought all to be in the barn before it's light?"

"Surely! A barge might come up or down the river, you see, and it wouldn't do for the men on board to see anybody but Vassip and me, who are to be the lock keepers."

He and Peter Vassip rode off with their party of four, and the rest waited in a field a couple of hundred yards from the barn. A dip in the ground afforded fair cover. Some of the men began to dismount, but Dunstanbury stopped them. "It's just that one never knows," he said, "and it's better to be on your horse than off it in case any trouble does come, you know."

"There oughtn't to be much trouble with the lock keeper and his wife or even with the servant girl," said Basil Williamson.

"Girls can make a difference sometimes," Sophy said, with a smile. "I did once in the Street of the Fountain over in Slavna there."

Dunstanbury's precaution was amply justified, for, to their astonishment, the next instant a shot rang through the air and the moment after a loud cry. A riderless horse galloped wildly past them. The sheepskin rug across the saddle marked it as belonging to a Volsenian.

"By heaven, have they got there before us?" whispered Dunstanbury.

"I hope so. We shan't have to wait," said Sophy.

But they did wait there a moment. Then came a confused noise from the long, low barn. Then a clatter of hoofs and Lukovitch was with them again, but his comrades were four men now, not five.

"Hush! Silence! Keep cover!" he panted breathlessly. "Stafnitz is here already. At least there are men in the barn and horses tethered outside, and the barges are on the river, just above the lock. The sentry saw us. He challenged and fired, and one of us dropped. It must be Stafnitz!"

Stafnitz it was. General Stenovics had failed to allow for the respect which his colleague entertained for his abilities. If Stenovics expected him back at Slavna with his guns on the Sunday, Stafnitz was quite clear that he had better arrive on Saturday. To this end he had strained every nerve. The stream was with him, flowing strong, but the wind was contrary. His barges had not made very good progress. He had pressed the horses of his company into service on the towing path. Stenovics had not thought of that. His rest at Rapska had been only long enough to give his men and beasts an hour's rest and food and drink. To his pride and exultation he had reached the lock at Miklevni at nightfall on Friday, almost exactly at the hour when Sophy's expedition set out on its ride to intercept him. Men and horses might be weary now; Stafnitz could afford to be indifferent to that. He could give them a good rest and yet, starting at 7 the next morning, be in Slavna with them and the guns in the course of the afternoon. There might be nothing wrong, of course, but it was no harm to forestall any close and clever calculation of the general's.

A clatter of hoofs and Lukovitch was with them again.

"The sentry?" whispered Dunstanbury.

"I had to cut him down. Shall we be at them, my lord?"

"No, not yet. They're in the barn, aren't they?"

"Yes. Don't you hear them? Listen! That's the door opened. Shall we charge?"

"No, no; not yet. They'd retreat inside, and it would be the devil then. They'd have the pull of us. Wait for them to come out. They must send to look for the sentry. Tell the men to lean right down in their saddles—close down—close! Then the ground covers us. And now—silence till I give the word!"

Silence fell again for a few moments. They were waiting for a movement from Stafnitz's men in the barn. Only Dunstanbury, bareheaded, risked a look over the hillock which protected them from view.

A single man had come out of the barn and was looking about him for the sentry who had fired. He seemed to suspect no other presence. Stafnitz must have been caught in a sound nap this time.

The searcher found his man and dropped on his knees by him for a moment. Then he rose and ran hurriedly toward the barn, crying, "Colonel, colonel!"

"Now!" whispered impetuous Lukovitch.

But Dunstanbury pressed him down again, saying, "Not yet, not yet."

Sophy laid her hand on his arm. "Half of us to the barges," she said.

In their eagerness for the fight Lukovitch and Dunstanbury had forgotten the main object of it. But the guns were what monseigneur would have thought of first—what Stafnitz must first think of, too—the center of contest and the guerdon of victory.

Chapter Thirty-two

FOR the history of this night from the enemy's side thanks are due to the memory and to the unabashed courtesy of Lieutenant Rastatz, who came alive, if not with a whole skin, out of the encounter and lived to reach middle age under a new regime so unappreciative of his services that it cashiered him for getting drunk within a year from this date. He ended his days as a billiard marker at the Golden Lion, a fact agreeable to poetic justice, but not otherwise material. While occupying that capacity he was always ready to open his mouth to talk provided he were afforded also a better reason for opening it.

Stafnitz and his men felt that their hard work was done. They were within touch of Slavna, and they had no reason, as they supposed, to fear any attack. The colonel had indulged them in something approaching to a carouse. Songs had been sung and speeches made; congratulations were freely offered to the colonel; allusions were thrown out not too carefully veiled to the predicament in which Stenovics found himself. Hard work, a good supper and plentiful wine had their effect. Save the sentries all were asleep at 10 o'clock and game to sleep till the reveille sounded at 6.

Their presence was a surprise to their assailants, who had perhaps approached in too rash a confidence that they were first on the ground. But the greater surprise befell those who had now to defend the barges and the guns. When the man who had found the dead sentry ran back and told his tale, all of them, from Stafnitz downward, conceived that the attack must come from Stenovics. None thought of Sophy and her Volsenians. There they were packed in the barn, separated from their horses and with their carbines laid aside. The carbines were easily caught up, the horses not so easily reached, supposing an active, skillful enemy at hand outside.

For themselves their position was good to stand a siege. But Stafnitz could not afford that. His mind flew where Sophy's had. Throughout and on both sides the guns were the factor which dominated the tactics of the fight. It was no use for Stafnitz to stay snug in the barn while the enemy overpowered the barges (supposing they tried fight), disposed of the sentry stationed on each deck and captured the guns. Let the assailant carry them off and the colonel's game was up. Whoever the foe was, the fight was for the guns and for one other thing no doubt, for the colonel's life.

"We felt in the deuce of a mess," Rastatz related, "for we didn't know how many they were, and we couldn't see one of them. The colonel walked out of the barn cool as a cucumber and looked and listened. He called to me to go with him, and so I did, keeping as much behind his back as possible. Nothing was to be seen, nothing to be heard. He pointed to the rising ground opposite. 'That must hide them,' he said. Back he went and called the first half company. 'You follow me in single file out of the barn and round to the back of it. Let there be a foot between each of you, room enough to miss. When once you get in rear of the barn, make for the barges. Never mind the horses. The second half company will cover the horses with their fire. Rastatz, see my detachment round and then follow. We'll leave the sergeant major in command here. Now, quick, follow me!'

"Out he went, and the men began to follow in their order. I had to stand in the doorway and regulate the distance between man and man. I hadn't been there two seconds before a dozen heads came over the hill and a dozen rifles cracked. Luckily the colonel was just round the corner. Down went the heads again, but they'd bagged two of our fellows. I shouted to more to come out and at the same time ordered the sergeant major to send a file forward to answer the fire. Up came the heads again, and they bagged three more. Our fellows blazed away in reply, but they'd dropped too quickly. I don't think we got one.

"Well, we didn't mind so much about keeping our exact distances after that, and I wouldn't swear that the whole fifty of us faced the fire. It was devilish disconcerting, you know, but in a few minutes thirty or five and thirty of us got round the side of the barn somehow and for the moment out of harm's way. We heard the fire going on still in front, but only in a desultory way. They weren't trying to rush us, and I don't think we had any idea of rushing them. For all we knew they might be 200 or they might be a dozen. At any rate, with the advantage of position they were enough to bottle our men up in the barn for the moment at all events."

This account makes what had happened pretty plain. Half of Sophy's force had been left to hold the enemy or as many of them as possible in the barn. They had dismounted and, well covered by the hill, could make good practice without much danger to themselves. Lukovitch was in command of this section of the little troop. Sophy, Dunstanbury and Peter Vassip, also on foot (the horses' hoofs would have betrayed them), were stealing round, intent on getting between the barges and any men whom Stafnitz tried to place in position for their defense. After leaving men for the containing party and three to look after the horses this detachment was no more than a dozen strong. But they had started before Stafnitz's men had got out of the barn and despite the smaller distance the latter had to traverse could make a good race of it for the barges. They had all kept together, too, while the enemy straggled round to the rear of the barn in single file. And they had one great, perhaps decisive, advantage, of whose existence Peter Vassip, their guide, was well aware.

Forty yards beyond the farm a small ditch ran down to the Krath. On the side near the farm it had a high overhanging bank, the other side being nearly level with the adjoining meadow. Thus it formed a natural trench and led straight down to where the first of the barges lay. It would have been open to an enfilade from the river, but Stafnitz had only one sentry on each barge, and these men were occupied in staring at their advancing companions and calling out to know what was the matter. As for the bargees, they had wisely declared neutrality, deeming the matter no business of theirs. Shots were not within the terms of a contract for transport. Stafnitz, not dreaming of an attack, had not reconnoitered his ground. But Lukovitch knew every inch of it (had not General Stenovics remembered that?), and so did Peter Vassip. The surprise of Praslok was to be avenged.

Rastatz takes up the tale again. His narrative has one or two touches vivid with a local color.

"When I got round to the rear of the barn I found our fellows scattered about on their bellies. The colonel was in front on his belly, with his head just raised from the ground, looking about him. I lay down, too, getting my head behind a stone which chanced to be near me. I looked about me, too, when it seemed safe. And it did seem safe at first, for we could hear nothing, and deuce a man could we see. But it wasn't very pleasant, because we knew that, sure enough, they must be pretty near us somewhere. Presently the colonel came crawling back to me. 'What do you make of it, Rastatz?' he whispered. Before I could answer we heard a brisk exchange of fire in front of the barn. 'I don't like it,' I said. 'I can't see them, and I've a notion they can see me, colonel, and that's not the pleasantest way to fight, is it?' 'Gad, you're right!' said he. 'But they won't see me any the better for a cigarette.' And then and there he lit one.

"Well, he'd just thrown away his match when a young fellow—quite a lad he was—a couple of yards from us suddenly jumped from his belly on to his knees and called out quite loud—it seemed to me he'd got a sort of panic—quite loud he called out. 'Sheepskins, sheepskins!' I jumped myself, and I saw the colonel start. But, by Jove, it was true! When you took a sniff, you could smell them. Of course I don't mean what the better class wear. You couldn't have smelled the tunic our lamented prince wore nor the one the witch decked herself out in, but you could smell a common fellow's sheepskin twenty yards off—aye, against the wind unless the wind was mighty strong.

"'Sheepskins it is!' said the colonel, with a sniff. 'Volsenians, by gad! It's Mistress Sophia, Rastatz, or some of her friends anyhow.' Then he swore worthily: 'Stenovics must have put them up to this! And where the devil are they, Rastatz?' He raised his head as he spoke and got his answer. A bullet came singing along and went right through his shako. It came from the line of the ditch. He lay down again, laughed a little and took a puff at his cigarette before he threw it away. Just then one of our sentries bellowed from the first barge, 'In the ditch, in the ditch!' 'I wish you'd spoken a bit sooner,' says the colonel, laughing again."

While this was passing on Stafnitz's side Sophy and her party were working quietly and cautiously down the course of the ditch. Under the shelter of its bank they had been able to hold a brief and hurried consultation. What they feared was that Stafnitz would make a dash for the barges. Their fire might drop half his men, but the survivors when once on board—and the barges were drawn up to the edge of the stream—would still be as numerous as themselves and would command the course of the ditch, which was at present their great resource and protection. But if they could get on board before the enemy they believed they could hold their own. The decks were covered with impedimenta of one sort or another, which would afford them cover, while any party which tried to board must expose itself to fire to a serious and probably fatal extent.

So they worked down the ditch, except two of them. Little as they could spare even two, it was judged well to leave these. Their instructions were to fire at short intervals, whether there was much chance of hitting anybody or not. Dunstanbury hoped by this trick to make Stafnitz believe that the whole detachment was stationary in the ditch thirty yards or more from the point where it joined the river. Only ten strong now and one of them a woman, they made their way toward the mouth of the ditch and toward the barges which held the prize they sought.

"Sheepskins! Sheepskins!"

But a diversion and a very effective one was soon to come from the front of the barn. Fearing that the party under Sophy and Dunstanbury might be overpowered, Lukovitch determined on a bold step, that of enticing the holders of the barn from their shelter. He directed his men to keep up a brisk fire at the door. He himself and another man, one Ossip Yensko, disregarding the risk, made a rapid dash across the line of fire from the barn for the spot where the horses were. The fire directed at the door successfully covered their daring movement. They were among the horses in a moment and hard at work cutting the bands with which they were tethered. The animals were half mad with fright, and the task was one of great danger.

But the maneuver was eminently successful. A cry of "The horses, the horses!" went up from the barn. Men appeared in the doorway. The sergeant major in command himself ran out. Half the horses were loose and stampeded along the towing path down the river. "The horses, the horses!" The defenders surged out of the barn in deadly fear of being caught there in a trap. They preferred the chances of the fire and streamed out in a disorderly throng. Lukovitch and Yensko cut loose as many more horses as they dared wait to release, then, as the defenders rushed forward, retreated, flying for their lives. Lukovitch came off with a ball in his arm; Yensko dropped, shot through the heart. The men behind the hill riddled the defenders with their fire. But now they were by their horses, such as were left of them. Nearer twenty than ten dotted the grass outside the barn door. And the survivors were demoralized. Their leader, the sergeant major, lay dead. They released the remaining horses, mounted and with one parting volley fled down the river. With a cry of triumph Lukovitch collected the remainder of his men and dashed round the side of the barn. The next moment Colonel Stafnitz found himself attacked in his rear as well as held in check from the ditch in his front.

"That was an awful disaster. There was only one survivor. Isn't that terrible?"

"Fearful. What a bore he'll be!"—Cleveland Leader.

THE FARM WELL.

From Farm and Dairy.

It should always be borne in mind that the well, wherever it be, cannot be given too much care. Wells supply water to creameries, cheese factories, the dairy farm, and the household. Water is as essential as air to the animal system, though the lack of it would not be felt so quickly. For our rural population, in the future as in the past, the well must continue, for the most part, to supply this vitalizing fluid. From wells properly located and constructed, probably no purer source of water supply can be had.

Well water is usually contaminated in two ways, by surface water, which runs directly into the well and by drainage from barnyards, cess pools or household slops. The location and the construction of the well are the prime factors in guaranteeing a wholesome water supply. Practically all bacterial life in the soil exists in the upper strata. Soil 10 or 12 feet below the surface of the earth is perfectly sterile, unless it has within it a crevice or opening so that surface drainage can run down. Advantage should be taken of this fact and the well constructed so that impurities cannot get into it from above or from the sides, for at least 10 or 12 feet from the surface. To guarantee this being done, a water tight wall should be built to below this level.

Unfortunately many of the wells constructed in olden times were located and built with but little consideration as to their future sanitary condition. The water from many of these wells is absolutely unfit for any use where animal life is concerned. The well illustrated elsewhere in this issue, and which was photographed last fall, not over 200 miles from Peterboro, by an editorial representative of Farm and Dairy, is a good example of a bad location. Many much worse than this may be seen in almost any section of the country, though we can scarcely imagine anything worse than this one, with the hog pen not 10 feet distant. The stains on the woodwork near by where the manure has been allowed to accumulate in undue quantities, further indicate the unsanitary conditions of the well.

The question naturally arises what are we to do with these badly located wells. It would seem the part of wisdom to abandon them. We can afford to take no chances on impure water where the health of human beings is at stake. In what jeopardy the lives of many are placed by the use of water from impure wells, is not fully appreciated. Water from such sources affect not only people who live on the farm but consumers as well, for we now well know that many diseases are transmitted through milk and other dairy products.

WATER IN THE FARM HOUSE.

From Farm and Dairy.

When planning farm improvements do not overlook the house. In some sections, farm homes have a reputation for their lack of conveniences. Labor saving contrivances and machinery of all kinds have been installed in other departments of the farm. The barns have been made convenient for feeding and caring for the live stock, water systems have been installed that water might be before the animals at all times. But with the house, how different! Too often it has been left until the last and its day, in some cases, is still to come.

How many farm houses have sinks? The sink means that we should have a cess pool. Such can be built at slight expense.

How many have water laid down to their cows in the stables but not to their wives in the farm kitchen? The wife is deserving of better treatment. On many farms, facilities are at hand for placing water in the house and no expenditure that one could possibly make would pay so well in comfort and in health, as placing the water directly in the house where it can be had, hot or cold, on tap.

Probably women are to blame for not having these conveniences. They should advocate their rights. An instance of securing improvements for the house was recently brought to our notice. The railway had gone through the farm and when settling the right-of-way it was necessary for the wife to sign. "John," said she, "I do not want to sign unless you give me $200." "What for?" said John. The wife replied, "You know John, I do not want it for myself. I want it for the house. You have always been going to make improvements on the house but they never get done. I want water in the house. If I do not get the money now, you will spend it on the cattle or the barns or something other than the house." Needless to say she got it. How does this question stand with you? Would a water system in your house not be one of the best investments you could make?

IMPROVEMENTS ON A WESTERN ONTARIO FARM

From Farm and Dairy.

Laidlaw & Sons, Elgin Co., Ont.

The following is a short description of our farm and outbuildings as illustrated on page seven of this issue: Our main barn was built in 1870. It was put on a concrete wall and remodelled in 1898. It is 100 feet long and 40 feet wide. It would be more roomy if it were five feet wider. This barn is entirely for cattle. We have an "L" back of the main barn that we use for straw. A manure shed is located in the basement of this part. The manure is put in the shed with a litter carrier and is taken from there to the field about once a week with the manure spreador. We also have a drive barn and horse stable 28 by 67 feet. It is roofed with galvanized iron. Our buildings are all protected by lightning rods.

We have three concrete silos. These we consider the best investment that a farmer can make. We would scarcely know how to farm without them. We put up the first concrete silo in this part of the country in 1898, since then they have become popular and many have been erected. The round silo in the foreground of the illustration is 12 x 35 feet. It has a galvanized iron roof. Everything in this roof is metal except the rafters and two circles in the top of wall to nail them to. The outside of the roof is made stationary. A metal cap fits over the centre which is six feet in diameter. This cap is removed when filling the silo to allow the men to tramp the silage well, right to the top. The cost of this silo complete was $240.

CONCRETE ON THIS FARM.

Since the photo was taken we have built a concrete block milk house. Concrete foundations and floors are under every outbuilding on the place. Concrete walks lead from the house to the other buildings. Another thing we appreciate very much is a concrete barn yard. With it, we always know where to find bottom. We put in in seven of gravel to one of cement (Portland) and put it in blocks five feet square, so that it would not crack from heaving with the frost.

As for the windmill, it is a good power for pumping but we would not advise anyone putting up a power mill. We have our stables all equipped with a water system. Water basins are installed where the cattle can get water with the chill off, whenever they want it. All our buildings are lighted with acetylene gas. It is very convenient and is the best light on the market.

We are making our fields as large as possible and replacing the rail fences that are left with wire. We always made it a point to mow all our fence corners, so the less we have the less time it takes to mow them, and time is money with us.

A HOME-MADE BROODER.

From Farm and Dairy.

C. Murray Smith, Brant Co., Ont.

A simple home-made brooder may be made by covering an ordinary stone mustard jar with a flannel and filling it with hot water night and morning. Set it down in a box large enough to accommodate your batch of chicks. Cover the whole with a piece of old blanket or other similar warm and soft material, allowing it to sag down around the jar. Let it hang down low enough to reach the backs of the chicks, as all their vital organs are close to or attached to their backs. This is quite important. Note how they will fairly lift an old hen off her feet huddling up to get their backs warmed.

Have the floor of brooder box covered with pieces of burlap, bagging, carpet or something that can be changed often. Dry sand covered with hay seed from the mow is fine for them. For out of doors of course the box will have to be covered with a board top to shed the rain and keep out the family cat and other undesirables. Be sure to leave plenty of ventilation; don't have it too stuffy; they need lots of fresh air. Keep it clean and sweet. Allow the sun to shine into every part of it as often as circumstances and weather will permit. There is no danger of explosions, fires or poisonous fumes with this brooder and with room enough in the box to get away from the jar there is no danger of overheating either.

Have a little yard or run for them to get out in. Feed and water them out in it and teach them to go into the brooder box when cold. Coax or drive them in a few times. If you can imitate the cluck of an old mother hen, it will surprise you to see how readily they will respond to the call, even motherless incubator chicks that never saw a hen.

PROSECUTED 114 FARMERS.

From Farm and Dairy.

For years it has been a temptation for some to add to the income of their dairies by the culpable practice of adding water to their milk. The introduction of the system in many factories of paying by the per cent. of butter fat contained in the milk has all but discouraged this practice among the patrons of those factories. Unfortunately a large number of factories still pay by the pooling system. Here the practice is still in evidence. In his report of instruction for 1908, Mr. G. G. Publow, chief instructor for Eastern Ontario has the following to say regarding the adulteration of milk:

The testing of milk for adulteration with water was also conducted by the instructors, 48,226 samples being tested by lactometer and Babcock tests. Of this number 129 gave indications of having been tampered with. Samples of milk from each of these herds were obtained and a thorough investigation made. There were 114 cases handed over to the official prosecutors (who were engaged by the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association), to be dealt with. Of these, 108 cases were laid before magistrates and the parties were given an opportunity to plead guilty or otherwise. Convictions were obtained in all cases except one, and fines were imposed on the convicted parties of from $5 to $50, amounting in all to $2,380.

One half of this money went to the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association and the other half to the factory in which the offense was committed. No settlements outside the court were allowed. The publicity given to these cases will have a good effect in stamping out the tendency to tamper with milk. It is to be regretted that so many farmers still persist in this work. About the only way to prevent it would be to pay for the milk according to quality. This evidently will not be done generally for some time, as only 87 cheese factories paid by test last season. So long as the pooling system continues, there will probably be no better way of dealing with the matter than the method which was adopted last year.

COLONY POULTRY HOUSES.

From Farm and Dairy.

"Much experimental work has been carried on with different designs of poultry houses at the poultry department of the O. A. C.," said Professor Graham while addressing a number of poultrymen recently in Peterboro. "One must be careful in building not to over capitalize his business. Do not put up buildings that cost too much. I have seen houses that cost $10 per bird to erect. It takes the best of birds to make such an investment pay.

"Small houses on skids are about the cheapest to erect and they give good satisfaction. It has been found that low down houses give the best results. It is a difficult matter, however, to keep such houses cool in summer and they are also difficult for an ordinary man to work in. To overcome the former objection a loft should be installed in such a way as to interfere as little as possible with the work of the attendant. Curtain houses are a long ways ahead of tight houses, but even curtains do not provide enough ventilation. Some Leghorn hens kept in a cold house last winter part of which had a screen front, began laying in January, their combs did not freeze. They produced eggs at a cost of 10 cents a dozen. Our only regret was that the winter had not been colder, when this experiment should have been more valuable.

"Do not prevent hens from eating snow. On the very coldest day throughout the winter our hens received no water. Snow was shovelled in to them instead. Some of our hens had to eat snow all winter. This year's experimental work with cold and warm houses have shown that in the cheapest and coldest of the four house in the experiments, the most eggs were produced at the least cost, in the warmest and most expensive house the least eggs were produced at the most cost. I would not have you think from this, concluded Professor Graham, "that hens will lay better in summer if you shut them up in a refrigerator closet. It is not the cold that makes the difference. It is a matter of fresh air, of ventilation. Fresh air is an absolute essential to egg production."

Bass' Barley Wine
THE KING OF TONICS
Bass & Co.
BURTON

The Ideal Drink for Run Down Conditions.

Good beer, stout and porter are excellent tonics when taken in moderation.

The difficulty with these products of hops and barley malt is that they are in constant process of fermentation and are not easily assimilated by invalids.

This fermenting process has an irritating effect on the digestive organs when they are weakened by illness or a run down condition.

Bass' Barley Wine is made from the same materials as beer, stout and porter but with fermentation removed.

In order to remove fermentation, this wine is matured in casks for years before it is bottled.

Barley is rich in proteids and grape sugar, but, when malted, these proteids are converted into peptones and parapeptones.

To make our meaning plainer, these proteids by going through the malting process are partly digested.

When barley malt, in the shape of Bass' Barley Wine is taken into the system, it is easily assimilated by the most delicate stomach.

This is due to the fact that the malting process has converted the bulk of the barley into pure grape sugar.

Grape sugar can be digested by the most delicate stomach.

Hops are tonic, useful in dyspepsia, nervous tremors and wakefulness.

The barley malt combined with the hops, with fermentation removed, makes Bass' Barley Wine the ideal tonic for all run down conditions of the system.

For nursing mothers, loss of appetite, dyspepsia, insomnia and tubercular troubles, it has no equal.

This is the finest preparation that Bass & Co., the greatest brewers in the world, produce.

Bass' Barley Wine costs 30 cents a bottle

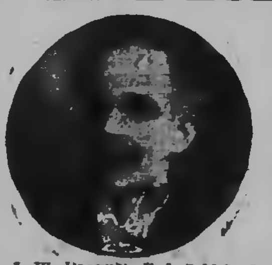
THE FARM HOUSE AS IT SHOULD BE

From Farm and Dairy.

In all experience, events continually remind us that we have only one life to live, on this earth at all events, and that we should give ourselves and families as much comfort as we can afford—comfort that we have earned a thousand times over by the exhausting toil and the privation endured in earlier days. Many have formed habits of economy that were virtues in those first hard years, but which become vices if they form a rule of living in days when the balance at the bank or the acreage of the farm keeps yearly growing.

We should not let the city people have all the good things. We can have them on the farm. There is no valid reason why we should not live in good comfortable houses with lofty rooms, and broad verandahs. Substantial furniture, good lighting, bathing and cooking appurtenances are just as essental in the farm house as anywhere. The farm homestead becomes the real home when surrounded by a garden with fruit, flowers and vegetables in plenty, cool, shady arbors, a wind mill and a water system. These things are no experiment on many of our best farms. They have been in use for years, and once experienced, they would not be done without.

The fat of the land is not too good for the man who tills it. All the graces of life are the right of the farmers' wife and daughters. Those of us who desire to keep our families wedded to the old spot must recognize the fact that the old spot must be rendered attractive by imparting to it all of the comforts and embellishments of the modern home that can be afforded.



SAFE EYE-GLASS FITTING

J. W. Browett, Ref. D.M.O., Dr. of Optics of Philadelphia, graduate of the best colleges of New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and Toronto, and for the past fifteen years has been teaching Opticians throughout the various cities and towns of the United States and Canada.

Selling eye-glasses out of a stock like scissors or thimbles is a dangerous practice that is altogether too prevalent.

There should not be the faintest doubt in the mind of any person who finds the need of wearing glasses, that they are identically, scientifically fitted to the eyes.

We offer you safe spectacle fitting. And that is the only kind you should be satisfied to accept. There is nothing on this earth dearer than a cheap pair of spectacles that you have chosen yourself, simply because you can see with them.

WOULD YOU CONVICT ON CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE?

The VETERAN'S CASE

A TRUE STORY

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

JOHN F. McINTYRE, formerly Assistant District Attorney for New York county for twelve years, prosecuting 716 cases of homicide during that period, including the Kennedy and other famous trials, says:—

"I regard circumstantial evidence as the best kind of evidence, chiefly because it does not admit of perjury. Personally, I have never known of a case of circumstantial evidence in which a man suffered the penalty for a crime of which he was afterward proved to have been innocent.

"Persons that decry circumstantial evidence do not understand it, they do not know what constitutes circumstantial evidence. A man stands in the doorway and sees me holding a revolver. It is discharged and you fall dead. Ninety-nine out of a hundred men would say that the testimony of the man in the doorway would be direct evidence. On the contrary, it would be circumstantial evidence. He could not have seen the bullet in its flight. The prosecution would have to show that the bullet was of the same calibre as the revolver, the course taken by the bullet and other circumstances.

"If the man saw me strike you with a knife that would be direct evidence, but observe the chance for perjury here. A false value would very likely be attached to his testimony and he might be lying. Circumstantial evidence deals with the tangible facts surrounding an act. And facts are not so apt to lie as individuals.

"The accused is amply protected in cases of circumstantial evidence by the provisions of the law, which say that when the circumstances point equally to guilt and to innocence the verdict must be for acquittal. There must be no shade of a chance for any other hypothesis than that of guilt."

JUST at gray dusk, when the surface of the Mississippi seemed to give more of light from its tawny, glistening stretches than the overcast sky above, a raft swung with massive precision abc· a 'urn where the bluff shelved down to a soft tinted rice field. It was the empty hour, in which sounds carry clear and the pulse and breath of open day are stilled.

A group of the crew sprawled along the side of the raft that bore toward the western bank, idly contemplative of the slowly shifting panorama. The only activity beyond the ponderous, irresistible flow of the current was the occasional, leisurely step of a steersman at the forw[illegible] or after sweeps, as he corrected the course.

Suddenly, from the field of rice, fringed with a deep bed of reeds that dwindled into the edge of the channel not a hundred feet away, the report of a firearm shattered the evening quiet with a crashing staccato note. A wisp of thin smoke trailed up from the waving tops of green, spread out in a gossamer veil and was gone. As those on the raft, intent for an explanation of the incident, watched the shore, the screen of tall water grasses parted and a canoe shot swiftly out into the river. A young man knelt near the stern, paddling with swift rapid strokes that whirled the canoe almost to the raft before he glanced up and saw it. He checked his course with a startled thrust of the paddle while one of the group hailed him.

"Kinder late fer duck, ain't it, young feller?"

The man in the canoe looked at the raftsmen with wide eyes and a face that showed white across the water. He answered after a pause, while his craft rocked and floated opposite them.

"Did—did you hear it, too?"

There were smiles about the group. The spokesman nodded approvingly.

"Not so bad for one so young," he commented. "But there ain't no game wardens on board here, supposin' there's any still loose. What we, as genuwine, dyed in the grain sportsmen, want to know is did you land it?"

"Land what?"

"How do I know? Whatever you was shootin' at. P'raps a dandelion top 'r a clay pigeon."

"I didn't do any shooting," said the canoist, with a strangely earnest expression. The raftsman's gesture denoted admiration.

"Oh, all right; you didn't then. We jess heard the sunset gun about a thousand miles off, 'r mebbe it was a bullfrog."

"No, I didn't," repeated the young man, with emphasis. "Don't you see I have no gun?"

"No more you haven't," said the man on the raft, altering his tone of banter. "That's queer."

The canoist dug his paddle and thrust on ahead of the monster island of lumber, making quick time about the next bend below. It was almost dark when the raft reached that point and those on board saw an empty river before them. The canoe had vanished.

Three days later a party of men and boys in skiffs and dugouts moved slowly up the western shore of the stream, starting from the little town about three miles below the rice field and pausing at each bayou to enter and push among the reeds. Another party kept abreast of them along the shore, spreading out so that one wing passed over the swampy, uncertain verge of the firmer ground. They occupied several hours in reaching the field, covering the intricate, thick growth expanses of river land with sedulous care.

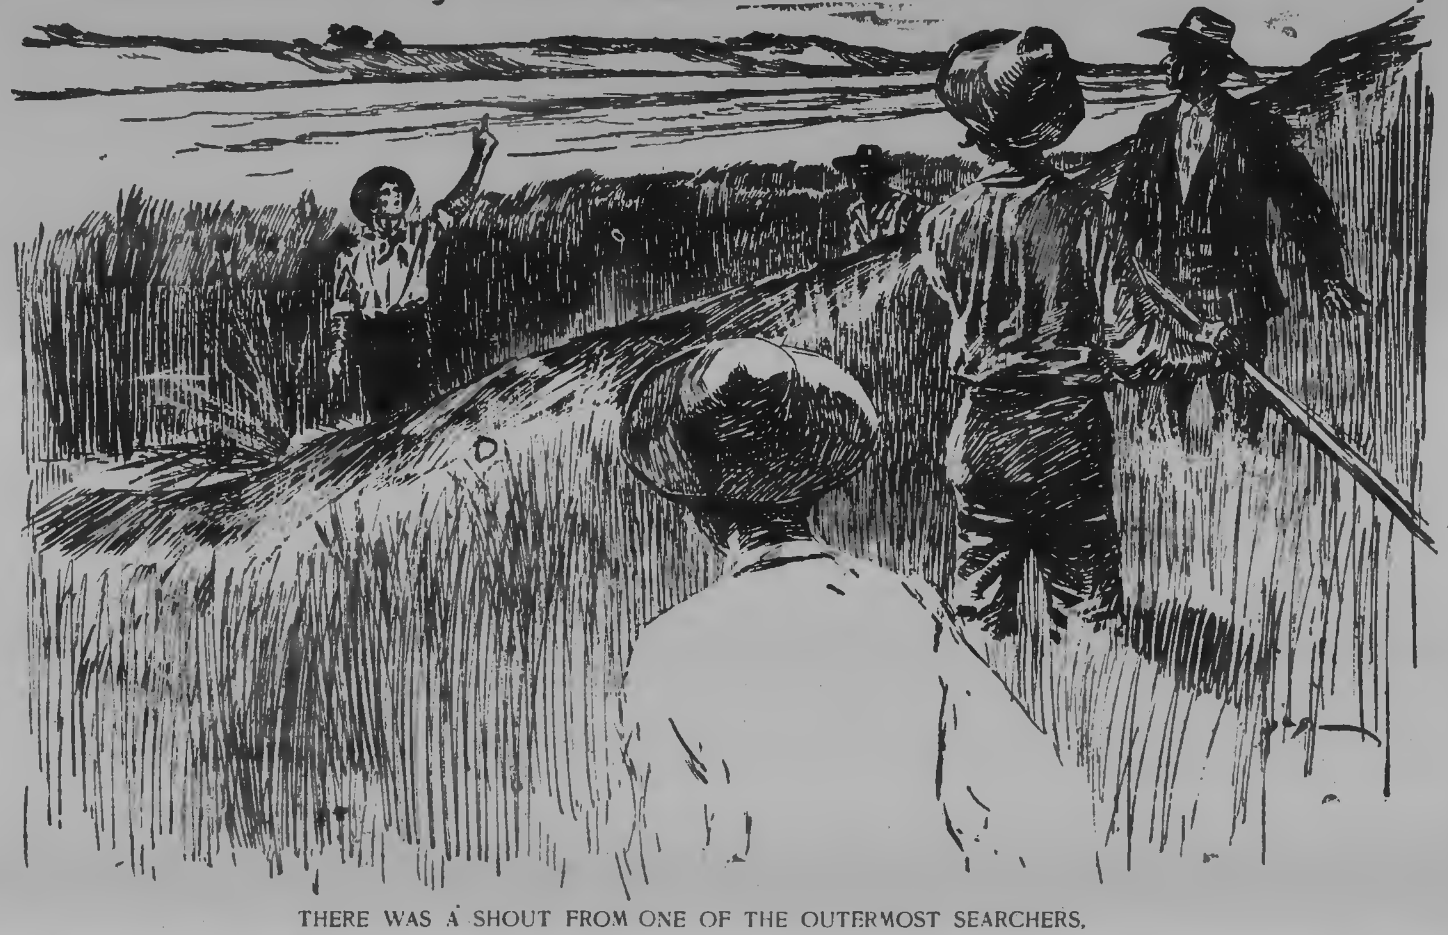
When the band on shore had gone half way through the rice field there was a shout from one of the outermost searchers that brought the others hurrying about him.

They had been looking for the body of Wilson Smith, one of the most considerable planters of the section, and they had found it. It lay half in, half out, of the water, on its face, the arms huddled across underneath. Smith had fallen away from the water toward the bank and had slipped back several feet. When they turned the body over the cause of death was apparent. There was a bullet wound in the right breast. The planter must have died instantly, it was afterward established, since the bullet had passed through his heart.

There was one man in the awe-struck, curious crowd who noted the details with a calm, understanding eye and to whom the others turned naturally for the direction of affairs. He had tacitly been allowed the command of the searching party, a concession not so far due to his training, which would have served to qualify him, nor to the powers deputed him by the authorities, as to his unstrained assumption of that position.

William Howard had been a member of the detective force in several Eastern cities and had retired after an honorable career with the esteem and high regard of all his associates. Still an active man at sixty-five, retaining his bodily vigor as he did his force of mind, he had come down the big river and purchased a small plantation with his savings, content to pass his remaining days in rural seclusion. Nothing could have been further from his thoughts during the two years of his life as a planter than that he should ever be induced to resume the tracking of criminals and the collecting of evidence. His place adjoined that of Wilson Smith, a man near his own age, whom he had learned to respect and admire in spite of his crotchets. When his wealthy neighbor had been missed he had returned without effort to the habits of former years and taken upon himself, with the consent of the Sheriff, the organizing and disposition of the search.

Under his orders the body was lifted from the ooze and placed in one of the skiffs, in which it was taken down a mile below to the landing at the plantation and thence to the old Smith homestead. The crowd gradually dispersed, its members turning back toward the town, comparing opinions on the way and bent upon spreading the news. Howard, with a negro to row his skiff, stayed in the rice field. He proceeded with his preliminary investigation.



THERE WAS A SHOUT FROM ONE OF THE OUTERMOST SEARCHERS.

The spot, as was inevitable, had been trampled somewhat by the searchers, and the old detective had little hope of discovering footprints or other traces that would aid him in the matter. In analyzing the surrounding features of ground and growth, however, he saw opportunities for devising, in some part, a working hypothesis of the manner in which Wilson Smith had come to his death.

The natural explanation of Smith's presence in the rice swamp, as it occurred to him, was that the planter had been upon one of his periodic rounds of his properties. If there were a specific reason for his visit to this place it was not immediately indicated and the investigator would have to look elsewhere for proof of it. There were no signs of a struggle, and it was plain that the body had sunk among the grasses where they were otherwise undisturbed.

To his mind this argued an ambush, a complete surprise, to which the character of the place lent every opportunity. A man concealed at the edge of the field, where the stalks rose high, need but await his victim, if he were certain of the path to be followed. Or, again, he could come close upon the other under cover of the rustling that would fill his ears as he trod away. Howard cast about for some indication of a place that might show where the murderer had lain hidden, but in this he met with no success.

Another possibility occurred to him. The river was shallow for thirty feet from the shore where the reed thicket grew. Passage through this with a boat would be a matter of some difficulty, but the skiff that had taken the body away had been forced within a few yards of where it lay. His own craft, as he proved by experiment, could be poled to a position whence, through the intervening growth, he could see the figure of his negro servant, standing where Smith probably had stood. As he dwelt upon this phase he regarded with increasing favor the theory that the murderer had accomplished his design from a small boat hidden among the rushes.

He manoeuvred from side to side, bent upon discovering, if possible, the exact angle from which the shooting had taken place, and making mental note that the physician's testimony as to the direction taken by the bullet would be of importance. With alert glance he was sweeping each object within his vision, examining it individually and in relation to those about it, with the genius for minute observation that had led him to success in many a previous pursuit. So it was, as he backed and filled in the shallow, clogged bed of water grasses, that his eye caught a sharp glitter, the quick flash of a reflection from something under the surface, like the silvered dart of a fish.

It was gone on the instant, but Howard patiently experimented with his craft until it came again. Marking its source he brought the skiff to a favorable position and raked along the slimy bottom at the point he had noted. Almost instantly his grasping fingers closed familiarly about the butt of a revolver and he stood upright, exulting in the value of the clew he had found.

It was a five shooter of modern design. Four of the chambers held undischarged cartridges. The fifth held an exploded shell. There were no evidences that it had been in the water for any length of time. For another matter, it must inevitably have sunk completely from sight in the silt had it lain there long. He had no doubt that he was holding the weapon that had been used for the murder of Wilson Smith.

Late the same afternoon the veteran detective appeared at the Smith homestead to pick up such threads of circumstance as might be found to cling about the home life of the planter, and to make himself familiar with the details of the situation on the day he went to his death. Some part of what he knew supplied him with a framework for what he learned.

Wilson Smith had lived a bachelor and alone, save for a swarm of servants, white and black. He had inherited the house and the estate, and with them a fine, crusty reserve and pride of name that kept him much to himself in the absence of congenial acquaintance. Some few friends he had, Howard having been the only one of recent acquisition, to whom he occasionally dispensed reminiscence and superior sherry of an evening. He was possessed of considerable wealth, which he valued wisely but not solely. It afforded him a real pleasure to augment the value of his lands by careful husbandry, although, as he frequently grumbled, the total result "would likely some day be squandered by some dissolute, worthless dog of an heir."

This phrase, as Howard knew, applied to John Boynton, the planter's grandnephew, whose recent career since reaching his majority gave broad grounds for uneasiness on the part of his surviving relative. It had been Howard's part to stand between the young man, whom he had last seen a year before, and Smith when the latter raged against him. Word of Boynton's doings reached the Mississippi plantation at intervals, usually in the form of a demand for money, and on these occasions the wealthy granduncle would denounce his heir in no uncertain terms and Howard, if present, would plead for him.

This he did through a certain sympathy with one absent and maligned, and in part because he knew the elder man's affections were in truth wrapped about his erring grandnephew. For the rest he knew Boynton for a weak character, but, as he conceived, free from viciousness.

Howard had not visited the Smith house for two weeks previous to its owner's disappearance, and was surprised to learn on his arrival there that Boynton was present. Dixon, who had been Smith's valet and confidential man, met the detective with this information.

"A sad blow to Mr. Boynton, Mr. Howard," was the man's first comment. "And him come back after so long."

"Boynton? Is Boynton here?"

"Full two weeks now. Since Mr. Smith was missed three days ago he's been that uneasy and despairing there was no comforting him. He's up stairs now. He heard the body had been found when one of the men came back about an hour ago."

A servant was sent up for Boynton and the young man presently appeared. Constrained greetings having been exchanged, the veteran turned to his task.

"Mr. Boynton," he said, "I should regard it as a favor if you would tell me anything of interest you may know in connection with this sad affair. I have charge of the investigation."

"I am afraid I can help you but slightly," was the reply. "My granduncle went away in the morning, three days ago. We expected him home by noontime, as usual, but he did not appear. From what I hear I can only suppose that some bandit or person who nourished a grudge against him waylaid him on his round. It is most unfortunate."

The young man was obviously nervous and ill at ease. His final word rang strangely in the ears of Howard, who regarded him keenly.

"It is unfortunate," he remarked, with a trace of irony. "May I ask if you knew of any quarrel the deceased may have had with any one before his death?"

Boynton flushed under the inquisitor's tone.

"I do not," he answered, abruptly, and left the room.

Howard turned to Dixon when the retreating footsteps had passed up the stairs.

"It's not such a hard blow as you seemed to think, Dixon," he commented. "I suppose he finds some solace in reflecting upon his accession to fortune."

"Mr. Howard," said the man earnestly, "Mr. Boynton was wrong in saying that Mr. Smith had no quarrel of late. He did have a quarrel, just the day before he was killed, and it was with his grandnephew. The master was sharp of tongue, as you know, and Mr. Boynton has no easy temper himself. There was something said about the young man's way of life and high words passed that could have been heard in the kitchen if I hadn't shut the door and stood by it."

"If you were standing by the door," said Howard, significantly, "perhaps you yourself could hear something of the conversation."

"As a matter of fact, I did hear enough to catch the drift," admitted Dixon, "and unless I am much mistaken Mr. Smith was threatening to change his will if Mr. Boynton did not alter his habits."

"Dixon," interrupted Howard, suddenly, "have you ever seen Mr. Boynton carry weapons?"

"It was his custom to go armed," was the answer. "I have had a glimpse of a pistol once or twice, but Brown, the groom, would know. He cleaned the young man's arms for him."

Brown was summoned and questioned. He knew Mr. Boynton's weapons, he said. There were two revolvers of the same pattern, forty-fours, and a Winchester. He was sure he would know them. The detective whipped a hand to his hip pocket, and, under the strong light of a hanging lamp, flicked the weapon he had found in the rushes into view.

"Was that one of the revolvers?"

Brown looked at it a second as it lay in Howard's palm.

"I could swear it, sir," he answered. "There are marks on it one couldn't forget. It belongs to Mr. Boynton."

Perhaps the pressure of his years had worn down the keen edge of the veteran's decision, perhaps the affair had developed with a rapidity that made him doubtful or he was moved to delay by his conception of Boynton's character. In any case he made here the first misstep in his calculation, bound the two servants to secrecy and returned to his home. He spent some hours in mapping out a diagramed report of the matter for his own study, as had ever been his practice. The structure of circumstances seemed impregnable. He made arrangements with the prosecutor to arrest Boynton the next morning. But when he came with an officer the young man had disappeared.

Before starting on the trail the aged detective, bitterly self-accusing for his unpardonable oversight, avoided one more error. He made a thorough search of the little room on the top floor that had been occupied by Boynton. Among other significant indications of a guilty flight that he noticed was a little heap of paper ashes in the grate. He bent over these, detaching piece from piece and studying them. He was no stranger to the fact that certain grades of heavy paper, when burned in a quick blaze, retain a degree of cohesion and show printing or writing in ink with perfect clearness. Some of the crinkly mass had been torn and he could make nothing of the words he could pick out here and there.

In one corner of the grate, curled into a cylinder, but still nearly whole and with one side intact, he found a leaf that he could lift out with care. It was a receipt and the few phrases thereon were still distinguishable.

"Received from Wilson Smith," it ran, "the sum of fifty dollars ($50) as payment in full for cotton delivered at wharf to date. MARLIN WILLIAMS."

The date attached was that upon which Smith had disappeared.

Amply provided with funds and well equipped for the work by his close connection with the police throughout the country, Howard tracked Boynton from State to State and from town to town for the best part of a month. He ran the fugitive down at last in Key West as he was about to leave for Cuba. The young man, thrown into a condition of hopeless despair by his capture, was brought back and placed in jail at the county seat to await trial.

Once more upon the ground of the crime, Howard's first step was to seek out Marlin Williams, a small grower of cotton, and question him as to the receipt. He was clear in the matter and said that on the day in question Smith had called upon him to make payment for cotton purchased for shipment. Smith was used to carry on such dealings with other planters in the neighborhood owing to the favorable position of his steamboat landing, and it was an ordinary transaction. Smith had not been accompanied by any one, he said.

In his search for persons who were in the vicinity of the rice field at the probable time of the murder Howard made extensive inquiries. Word of the shooting of Smith had travelled far up and down the river, and a week before the trial of Boynton the detective was able to add the final, crushing circumstance to the case of the prosecution.

Three raftsmen, returning northward, volunteered their testimony and told of having passed the place on the day of the killing. They described the field, the shot and the appearance of the canoist from among the reeds. Upon being confronted with Boynton they positively identified him as the man in the canoe. The fact that he had called attention to his lack of a weapon in itself counted against the accused.

The only additional point brought out at the trial was furnished by the physician who examined the body. His testimony as to the direction taken by the bullet, coupled with Howard's diagram of the scene of the murder and the position of the body when found, satisfied the jury completely. They returned a verdict of guilty after brief deliberation.

The scene at the execution was a trying one for the spectators. Boynton, who had maintained a sullen reserve throughout his trial, awoke to a sense of his position while being led to the scaffold. He broke wildly from the officers and incoherently pleaded his innocence. He was hanged at sunset.

* * * * * * *

Six months later a criminal, Gus Webber, was tried and convicted in Ohio for highway robbery with murder. In his death cell this man wrote a confession in which he declared he was the murderer of Wilson Smith. Making his way by easy stages up the Mississippi, he had stayed for some time in the neighborhood of the Smith plantation and had been led to believe the planter habitually carried a considerable sum.

The defence had stated at the trial that Boynton had lost the revolver with which the fatal shot had been fired. This was shown to be true by Webber's statement. He had found the revolver in prowling about the estate some days before the murder. He had tracked Smith from the home of Marlin Williams into the rice field and had killed him there, rifling the body and obtaining about a hundred dollars.

One sentence in Webber's confession explained Boynton's possession of the receipt. While following Smith he had seen the planter pause on a bluff and wave to some one out on the river in a canoe.

The canoist had come ashore and there was some conversation which he did not hear, after which Smith handed the other a package of papers. Supposedly the planter had intrusted his grandnephew with some small business affairs and had given him, among other things, the Williams receipt.

As to Boynton's presence in the reeds at the edge of the rice fields about an hour later no specific explanation could be advanced. It was known, however, that he was fond of paddling idly along the shores, pushing into bayous and unfrequented places in his daily trips in his canoe. He must have been within a hundred feet of his granduncle when Webber fired the shot. Surrounded as he was by the tall grasses he could not have known the portent of the sound and might easily have misjudged the direction from which it came, which would account for his dash out into the river.

His subsequent actions, his strange demeanor before the detective, his destruction of the incriminating receipt and his flight, to which such weight had been given in the series of events that went to make up the circumstantial case, were the result of his fear that he would be accused of the murder and the peculiarities of his nature. William Howard, the veteran detective, died soon after these facts were brought to light.

Cites Remarkable Case

To the Editor:—

"WOULD you convict on circumstantial evidence?"

One summer afternoon in about the year 1876 the whole countryside near Boardman, Ohio, was aroused by the discovery of an atrocious murder. Horsemen galloped through the village spreading the alarm that a girl had been strangled in the big woods to the eastward and that a strange man had been seen in the vicinity. Only a few hours had elapsed when my grandfather observed a stranger drinking at the town pump in the centre of the village. The man answered the description given by the couriers. My grandfather, who was a very large and powerful man, went over to him and, laying a hand on his shoulder, said:—"I shall have to detain you."

The stranger seemed somewhat surprised, but did not appear excited, and willingly accompanied my grandfather into the house. I have a very dim recollection of how he looked. He was a young man of good proportions and had red hair. While he had the appearance of a tramp, his manners showed good breeding, and there was some semblance of character in his face not in keeping with the brute that would commit the crime of which he was suspected.

However, the officers were notified as quickly as possible and he was taken away and lodged in the jail at Youngstown. The man steadfastly refused to tell his name or anything about himself. Believing that he came of some aristocratic family, every effort was made to discover his identity. His pictures were distributed broadcast and published in all the papers, and a wealthy woman of Canada journeyed to Youngstown, believing that the prisoner was her wayward son who had run away from home. When she saw him in his cell she was positive [illegible] was her boy and broke down completely.

At the trial his own defence was again[illegible] him. He admitted he was a tramp. He said he had fallen in with another of his kind somewhere near Youngstown and that they travelled together for a while, but separated near Poland, Ohio, which is about two miles and a half from Boardman, he taking the highway and the other wayfarer choosing a back road. Afterward they met again, he said, and exchanged shirts, then parted again and shortly afterward he was arrested. There were a number of witnesses who had seen him as they drove along the road on that summer afternoon, and some who saw the girl as she entered that part of the road which intersected the woods about half way between Poland and Boardman. Others who passed along later saw him at the other end of the stretch through the woods.

No one could be found who had seen any other tramp in that immediate vicinity, and the connecting link in the chain of circumstantial evidence was blood stains found on the prisoner's clothing when he was taken. Although the jury convicted him on the evidence, and he was executed, I have heard it said that from his demeanor every one who attended that trial believed that he was innocent. My grandfather said if he had been on that jury they never would have convicted the man. My grandfather died in 1880, and it was not until about three years ago that the truth was made known. I read one morning of a man who had hanged himself to an apple tree in his own orchard. I don't remember the name now or the place, as I was very busy at the time I saw the story, and did not stop to cut it out and the paper was mislaid. However, I recall that the man's own son cut him down, and in his pocket found the reason for his self-destruction.

In his confession he said that he chanced to meet a young man the day of the crime who had run away from his home and was tramping over the country like himself, and that they were together a few hours. After leaving his companion at Poland, he said, he had circled around and come out on the road near the big woods just as the girl was approaching. A sudden impulse seized him, he declared, and he dragged her into the woods, strangled her with a green veil she had worn, and left her dead. Soon after committing the crime his new found companion came along that way, and without arousing his suspicions he induced him to trade shirts by offering a quarter of a dollar to boot. This accomplished, he made tracks as fast as possible to parts unknown.

The thought of his crime, he declared, awakened in him the desire to lead a better life, and although he knew that the other man was being tried for the murder he had committed, he did not come forward because he did not believe that an innocent man could be convicted. When he was, however, the confession continued, the real murderer lost his nerve entirely and could not bring himself to justice. He had prospered since, married and raised a family, and in time freed his mind of the horrors which he had long suffered. One day while rummaging [illegible] in a trunk, he told about finding part of the [illegible] veil with which he had strangled his victim [illegible] strange fatality had kept and stowed away, also an old newspaper with an account of the murd[illegible] execution of his chance acquaintance for his [illegible]

LEAVE NO ROOM FOR WEEDS.

From Farm and Dairy.

It is a rule of nature to cover land, not otherwise occupied, with weeds. We frequently overlook this basic principle which must largely enter into our calculations when fighting these pests. Weeds give but little trouble in luxuriant crops. In fence corners, along the road sides, and in other waste places and in fields, where, from neglect or impoverishment of the soil, a poor crop only can be raised, and in places where winter grain, clovers or grasses have been killed out by unfavorable weather conditions, or by drowning due to lack of drainage, we find weeds flourishing in abundance. Happily for the weeds, enough of these places are available each year to propagate them. From these places nature has provided many means whereby the seeds can be distributed over wide areas. On the kind of crop we grow and our methods of cultivation will depend much of the forthcoming battle that must be waged against these natural enemies of agriculture.

In addition to the natural adaptation of weeds in caring for themselves, they are assisted by some men who contend that they can grow weeds and crops as well. This argument is frequently advanced by many when urged to rid their fields of wild mustard. Some reasons why weeds are injurious should set that misconception right. Weeds are objectionable for many reasons: They absorb soil moisture, they use plant food, they shade, crowd and choke useful plants, they increase the labor and expense of cleaning seed, they interfere with the regular rotation of crops and they offend the eye, or are, as some have rightly put it, an eyesore to good farmers. They also interfere with the use of harvesting implements. Many other evil effects of weeds might be noted. Possibly the extra twine required for binding weeds that should not be in our grain crops, the extra storage room they require in our barns, and the extra expense entailed in threshing, are not given the consideration that they merit. All arguments are against, not for, weeds.

Weeds and their eradication has become a matter of burning interest to all cultivators of the soil. The success of the war against them this coming season will depend much upon our seeding operations, our methods of cultivation and the start we give them. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," when applied to weeds. Time spent in keeping weeds off the farm and in keeping others from seeding will not compare with the time required to eradicate the weeds after the farm has become infested. The short rotation of crops, and the timely use of the ordinary implements of the farm will keep in check even the most pernicious weeds.

An express train running 60 miles an hour without stopping for 25 hours would just travel the distance covered by the packets (placed end to end) sold in one year of "Salada" Tea. Annual sale exceeds eighteen million packets. 147

All the 25 dairy instructors who were engaged last year in Eastern Ontario, have been re-engaged. They will have charge of practically the same factories that they had last year. This year, a slight change is being made in the methods of inspecting the creameries in Eastern Ontario. Last year, Mr. James Stonehouse, of Port Perry, devoted his time to visiting creameries in Eastern Ontario. Most of the creameries are in the district West of Kingston. This year, the dairy instructors will be expected to visit the creameries in their respective districts.

Mr. J. F. Singleton, has been appointed to act as assistant to Chief Instructor Publow. Mr. Singleton in the course of his other work will pay special attention to the ceameries.

Chief Instructor G. G. Publow reports that the season in Eastern Ontario is opening very auspiciously. The market being bare of cheese indicates that the prices paid this year, should be high. This is encouraging the farmers to go in for dairy more extensively.

A MODERN FARM HOME.

From Farm and Dairy.

Among the many attractive and comfortable farm homes that have come to our notice of late is that of Mr. J. T. Birchard, of Victoria Co., Mrs. Birchard was prevailed upon to send us drawings of the first and second floor plans of her home, which are also reproduced herewith.

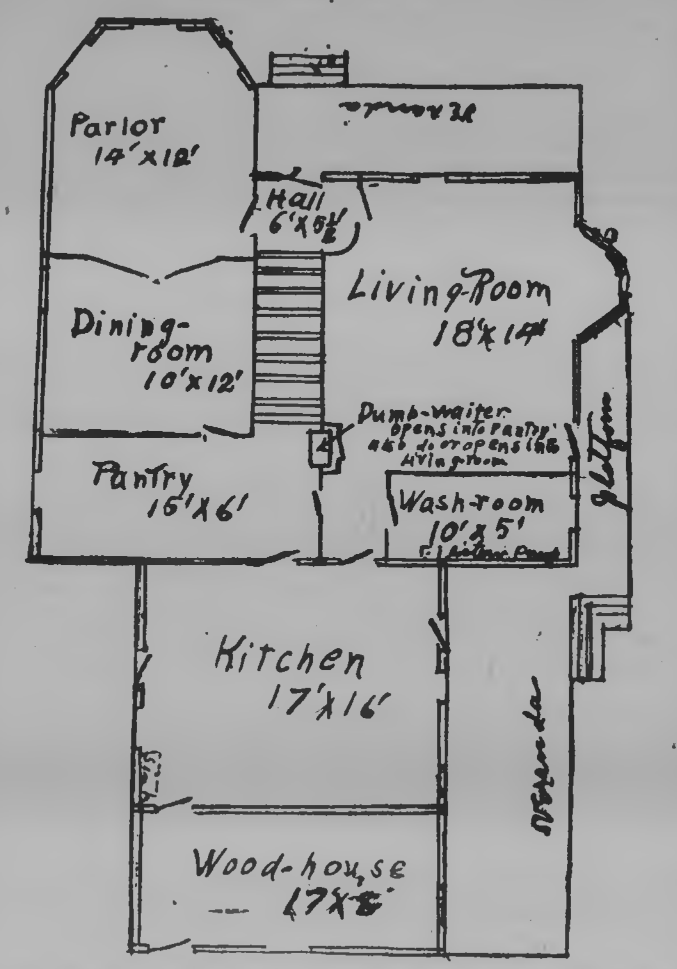
The house is built of solid brick, plastered on the inside. Then comes the studding or stripping, then the laths and finally the plaster, all of which, Mrs. Birchard writes, makes the home much warmer than it otherwise would be.

THE GROUNDS.

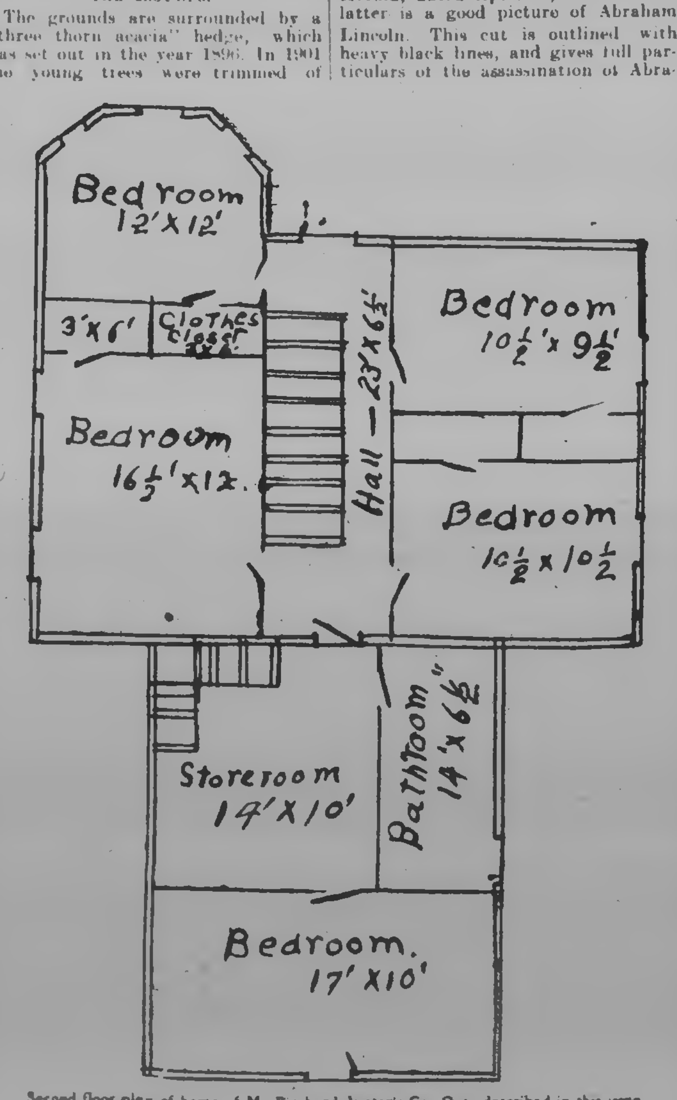
The grounds are surrounded by a "three thorn acacia" hedge, which was set out in the year 1896. In 1901 the young trees were trimmed of their branches and bent over at the tops or plashed, and pegged to strands of wire which serve to keep them in place. Cedar hedges also separate the front lawn from the vegetable garden. The sprig of spruce, to the west of the houses, we find excellent shelter for the orchard as well as a production for the house against winter winds.

The small building to the south is the old log cabin, preserved as a relic of one of the earliest settlers in that part of the country. This house was built about 70 years ago by Mr. Elisha Birchard.

In a letter received from Mrs. Birchard, she writes: "In this old house we found two old newspapers: one was an issue of the Toronto Globe, dated July 21, 1863, printed at the time of the American Revolution. The other was a copy of the New York Herald, dated April 18, 1865. In the latter is a good picture of Abraham Lincoln. This cut is outlined with heavy black lines, and gives full particulars of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln."



First floor plan of home of Mr. Birchard, Victoria Co., Ont., described in this issue.



Second floor plan of home of Mr Birchard, Victoria Co., Ont., described in this issue.

DESCRIPTION OF PLANS OF HOUSE.

A glance at the first floor plan of the Birchard home, shows at once that the house is commodious, well arranged and very comfortable. A spacious bay window is an attracting feature of the parlour, which opens into a large hall and into the dining room as well. A large living room, 18 x 14 feet, occupies nearly the whole of one half of this flat. From this living room is a dumb waiter, which opens into a large pantry, and also in the living room.

A convenient wash room back of the living room is to be found with an entrance into it from the kitchen, and from an outside platform, making such an arrangement extremely convenient for the use of the hired help. A cistern pump is to be found in this room. Another convenience at the rear of the kitchen is a large wood house, where the wood is piled and kept dry for use at any time. A large verandah off the kitchen, and at the front of the living rooms, adds greatly to the enjoyment and comfort of the family.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Four large bedrooms, of unusual size, are the best feature of the upstairs of this home. Each of these bedrooms opens into a central hall. Back of the central part of the house is one of Mrs. Birchard's most convenient spots, a large store room, 14 x 10 feet, and a convenient and well-arranged bathroom of an unusual size, 14 x 6½ feet. In the rear is a large bedroom, 17 x 10 feet. Plenty of windows and a good ventilation, are to be found in this well arranged home. The house is heated by a hot air furnace.

The barn and driving house stand to the east of the dwelling and are not shown in the illustration.

THE BUTTER SITUATION.

From Farm and Dairy.

J. A. Ruddick, Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa.

One of the most notable features of the dairy produce trade during the past ten years has been the large increase in butter consumption in Great Britain and in Germany. Germany was formerly an exporter of butter, but now the annual importation amounts to about 100,000,000 pounds, and it is growing rapidly. Germany's needs are supplied largely by Denmark, Holland and Russia. The imports of butter into Great Britain have increased from 1899 to 1908 by 81,753,520 pounds. Then again, several countries are increasing their production at a rapid rate, the most prominent in this respect being Siberia.

The first butter was exported from Siberia in 1894, and the quantity was only 14,000 pounds. It was estimated that the exports for 1908 would reach the large amount of 135,000,000 pounds. Siberia is developing thus rapidly as a result of the remarkable migration of peasants form European Russia. The Pall Mall Gazette of London states that up to the end of 1905 the average annual migration across the Urals was about 60,000 persons; in 1906 this number had increased to 180,000; in 1907 it totalled nearly 500,000, while in the first three months of 1908 approximately 420,000 persons settled in Siberia. The redeeming feature, from our point of view of the Siberian competition, is that the great bulk of the product is only second grade, owing to the unsanitary conditions under which the milk is produced.

AUSTRALIAN EXPORTS.

Australia during years of sufficient rainfall, ranks third in the list of countries exporting butter to Great Britain, but there is always some uncertainty because of weather conditions. For instance, in 1902 Australia exported only 7,777,971 pounds of butter, owing to the prolonged drought, but such are the marvellous recuperative powers of the country that in 1904, after a good rainfall, the quantity had risen to 64,788,542 pounds.

There is no need to dwell here on the large quantity of butter exported to Great Britain from Denmark, Holland, France, Sweden and other countries, because the quantity from these countries appears to have about reached its limit. Should the relative values of cheese and butter be reversed, New Zealand will largely increase her exports of butter, because the dairy industry, on the whole, is expanding in that country.

If we produce a superior article of butter, we shall find no difficulty in selling large quantities of it in the British market, even if we have to displace some of the butter and cheese coming from other countries.

MY PRIZE
GENDRON

"The Gendron Driver"

I am the proudest Baby in Canada to-day. Of course you know I was a prize winner in the "Toronto World's" Baby Contest, and my special prize was this GENDRON car.

It has a beautiful limousine top to keep off the sun and rain, and it is upholstered so "comfy" inside.

My little GENDRON Driver tells me that the springs are of the finest tempered steel—that triple curve so evenly distributing the strain that breakage is impossible and the specially welded wheels cannot warp.

When I want a ride around the house I need not be afraid of scratching the furniture, for there is a little rubber cap over the nut of the axle.

I am so glad that my new car is a GENDRON. Mother says they are the finest, strongest and most stylish, and if I do have an unexpected accident, it can be easily remedied as every single part of the car is made in Canada at the Toronto factory.

You can always get home if you drive a GENDRON

LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN.

The matter appearing in this space from time to time is furnished by the Temperance and Moral Reform League of this City, who have arranged for its Publication.

A GLIMPSE OF FAMILY TROUBLE.

We like to keep our troubles to ourselves. That is why, although there are hundreds of families in Peterborough in which the liquor traffic is causing untold misery, we seldom hear of it. A glimpse of the trouble of one family in Peterborough was furnished last Sunday on one of the residential streets, near the outskirts of the city.

About five o'clock in the afternoon a young man, apparently about nineteen years of age, was noticed leaning against a tree, helplessly drunk. Presently his mother, without hat or coat, was noticed running up the street to him. She was followed by her daughter, a young woman about twenty-five years of age. Mother and daughter tried to induce the boy to go home. He refused. They tried to take his arm, but he shook them off. They pleaded with him, but in vain. Presently, a boy, appearing to be a younger brother, joined the group carrying an overcoat. It seemed as if the young man must have sent his younger brother home to get his overcoat and that the boy must have told the mother and sister of his condition.

Presently, the young man managed to put on his overcoat staggering up the street back towards the city. He had gone about half a block when a young woman, about his own age and apparently a neighbour and friend, was seen running after him. At her touch he turned around. Finally, she persuaded him to walk back with her. For a while she held his arm to steady him. Presently, however, he shook off her hand only to fall off the sidewalk and hit his head against a post.

The close of this little tragedy was not observed. Apparently, however, the heroine, for she was one to act as she did, succeeded in taking the young man home.

It may be cruel to refer like this to a case of this kind. On the other hand, it is altogether likely that the mother and daughter will be only too glad to have this published if it will help to obtain Local Option in Peterborough next January. It is such scenes and tragedies as this that have created the demand for Local Option. In the mean time, it would be interesting if we could find where this young man secured enough liquor Sunday afternoon to be in the helpless condition in which he was.

WHAT SALOON KEEPERS MAKE

The foregoing incident adds weight to the following incident related in the last issue of The Pioneer:

A prosperous liquor dealer was boasting to a group of young men standing near his saloon of the amount of money he had made. "I have made $1,000 in the last three months," he said. "You have made more than that," quietly remarked a listener. "What is that?" was the quick response. "You have made my two sons drunkards. You have made their mother a broken-hearted woman. You have made much more than that, I reckon, but you'll get the full account some day."

THE YOUNG MEN AND LOCAL OPTION

[illegible] young men, representing [illegible] people's societies of Peterborough [illegible] churches, had [illegible] Temperance [illegible]. They [illegible] it plainly [illegible] the Local Option [illegible] Local Option. As Mr. R. J. Cox, of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, said, "These [illegible] votes are going to vote [illegible] Local Option and those of us who [illegible] going to get others [illegible] Local Option." [illegible] have to pay people to work for them and pay high. Even then they are not sure of receiving good service.

History shows that when soldiers are paid to fight they never fight as well as those soldiers who fight because they have a great cause. That is the case with the temperance campaign. Those who sell liquor are fighting for dollars and cents and the privilege of selling men and women that which drags them down body and soul. The advocates of temperance are fighting to save those whom the other side would ruin, or assist to ruin, if they could. Which is the greater, more noble, more inspiring cause? Do you wonder that the temperance workers in Peterborough and elsewhere are so enthusiastic in the fight for Local Option? The temperance cause has plenty of work ahead for the young men of Peterborough. They should be organizing and preparing themselves for the fray. The editor of this department would like the assistance each week of a couple of young men about 21 years of age. Will some one volunteer?

PROHIBITION HERE TO STAY

Opponents of Local Option try to tell us sometimes that the wave of prohibition that is sweeping over this continent is one of sentiment and that it will not last. They predict that before long it will spend its force and that those sections which have Local Option will go back to license.

They are wrong. They fail to realize that the years of noble work of education that have been put forth by members of the W.C.T.U., Total Abstinence Societies, Good Templar Organizations, and others are at last bearing glorious fruit. The time has come when the scales have fallen from the eyes of the people and they now see the effects of the liquor traffic in all its hideous deformity.

The hundreds of thousands of young people who have had temperance taught to them for years in the Sunday and Public Schools have grown to manhood and are now lined-up on the temperance side. They can no longer be fooled by the arguments that misled many of their fathers before them. Their ranks are increasing in numbers every day. They have not only the desire to gain Local Option but the determination to see that it is enforced when once secured. That is one reason why sections that have had Local Option for years have not gone back to license. "Right is might and will prevail."

Notes

Reference was made in the columns of the local press, the other day, to the case of a young man, who, in self protection asked to have his name placed on the black list. He had no difficulty in having his request granted, but why should the community tolerate an evil against which the individual is compelled to seek the protection of the law? Local Option will do away with the necessity for any such action as this young man was forced to take.

May 1st saw the introduction of Local Option into a large number of places in Ontario. In addition 40 licenses were cut off in the City of Toronto and several in other places. On the whole there will be in the province about 100 fewer places open for the sale of liquor. In Toronto the holders of the licenses that have not been renewed, have been given three months to dispose of their stock on hand. For this they are compelled to pay the proportion of the fee for the time they keep open. Several decided not to take advantage of this privilege and went out of business at once. In this way the cause is gradually making headway. The indications at the present time are, that at this time next year there will be even a larger number than now to disappear. Peterborough alone will furnish a fifth of that number.

A special despatch, dated Norwood, May 1, appeared in Monday's Globe: Today is the first anniversary of Local Option in this town, and the record of the year is such that some avowed opponents of the measure have been made its friends and advocates. The day is being marked by an amusing affair. Last Hallowe'en the toughs of the town gathered up all the old liquor bottles they could find, and at midnight deposited them on the lawn surrounding the residence of Rev. W. H. Adams, who had been an active worker in the Local Option movement. Although much indignation was expressed at the time, that gentleman took the matter good-humouredly, and the bottles, turned into tasteful mantel ornaments, are being sold by him this afternoon through Duffield's jewellery store, at thirty-five cents each. The demand for these interesting souvenirs exceeds the supply, and some persons have to content themselves with a grouped photograph of the bottles. The clergyman gets his fun, and a nice round sum into the bargain, from the Hallowe'en donation.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP.

There is many a man and woman tossing night after night upon a sleepless bed. Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system, that it cannot be quieted.

Or again, you have a sinking sensation, a feeling you are going to die; or perhaps, you wake in your sleep feeling as though you were about to choke or smother, and [illegible] for the night. If you allow these conditions to continue for a short period even, you will begin to feel your [illegible] declining. It is the nerves and heart not acting rightly, and they can only be set right by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They soon induce healthy, refreshing sleep, not by deadening the nerves, but by restoring them to healthy action.

Mrs. [illegible], St. Mary's, Ont., writes:—"I can gladly recommend your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as I was greatly troubled with my nerves. I was so bad I could not sleep at night without the lamp [illegible], but after taking four boxes of the pills I became all right again."

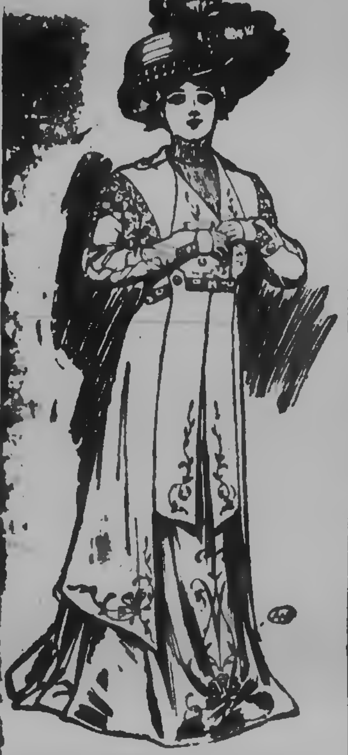
"THE COOKING PARTY"

New York Smart Society's Latest Penitential Diversion---Men Dressed as Chefs---Other Notes.

My Dear Elsa—If a girl has a talent for cooking, the fascinations of Cleopatra and the cunning little ways of Billie Burke she's well equipped for the latest Lenten craze, a cooking party. No, dear; this latest freak in domesticity which smart society here in Gotham is indulging in is nothing like the usual Dorcas culinary party, where one ruins one's dress and digestion, smiling meanwhile the smile of a villain, and then goes home and says things. The particular function, as Aunt Elinor would say, to which I refer takes place in the evening at the witching hour of 10 o'clock, and the chefs are equally divided between the fair and the stronger sex. But, to tell the story from the beginning, one morning last week I found among my mail an invitation from Mrs. Van D asking me to a cooking party. I instantly knew from the clever way in which the "bid" was got up that something unusual and amusing was imminent. The function certainly proved to be all the bit of cardboard promised in the matter of novelty. Naturally you are devoured with curiosity as to how the invitation was sent out. Well, Miss Johnnie Bear, in the envelope addressed to your scribe was a bit of cardboard in the shape of a dish, in one corner of which was painted a chef's cap and in another the words "Come and cook with me, nine p. m., March seventh." Mrs. Van D.'s name and address were under this inscription.



WALKING SUIT IN PALE GRAY RAJAH.

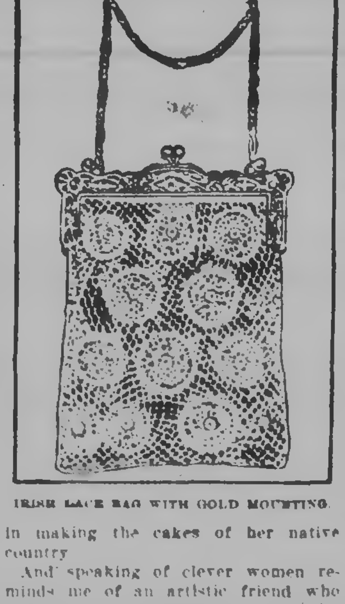
On the evening mentioned I appeared at the home of my hostess gowned in a charming frock Mme. Jane—she's the smart New York dressmaker—had just sent me. Of course I'll have to tell you that the creation was a clinging affair of dull brownish rose crape. The only trimming on the bodice was an exquisite band of embroidery in tones of rose with higher lights than the nuance of the gown material arranged in harness effect about the yoke. You know how a semi-empire frock hangs from this harness of embroidery, outlining the figure in a wholly fascinating fashion. Well, my frock was perfect in its sartorial etiquette, and, what was more important, Dick said it was very fetching. Entre nous, the touch of bright rose net that made the yoke and collar over a cloth of gold lining did the trick of becomingness. But what miles I've strayed from the party. To return to our muttons, when the guests had all arrived—five girls and as many men—at Mrs. Van D.'s our hostess led us to the stunningest kitchen I have ever seen. The servants had evidently been sent out for the evening, for there was none of them in sight. And what a mess we made of that kitchen! Still, that's not part of my story. On two tables were rows of chafing dishes, substitutes for the kitchen range, and we were told to "get busy" and prepare the best dish suitable for the time and occasion in our dietary repertory. What a lot of hard thinking was done! Everybody helped everybody else, and there was lots of fun at the expense of Elizabeth Z., who couldn't make anything but fudge. Then there was great sport when some one ran out of ingredients and Dick and Elizabeth had to run round to a little shop that happened to be open and supply the "missing link." Have I told you that over their evening dress the men wore white aprons and chefs' caps and that we girls put on the most bewitching lace headdresses and fantastic pinafores, as an English girl who was one of the guests, called our American apron.

There were three prizes—one for the most tasty contribution to the menu, one for the most deplorable one and a third for an original dish invented by the composer. Rivalry ran high for the possession of these prizes.

Even the "booby" prize was coveted—a perfectly charming hand bag of Irish lace over white suede and mounted in gold. Mabel, your little Mabel, succeeded in annexing this bag, and she's so proud of her culinary failure that she's sketched the bag for you to duplicate if you think it's worth while.

The prize for originality was won by the Savarin of our set, Waldorf W., and this amateur chef was delighted with the jeweled cigarette case Mrs. Van D. handed to him with the graceful remark that any jeweler could make a cigarette case, but it took a genius to make a sauce.

The credit for having originated these cooking parties is supposed to rest with Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, who has been doing Salome or, I believe, this titled Englishwoman calls them Greek dances for charity affairs here in New York. Lady Constance, you know, is a great sportswoman in England. She has a strong strain of the Scotchwoman's instinct for domesticity and is an adept in making the cakes of her native country.



IRISH LACE BAG WITH GOLD MOUNTING.

And speaking of clever women reminds me of an artistic friend who has paneled the hallway of her studio with nothing less than the sides, fronts and tailboards of the gayly painted carts used by Sicilian peasants. The spokes form the banister spindles, and they do make a gorgeous array of barbaric coloring. The rail was contrived of the shafts. As carved cherubs' heads, painted angels, mythological legends or Biblical subjects are the chosen decorations of these hardworking sons of toil, few more attractive panelings than these dismembered carts could be found.

Not at all in the same class of decoration, but a good practical idea, was the unique framing of a man's picture in a small suede skin that I saw recently. The irregular edges and generally dog eared effect of the whole skin were very artistic. The girl who originated the idea told me it was as easy as anything to make. She simply cut an opening in the center of the skin large enough to accommodate the photograph, glued it in place and stenciled a design around the picture. The suede used was of a pale tan color and the stenciling carried out in tones of brown that blended delightfully with the sepia tints of the photograph. But there is no end of pretty effects to suit individual pictures. Of course it would be desirable to have only one of these frames in a room, for a plethora of them would transform an apartment into the appearance of the wigwam of Sitting Bull (is he alive or dead?), the great Indian chief, or a corner at an arts and crafts exhibition.

No matter how hard I try to avoid the subject of clothes in my letters to you, Elsa, somehow, somewhere, this most important of all feminine topics is sure to crop out. This time it's in evidence because I've bought a spring suit. Yes; I selected a one piece frock and coat suit of pale gray rajah. The princess frock has a lot of gray filet about the bodice, and the coat is a rather odd affair, with the sleeves joined to the shoulders with insets of gray lace. There is some fine hand embroidery in self color on the coat and skirt, otherwise the suit is quite simple. Expensive simplicity Dick's going to find it, I'm afraid, when the bill comes in. Ever most sincerely yours,

MABEL.

A Card Index.

"Absurd," declares many a housewife. "A card index is all right for an office or a library, but when it comes to the home—why, it is simply ridiculous."

And yet this objection is but the theory of housewives that have sunk in the rut of doing as their grandmothers and great grandmothers did and usually not as well, for the dames of past generations generally had enviable household systems.

One of these sets of cards is very inexpensive, as is also the small wooden box or cabinet in which to keep it. Or why not keep it in a desk drawer? If you have an index just for recipes, why not keep it in a drawer of the kitchen cabinet?

Capital, by the way, for keeping recipes! For example, if you have three or four recipes for rice pudding file them together. It is so much more convenient than hunting through page after page in your personally compiled cookbook or among a pile of slips of paper.

Splendid for keeping household addresses—those of dealers, employees and that sort of thing.

Remember the old saying, "A place for everything, and everything in its place."

Is It True, Girls?

"Why I Recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

The Particulars of a Remarkable Cure Told by a Presbyterian Clergyman---Sufferer Brought Back From Death's Door.

St. Andrew's Manse,
Cardigan, P.E.I., Jan. 1908

Though I have never been sick myself, and have not had occasion to use Dr. William's Pink Pills, I thought you ought to know of the remarkable cure they have wrought in Mr. Olding's case.

During a visit to my home in Merigomish, N.S., some years ago, I was grieved to find our next door neighbor and friend, Michael Olding, very low. "He is not expected to live," my mother informed me, "And you must go over and see him as he is liable to pass away at any moment." "Not expected to live," that was the opinion not only of the doctor who attended him, but of his wife and family as well. Upon visiting him myself I found abundant evidence to confirm their opinion.

Mr. Olding had for years been afflicted with asthma and bronchitis, but now a complication of diseases was ravishing his system. He had been confined to his bed for months and was reduced to a skeleton. Though evidently glad to see me, he conversed with the greatest difficulty, and seemed to realize that it was the beginning of the end. He was daily growing weaker, his feet were swollen to twice their natural size, and the cold hand of death was upon his brow. "It's no use," he said feebly, "the doctor's medicine is not helping me and I am going down rapidly." I prayed with him as for a man soon to pass into eternity, and when I took his hand in parting it was the last time I expected to see him in flesh.

Three years later while on another visit to my mother's, Michael Olding was seemingly in better health than I had ever seen him, for, as I said, he had always been ailing. In sheer desperation he had asked his wife to get him Dr. William's Pink Pills. They soon began to help him. His appetite and strength to improve, and to the astonishment of his family and friends he rapidly regained his health. Now, though the burden of the well nigh four score years is upon him, he is able to do a fair day's work, and is in the enjoyment of good health, even the asthma has ceased to trouble him as in former years.

Mr. Olding himself, as well as his neighbors and the writer of this letter, confidently believe that his rescue from the very jaws of death—seemingly so miraculous—is due under the blessing of God to the timely and continuous use of Dr. William's Pink Pills.

REV. EDWIN SMITH, M.A.

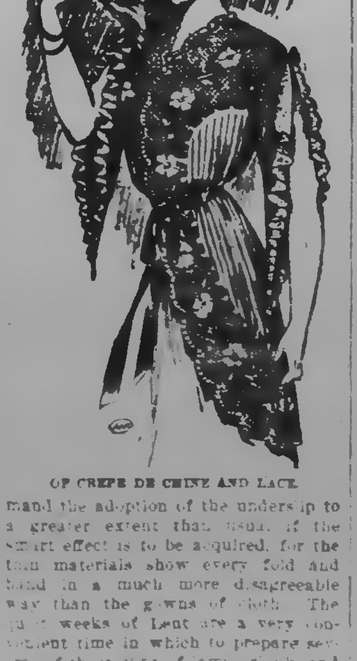
Mr. Olding himself writes:—"I am glad Rev. Mr. Smith has written you about my wonderful cure, for I confidently believe that if it had not been for Dr. William's Pink Pills I would have been dead long ago. It would be impossible to exaggerate the desperate condition I was in when I began to use the Pills. No one thought I could get better. I scarcely dared hope myself that Dr. William's Pink Pills would bring me through, but they did and I have ever since enjoyed good health. Though I am seventy-nine years old people are always remarking on how young I look—and I feel young. I can do a fair day's work, and I am better in every way than I had been for years. I cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Wiliam's Pink Pills and I take every opportunity I can to recommend them to friends who are ailing."

SMART NEGLIGEE.

Something Unusually Handsome For My Lady's Bedroom Wear.

No matter how busy or energetic one is obliged to be in this busy life of ours, there are hours when one must necessarily relax, and the luxury and comfort of a charming negligee are then thoroughly appreciated. A limited number of us prefer models on very simple lines and inexpensive materials, while others choose the more elaborate designs knowing that they possess a beautifying quality not to be found in the plainer negligee. A most charming design on unusually artistic lines is shown in the illustration and may be developed in a wide variety of materials. As sketched the model breathes luxury, for handsome Irish crotchet lace and crepe de chine with ribbon decorations are used in its development. Dimity, lawn, swiss and sheer goods are also appropriate with lace used for trimming, or any of the lightweight silks with cream lace would prove attractive with dainty pompadour ribbon used as a decorative note.

So many gowns are now made on princess lines that the set and fit of underwear have become a serious question, for all extra fullness and gathers must be absolutely eliminated if one wishes to secure the slim hip effect. The foundation slip has been considered by many in past seasons to be an unnecessary expense, the separate corset cover and skirt being preferred. The coming season, however, will demand the adoption of the underslip to a greater extent than usual, if the smart effect is to be acquired, for the thin materials show every fold and band in a much more disagreeable way than the gowns of cloth. The quiet weeks of Lent are a very convenient time in which to prepare several of these slips of lawn or silk and one will be well provided with the necessary undergarments when the more fascinating question of summer finery demands attention.



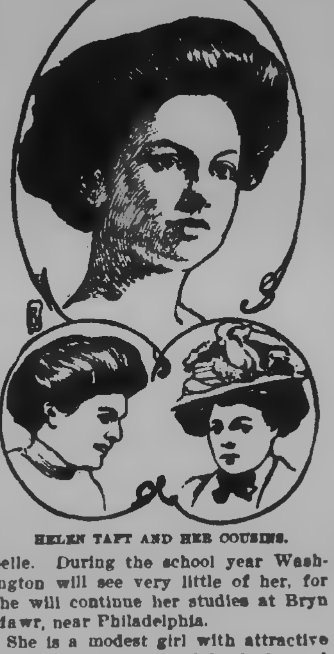
OF CREPE DE CHINE AND LACE.

THREE TAFT GIRLS

Daughter of The President and Two Cousins Will Be White House Belles---Fashion Tips.

During the next four years three young women of the Taft family will take prominent parts in the social life of Washington and especially in all the functions at the White House. They are cousins—Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the president; Miss Louise Taft, daughter of Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, and Miss Louise Taft, daughter of Henry W. Taft of New York.

Miss Helen Taft will be the most important figure in the trio because of the position her father occupies, and she will be known as the White House belle. During the school year Washington will see very little of her, for she will continue her studies at Bryn Mawr, near Philadelphia.



HELEN TAFT AND HER COUSINS.

She is a modest girl with attractive features and an unusual fund of sound common sense.

Her cousin Louise, daughter of Charles P. Taft, is a pretty young woman. She is rather slender, possesses an olive complexion, has masses of black hair, and her eyes are dark. This young woman has a most graceful carriage and a sprightly temperament. She is already known to Washington, having spent considerable time in the capital.

Miss Louise Taft, daughter of Henry W. Taft, has only recently returned from Europe, where she spent a year traveling. Her taste in matters of dress is said to be excellent.

All three of the Taft cousins were at the inaugural ball.

"Dearie" or "Girlie," Which Are You?

How long can this last? Must we be "dearied" and "girlied" forever? Awhile ago it was the dearie girl that flourished. You were called dearie when you went to buy a suit, you were called dearie when you tried on a hat, and you were told just what was and what was "not becoming to you, dearie," until you felt thoroughly surfeited with affection.

And then just as it ceased to be the fashion to be called dearie you found it was quite the thing to be called girlie. So now you are girlie.

"See here, girlie; I want to see the manager," she says to you in a confidential tone. "Could you tell me where to go?"

Or if you are doing the buying instead of the selling it is, "Say, girlie, now that is the collar for you," "You know, girlie, you ought to have a bag like that; it's the thing." Yes, you are called girlie if you are little and winsome and sixteen; you are called girlie if you are thin and gaunt and intellectual or if you are fair, fat and forty. Let not "forty," indeed, think that she escapes being girlied, for she doesn't. Before the summer is over she will have been girlied into buying her new suit and into taking a hat that she doesn't want. She will be girlied when she gets a shampoo, and she will be told that she ought to rub a little cold cream into her nails at night, girlie, by the young person who attends to her manicuring, for youth, age and station are all alike to her. The girlie girl is no respecter of persons. Once in her presence you are girlied till you escape.

We thought we had achieved something when we found ourselves rid of the dearie girl, but it begins to look as if we didn't know when we were well off, for now she puts her arm around you and calls you girlie. And what are you going to do? Slapping her really isn't to be thought of, for it wouldn't be polite—not at all.

Old Books as Jewel Cases.

A new idea was shown in a collection of fine old books scattered in a heterogeneous heap on a glass case in a famous jewelry house of New York which attracted the attention of every book lover who saw them. They were charming books genuinely old, with fine leather bindings, some of them hand tooled and gilded and with fine engravings and woodcuts on the [illegible] side. They were real treasures for the bibliophile. That was until a dozen or more pages had been turned, when the secret was revealed.

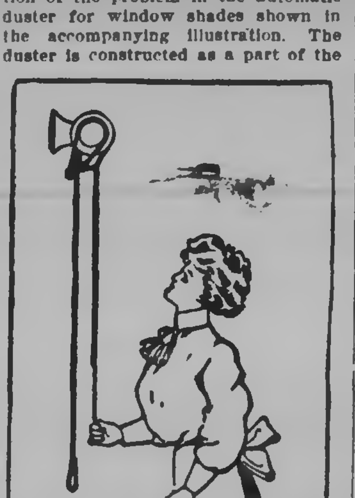
The heart of every book had been cut out and sides of strong paper filled in to make a receptacle of greater or less capacity, according to the size of the book, for a jewel case. With jewels in one of these it can go into a bookcase, where it is impossible for it to be recognized, for it is genuinely a book. Then, with the case door locked as would naturally be done to protect volumes of more or less value, the chief among burglars is likely to be deceived.

The book jewel cases vary in size from tiny volumes of prayer or religious exercises to books as large as the ordinary novel. They are all of a more or less serious nature or historical and the greater number in French. One of these is the "Advice of a Mother to Her Son and Daughter." Another is dedicated to a dauphin of France, 1700 and something. There is a historical volume with fine engravings of Louis XV. and Queen Marie of France, and a large woodcut of a Biblical scene in the frontispiece in another book. The frontispiece, the title page and a few other leaves are left intact in every volume.

A small religious book jewel case large enough to hold a pair of solitaire diamond earrings, a few rings and a pendant will cost $6, and the prices range up, according to size of the volume or perhaps with reference to the original value of the book. A set of handsome books, French, sell for $18 a volume. These would hold a fortune in jewels. The idea is interesting and appeals to women of taste, if they are not too much horrified at the destruction of the books.

Dusts Automatically.

Even the enterprising housewife has failed to find a method of keeping the dust off the window shades. It settles on the upper portion of the shade, being very perceptible when the shade is pulled down. She hates to get at it with a duster, as that requires the aid of a stepladder to reach it. A Canadian inventor offers an excellent solution of the problem in the automatic duster for window shades shown in the accompanying illustration. The duster is constructed as a part of the roller on which the shade revolves. As the latter is allowed to go up or down the duster automatically wipes off the surface of that part of the shade passing over the roller. As the shade is generally raised or lowered at least once a day, the shade is given at least a daily dusting. This attachment should prove of great value where white shades are employed, keeping them clean and thus prolonging their usefulness.



KEEPS THE SHADES CLEAN.

Antiseptic Toothbrush.

In this day of frenzied cleanliness as the road to all health, happiness and content everything is invented with an eye to keeping us germproof; therefore the antiseptic toothbrush.

SEVEN YEARS AN INVALID

Then She Took "Fruit-a-tives" And Is Now Well.

Arnprior, Ont., Nov. 27, 1908.

I was an invalid for seven years from fearful Womb Trouble. I had falling womb, with constant pain in the back and front of my body and all down my legs. There was a heavy discharge and this made me weak, sleepless, restless and miserable. Often I was obliged to be in bed for a month at a time. I was treated by several doctors, but their treatment did me no permanent good.

A few months ago, I was persuaded to try "Fruit-a-tives." I took several boxes, and from the outset of this treatment I was better, the Constipation was cured, and the discharge lessened. I took, for the paleness, several bottles of the Iron Mixture as recommended in the "Fruit-a-tives" book, but I feel that it was "Fruit-a-tives" alone that cured me.

ENTHUSIASM AND FAT

These two, like oil and water, mix poorly. This does ont imply fat men and women never get enthusiastic. They do down deep inside. But what does it amount? Their fat doesn't get excited. They can't transmute their enthusiasm into energetic action, so they might as well keep calm.

Thus it is that fat people generate much steam for life's work, only to find the load too much for the horsepower, and as a result thousands of both sexes get just so far and no further. "Much they care," says the uninitiated slim one. But they do care. They care keenly for financial, mental, social, business, fall hunting, straight-front and comfort reasons, and that is why Marmola Prescription Tablets have been so heartily welcomed by the overweight classes. The reason is not far to seek. Marmola Prescription Tablets take off about a pound a day in most cases without interfering in any way with the taker's table tendencies or his love of ease. To some, possibly, their absolute economy appeals. Thus one large case, costing seventy-five cents at any drug store, or of the makers, The Marmola Company, Dept. 833, Detroit, Mich., direct, is said in itself alone to contain enough tablets to make a decided change in any one.

But these are merely surface reasons. Marmola checks the formation of fat by curing the fat forming tendency. The fat just slips away, as it were, without a sign of a wrinkle. Thus the work these tablets do is not injurious. It is natural. That is the real reason these tablets are so much appreciated. They are safe.

HER HUSBAND'S JEALOUSY WAS AROUSED BY HARRY WOODRUFF'S VERY REALISTIC STAGE KISSES

Georgia Caine Was Playing in Joe Howard's New Musical Show "A Prince of To-night."—Caresses Were Too Frequent to Suit Husband.

IS NOW IN PRIVATE LIFE.

Chicago, May 8.—Georgia Caine, leading woman of "A Prince of Tonight" company at the Princess Theatre, will retire from the company and the stage to-morrow night, and behind the announcement lies the story of the stage kiss of a long series of them and of a husband's jealousy.

Miss Caine was secretly married three years ago to William Hudson, a rich New York broker. The fact did not become generally known until three months ago, when Mr. Hudson came to Chicago to see "A Prince of To-night" for the first time.

He had never made any objections to his wife continuing on the stage for the reason that she had always taken parts which did not require a very demonstartive form of love-making.

First Two Acts All Right.

He applauded vigorously through the first two acts and was well pleased up to the banquet scene in the finale of the third act, where the lines required his wife to kiss Henry Woodruff ,the leading man, with a vehem- blood boil.
ence and abandon that made his

The audience refused to go and applauded like' med. Every encore meant another one of these dreadful kisses, and when he had seen three of them the broker grabbed his hat and coat and made a mad rush for the stage entrance.

When Miss Caine reached her dressing room her husband was waiting for her. He demanded that his wife should quit the show immediately.

"My wife shall not kiss a man like that, on or off the stage!" he exclaimed.

She Give Immediate Notice.

So the leading woman gave notice to Mort H. Singer, director of the Princess Amusement Company, that very night. He declared that he would not permit Miss Caine to break her contract and after much discussion Mr. Hudson allowed her to continue for a few weeks on a condition that the photograph in the lobby, showing his beloved wife in Wodruff's embrace, be removed. This was done, but Miss Caine again gave notice five weeks ago, when her mother saw the show and objected to her daughter's part.

"I am absolutely determined, Mr. Singer," she said, "My happiness, my husband' shappiness, my mother's happiness, my entire future, depend on my leaving the company. I intend to go to Europe with Mr. Hudson and remain there for a year or more. I shall never act again."

The search for a substitute was then begun in real earnest and the Countess Olga Hatzfeldt was engaged for the part. She has been with "A Girl at the Helm" company all this season and she will make her first appearance in the kissing role Monday evening.

THE LID PUT ON A FLIRTY TOWN

Rolla, Mo., May 8.—By threatening to cause fast 'Frisco trains to pass through Rolla without stopping unless conditions at the depot were changed, the railroad forced the Rolla City Council to pass an ordinance tabooing flirting and making eyes on the station platform.

Mayor Stroback, of Rolla, and Superintendent O'Hara, of the 'Frisco line, have joined forces to prevent students at the State School of Mines from attracting attention of pretty girl passengers on trains, by the waving of hands, tipping of hats, calling, and giving college yells. The ld on yells does not apply to rah, rah's to cheer a departing classmate. The penalty for violating the ordinance is a fine of from $5 to $25. Colleeg authorities have promised assistance in enforcing the ordinance.

Pretty girl passengers on the 'Frisco now smile and giggle as trains pass through, but the students are as meek as lambs. A returning smile is all they can give, for the city marshal is spending most of his time at the sttaion to catch violators of the ordinance.

Laziest Man Declares His Hardest Work Now Is Eating

Resides on Illinois Farm and States That Work Is the Cause of so Many People Dieing—They Do Not Get Enough Sleep—How He Gets His Share.

THE STORY OF HIS LIFE.

Jerseyville, Ill., May 8.—John Muncra, the laziest man in the world, who has lain in bed for ten years at the Jersey County farm, near this city, said to a correspondent who visited him recently, that he never had a sweetheart because courting a pretty girl requires too much energy.

"No, siree," said John, tossing his long, blac khair back from his forehead, "I never liked work well enougn to go chasing after the gals. While the other fellows were chasing around and thinking they were having a lot ot fun, I was in bed getting my rest. I always did like to sleep.

"It's funny how some men waste their time courting. I've heard of them sitting up till nine or ten o'cloc kdoing it when sleep would have done them a lot more good. Of course a fellow might get a good wife that way, but he'd never make up for the time he lost. That's why so many people die. They don't get enough sleep."

This man with the queer philosophy of courtship and slumber is sixty-nine years old and weighs eighty pounds, yet he has not been ill a day since he went to bed for good, in March, 1899.

"You don't need a lot of muscle when you don't work," he said.

"Work is what makes a fellow old. I don't see why anybody works when he can lie in bed like I do. It's the only way to live. I'll bet I've a better appetite than anybody here."

This statement was verified by Richard Mourning: "why, John would eat us out of house and home here it you would let him."

"Bet your life!" exclaimed John, "and I haven's seen a table for ten years, either—just ten years and thirteen days, now, isn't it, Dick?"

John's memory for dates and names is considered marvellous by attendants at the farm who say that his mental faculties have in no way been impaired by his long stay in bed. This is considered more wonderful because John refuses to look at books or papers or amuse hmself with cards or other games.

"Reading is too much work," he said. It won't do a fellow any good to lie in a bed if he spends his time working. I tred playing soltare once and t fixed me so I couldn't sleep."

John never exerts himself in any way except when the attendants attempt to make him leave his bed. Then he battles valantly for his rignt to remain on the couch wheer he has chosen to pass the remainder of his days.

John was at first unwilling to talk about his past.

"There's a lot of things I'm not going to tell you and you needn's ask me," he said.

"I was born at Martinsville, Morgan County, Indiana, near Terra Haute, in 1840. I went to Missouri and then I came over here to Illinois. The first town I settled in was Elsah, near Alton.

"James Seagraves, a farmer there, tried to make me chop wood and I quit. I got lots of jobs, but I never worked. I just couldn't. I'd go out with the other hands in the morning, but I'd sneak off in the woods and go asleep.

"I'd hunt around till I'd find two logs lying close together. Then I'd cover them up with brush and crawl under it and lie there all day. Even if I didn't sleep ,it felt good just to be lying down."

John was asked whether he believes in the theory that laziness is a germ disease.

"I should say not," he replied. "It's the deadly germ of work that's killing everybody off."

WILL SECURE BRANCH OF C. P. R. INTO THEIR PREMISES IF CITY WILL GIVE SMALL STRIP OF LAND

Peterborough Canoe Co. States That the Industry in This City is Threatened by Strong Opposition of a Factory in Frederickton, N.B.----Also Ask for a Fixed Assessment---Met Council Last Night.

What is considered an important industrial question was presented to the City Council last night by representatives of the Peterborough Canoe Co. Mr. E. A. Peck, solicitor, and Mr. Claude Rodgers, of the company, waited on the City Fathers, who met in committee with the following present, Mayor Rush, and Ald. Phelan, Metherall, Bradburn, Buller, Turner, Gillespie, Morgan and Duffus. The city has always had the reputation of being the centre of the canoe building industry. This is now threatened by a company located in Fredericton, N.B., which has been substantially bonused, have every facility and can secure their lumber at a much cheaper rate than can be obtained in this city. The Peterborough Canoe Co. are therefore asking for an assistance which they state will protect them, and will help them meet the new opposition.

Mr. Peck was the first speaker. He stated that the Company is employing about 65 men, and has a large pay roll. They ask that a piece of land between the rear of the factory and the C. P. R. spur line be given them. This is wanted particularly in order that a line of the railway may be run into their yards. Moreover, it will enable the Company to provide new buildings, which are now needed. There is a dearth of room, owing to the advances the business has made. Mr. Peck stated that they also ask for a fixed assessment.

Protect Industries.

It was important, he stated, that the home industries be protected and assisted. The Peterborough Canoe Co. had asked and received few if any concessions. Peterborough has always enjoyed the reputation of being the centre of the canoe industry. Now, however, there is a company in Fredericton, N. B., which has been strongly bonused, and is offering considerable opposition. It is important that the local Company receive some assistance in order to hold their trade in Peterborough. The cost of carting yachts, steamboats, launches, canoes, etc., is very heavy, owing to the fact that they have to be drawn to the stations. A line of the railway into the yard would remove this extra and unnecessary cost, and would be a great help to the Company.

The acquisition of this land would also enable the Company to erect several buildings which were required, in order to meet the heavy demand for room which the growing business demands. Mr. Rogers had prepared a drawing which he explained to the aldermen, showing the exact location of the land asked for. Part of it would have to be filled in by the Company, as it is now under water, but they were prepared to do this if they could get it. It was also stated that no difficulty would be experienced in having a branch of the C. P. R. run into the yard.

The question is now in the hands of the Manufacturers' Committee for consideration.

Those Who Will Have New Motor Boats On The Otonabee This Summer

The popularity of the Otonabee river this summer promises to far excel anything of previous years, and in anticipation of this, Mr. H. B. Rye, who conducts the boat livery at the end of the street car line, has not only increased his supply of the smaller crafts, such as skiffs and canoes, but has amply provided for the large number of yachts that will have their headquarters at Mr. Rye's place. In view of the many new motor boats that will ply on the Otonabee this coming season, Mr. Rye has built some new floating wharves which will furnish better accommodation.

Many New Boats

With the approaching fine weather, the river will be the scene of many boating parties and both the young and the old will be seen wending their way to the street railway wharf to enjoy a few hours, paddling or sailing on the water. It was often remarked last summer what a great array of yachts lined up along the river, but there will be more than ever this summer. The Peterborough Canoe Co. has had a busy winter building motor boats, most of which have been for points outside of the city. A shipment of five yachts will in the course of a few days be sent to Winnipeg. But they have also turned out some five boats for local men.

Mr. W. E. Talbot has a fine new launch, which will rank among the finest around Peterborough. Mr. M. Haskill has also purchased a nice 17 foot boat. He had his first trip in it yesterday afternoon and everything went satisfactorily. Messrs. C. M. Blewett and Louie Potvin have new crafts, Mr. Blewett's being a twenty-foot gasoline launch, while Mr. Potvin's is twenty-six feet in length. Then there is Mr. Hagheson's fine new 30 H.P. speed boat, reference to has previously been made in this paper. Mr. Osborne, of the Brinton Carpet Co., has a new twenty-two foot launch called "The Witch." Messrs. F. Mesley, F. Gillespie and W. Barrie, B. O'Dette and Alf Jackson are among those who will have new boats on the river this summer.

Grocer Was Charged With The Theft of $1.20 In Court To-day

A local grocer was charged with the theft of one dollar and twenty cents at the police court this morning. An adjournment was made in the case in order that a satisfactory settlement might be reached between the complainant and the merchant.

From the evidence adduced, it appears that informant's daughter sent a five dollar bill to the grocery store with a little boy to have it changed in order that she might pay for some photo frames. When the boy returned he only had $3.80, the explanation of the store-keeper being that the lad's mother had owed him $1.20 for three years.

The woman stated that the money was not hers and that therefore the grocer had no right to it, and furthermore that she did not owe anything, never having received the account. The defendant swore that he had sent it several times and that the boy said that the money belonged to his mother.

The Magistrate suggested that the grocer pay back the money to the young lady and afterwards bill the complainant for the amount.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE IN NEW YORK HAVE BEEN IN TERROR SINCE BLACK HAND MASSACRE

Victims of Spring Street Black Hand fire lying in state side by side.

(By W. G. Shepherd.)

Staff Corespondence.

New York, May 10.—How would you like to go to bed every night with a cyclone cloud whirling above your home and loved ones, likely to dro pdown at any minute and bring death and destruction to you all?

Or to be locked in a powder magazine with a fuse lighted and slowly burning toward the black death-dealing powder?

This is the feeling in eNw York's Italian colony since hte masacre at 37 Spring St., when Black Hand agents poured gallons of kerosene on the stairs, then threw on a torch and three tiny babies, a girl of seven, a girl of four, a boy of seven, a young man, a young woman, and a man of middle age—nine people in all—were burned to death like rats in a trap.

The Black Hand a good many American police officials laugh at it, and ridicule it, In many cases perhaps they are right. In nine cases out of ten a Black Hand letter is to be dispised.

But the tenth time—

Well, Spring St., nor Mott-St. nor any street, where Italians live in New York, laughs at the Black Hand.

At the fueral of the victims of the Spring St. holacaust, there were no crowds of curious. he Italians who had to pass the ruins of the house turned their heads away, pretended not to notice.

They are so frightened that they do not dare to let it be known that they do not dare to let it be known that they know such a thing has happened.

One word! One look! One shudder! What would the black hand do for you and yours?

When I saw the funeral of Petrosini, the great Italian detective, who was struck down in Sicily, I wondered that his people cared so much They lined the streets for miles, a quarter million of them.

This was six weeks ago. Now I know why.

In the note sent to A. Bruck, the owner of the Spring St. house, occurred thees gruesome words, which Italians in New York a re now repeating in awed whispers:

"Petrosini is dead. But the Black Hand still lives."

New York Italians cant' but connect the two events the slaying of their great protector, who was the Black Hand's most relentless enemy, and the Spring St. horror.

It was a terrible lesson the most fiendish and calculating in America's criminal history.

Their demand ignored by Bruck, the perpetrator s of the deed bided their time. One night they entered the hallway of the building.

On the stairway, which was the only means of exit from the four floors, emptied several five-gallon cans of kerosene oil.

They didn't try to burn Bruck's store, that was next door and was almost unharmed, except for smoke.

They wanted to kill.

"Petrosini was dead." They wanted to give American Italians a lesson that they would not forget.

In the lamentations that are going up in Spring St. low-voiced and frightened, but intense and heartbreaking, is only hal fsorrow. The other much of anger. Anger at the American police.

The police knew for three weeks that the building was threatened. Bruck turned the note over to them as soon as he received it. The patrolman whose beat lay past the doors of the doomed house where the sleeping families lay, knew.

But no one warned any of the dwellers in that house.

Not a word was said to any oe the families which would enable them to keep watch.

"What was the use?" said Deputy Commissioner Arthur Woods. "We can't notify people every time a Black Hand note is sent. We'd have the town in a continual state of terror if we did. Hundreds of such threats are made.

"Besides, if the people knew and kept watch, the Black Hand agents would simply wait, till the watch was given up. It might be weeks, maybe months. They would wait then time to strike."

And so no warning was given. If the police made any special efforts to thwart the plans of the human devils, their efforts accomplished nothing. If they have done anythin gsince to catch the perpetrators theer is no sign of it in the world.

The men who committed this horrible crime might have mingled with the mourners at the funeral awtching for signs of anger or revenge, for all anyone knows.

I talked with Peter Belleravia at the hospital. He had lost three children in the fire. His face and body were swathed in bandages.

"Why didn't the police tell us?" he moaned. "I might have saved my babies. I would have kept watch every night if I had known."

3rd PRINCE OF WALES DRAGOONS ANNUAL CAMP IN PETERBOROUGH DEPENDS ON COUNCIL'S ACTION

The Cavalrymen Will Camp Here Provided the City Gives Them a Camping Ground and Looks After Water Supply---Would Mean a Big Thing for Peterborough Financially and Otherwise---Would Leave a Large Amount of Money Here.

The annual camp of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, involves an expenditure for maintenance—supplies for men and horses—of about $1,000 per day in the city and vicinity where the camp is situated. The City of Peterborough can have the camp here this year if the City Council will provide the camping grounds and necessary water supply—something that will involve a cost of about $150.

In a letter to Hon. J. R. Stratton, Sir Frederick Borden says he has no objection to the camp being in Peterborough if the Commanding Officer of the Dragoons wishes to have it here, on condition that it will not be more expensive than Cobourg. The Minister of Militia desires to retrench as greatly as possible and hence he makes this stipulation.

The Minister of Militia is willing to have the camp in Peterborough under the conditions named; the commanding officer, Col. Syer, of Millbrook is willing to have the camp in Peterborough, so that its presence here next June depends entirely upon the public spirit and promptitude of the City Council, which, it is certain, will not be found wanting.

It is estimated that to provide a camp and supply it with water, will cost about $150. If this is done by the City Council, the camp will be held here.

The presence in camp for twelve days of 400 men and 400 horses means a large outlay for supplies in the city and vicinity—about $1,000 per day, and that the camp held here involves a total outlay for maintenance of about $10,000. All this money may be secured if the city will spend about $150 in providing a site for the camp.

Mr. D.W. Dumble On Ball Playing In Central Park

To the Editor.

Sir,—I have read with much interest the letter in the Examiner anent the Central Park and its use for a play ground. I heartily sympathize with "A Friend of the Boy," in his opinions as to the desirability of providing ample and convenient play grounds in various parts of the city for the youth. Over twenty years ago, through the press, and by interviewing the Council, I urged the necessity of such play grounds. I need not dwell upon the great value of such grounds. Many American cities are now voting millions to get what could, at an early day have been procured for a song. Our Council did not appreciate my views and instead of buying they sold for a trifle the lands they owned.

The question arises as to the propriety of using the Central Park for baseball, etc. Is a central place like that the most desirable? There are public walks across it, which women and children in great numbers use. A blow from one of these balls, thrown as they are with great force, is not a desirable thing. A ball through a rounded glass of the Collegiate means much expense, and, of course, the dedication of the land for baseball means the end of any attempt at a desirable park.

Had the local military men kept the arrangement entered into at Ottawa between them and the Board of Education, and approved by the Minister of Militia, the difficulty would have been largely overcome. It was decided to place the Institute and the Armoury at the front of the lots owned by them, that is, in the line of the front of the demolished old drill shed, thus leaving a large space behind for play ground and drilling, but without conferring with the School Board the Armoury was put at the rear, compelling the School Board to put the Institute in line with the Armoury, and so reducing the school yard at the rear.

The land owned by the School Board is private property, the Government authorities at Toronto have directd the planting and embellishing of the land in front of the Institute.

Of late, scores of young men have taken possession of the Park and tramped over it, regardless of the softness of the ground, and regardless of the efforts of the Board to get a good grass surface on their lawn. A week's play in April does immense damage, particularly where there is so thin a coating of soil as that overlying the gravel beds of the park. The young men have desires, but the people have rights, and more people desire to have the park beautified than those who would sacrifice it for a baseball ground. It must be settled one way or the other. Either a playground or a park—which? If the park was larger both ends could be attained, but, unfortunately, it will not allow of half a dozen parties all playing at once, making it a danger for any one to pass over it and destroying all efforts to make it beautiful.

I urge once more the obtaining of play grounds all over the town; cultivate innocent out-door life, meet the natural and healthy impulses of young life, and save the boys from less wholesome habits than those developed by manly out-door sports. We spend a lot of money to bring people into the town, would it not be well to spend a little to add to the pleasure of those who are here.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
D. W. DUMBLE.

THE EXAMINER'S MARATHON EXTRA OUT AT 7.30 O'CLOCK

The Examiner will issue a special sporting extra at 7.30 o'clock this evening in which full particulars of the principal sporting events of the day will be given. Special attention will be paid to the Shrubb-Longboat race and to the $10,000 Marathon Derby in New York City, in which Fred Simpson is battling. Arrangements have been made with the C. P. R. Telegraph Company for a splendid service, fully covering these two events, as well as the other doings in the sporting line. The Examiner's specials have always been satisfactory, and to-day's will be the most complete and enterprising that has ever been issued by this paper and that means in Peterborough. The Examiner believes in giving its readers the cream of all the news and giving it to them early. Remember no outside paper containing accounts of the races will reach Peterborough to-night, so obtain a copy of the Examiner's big sporting extra. The newsboys will have it on the street at the usual price, two cents per copy.

THINK OF IT, YOUNG GIRL.

Does the pretty, modest, refined, sensitive girl, with a slight list towards the employment to slay as her only notable deficit—does she reflect that when she employs the popular expletive, "Je'!" she is using the family name of the Saviour of mankind as a flippant nick-name. In addition to this expression being very bad form, coming from a pretty mouth, it is simply blasphemous slang—unconsciously blasphemous, consciously slang. The more utterly odious slang expression "Hully Je'!" is a corruption of the word "holy" prefixed to the sacred name. Slang is always low and vulgar, but when the element of irreverence—disregard for the holiest of names—is present in its employment, words fail to fittingly characterize the conjunction of evils.

MAN'S UNENVIABLE DISTINCTION.

A judge, the other day in sentencing a creature in human form, who had been convicted of selling and circulating filthily obscene pictures and "literature" of unspeakably abominable character, regretted that the law restricted him to a sentence of two years imprisonment. The law, Judge Riddell remarked, permitted a sentence of fourteen years for wounding with intent, but here was a man guilty of an offence which led to the excitation of passions, resulting not only in grievous bodily harm, but in irreparable injury to the mind and soul—inflicting wounds that eternity would not heal. One killed the body—the other the soul. We have such beasts in every community. Almost everybody but the authorities, knows, or is convinced, that there is no small traffic in obscene pictures and literature in the city of Peterborough. There is no need to specify the degrading and bestializing influence of these things upon our youths and young men. We have evidence of it. A few days ago the margin of the magazines and periodicals in the ladies reading room of the Public Library were found scrawled over with filthy and disgusting obcenities. The individual identity of the perpetrators is not known, but it is known that it was done by men or boys. It is a fact that only men do these things. Bad as women can be, saturated with salacity as they may be, they are never known to disfigure walls or public buildings or books or papers with impure writings. That is a distinction reserved for man kind. If it is true that as a man thinketh so he is, what sort of men must we have in society and walking our streets every day?

AN INGLORIOUS COLLAPSE.

The complete collapse of the Conservative attack on Hon. Mr Pugsley, came on Thursday afternoon. A similar issue was to be expected, but it came rather prematurely. The Conservative Opposition caused it to understood that the debate would continue much longer. But arrangements were secretly made to secure a snap verdict. Under the impression that there would be no division till the evening session, the Liberal members in considerable numbers made their escape from the stale story of the scandal as prefunctorily rehashed by the Opposition orators. The Opposition members were present in full force. The Conservative speakers had their eloquence suddenly choked off when it was seen that the only chance of pulling out of the mess they had got into with the least degree of credit, was presented. The Opposition precipitated a division, with their own benches purposely full and with about a score of Liberal members absent. The result was that the Government's majority was only 27 instead of 47, which it would have been if the division had come in the evening session, as was expected. All the of their fiasco, was the puerile triumph of a snap verdict. Such an ending or something similar was expected—indeed inevitable. The matter should never have been brought up in the House, where there was no means, nor authority for dealing with it in a conclusive manner—in any way except in the way of talk. A more ignominous and humiliating collapse of a diligently engineered scandal could not have happened. It was no wonder the Conservative Opposition did not dare to bring direct charges in the only one possibly proper way—on the floor of the House, and on the responsibility of a member of parliament. Then complete investigation would have been possible and imperative; the Conservatives could not have pulled out, when they saw the game was going against them, and could not have won even the glory of a snap glory and credit the schemers got out verdict.

THEY LACKED THE COURAGE

The matter of connecting Hon. William Pugsley, Minister of Public Works, with the relations he may have had in an extra-parliamentary capacity and before he became a member of the Government, with the New Brunswick railway is one that could not, consistently with parliamentary procedure, be irregularly introduced In order that the matter might come regularly before the Dominion Parliament, it was necessary to show at least to attempt to show, by some recognized regularity of procedure that the Minister of Public Works, was unworthy to occupy a seat in Parliament. In every case of this character it is the exigeant parliamentary rule that a member shall make a direct and specific charge or charges and have enough faith in the truth of his accusations to risk his seat. Mr. Crothers, member of Elgin, who was made the scape-goat of the Conservative Opposition, and brought up the matter in Parliament, had not the courage to take the straightforward and manly course heretofore taken by Mr. Huntingdon and Mr. Tarte, who in the cases in which they were concerned, put their seats in jeopardy by making specific charges and saved their seats by proving their charges. Mr. Crothers did not have enough faith in the charges based on the report of the partizan commission to risk anything but his reputation for fair and manly dealing. He accused Mr. Pugsley by the means of an amendment to go into supply, thus putting himself under shelter from the danger of losing his seat, in case he made charges on his responsibility as a member, which he was unable to make good. If Mr. Crothers had had any faith in the implied charges contained in the report of the New Brunswick Railway Commission, he would have been willing to put them in proper and regular parliamentary form. Failing to do this it is fair to assume that neither he nor the Opposition that was behind him believed the charges against Mr. Pugsley and were afraid to bring them to the proof. Instead he and the Opposition took the means of making a long range assault upon Mr Pugsley by exploiting charges made by an extra-parliamentary entity not responsible to Parliament, and having nothing more to do with Parliament than a village newspaper sheet. The Conservative Opposition have a habit of indulging in slander of their political opponents, by making cowardly statements, which being made in Parliament are privileged, and carefully avoiding the assumption of responsibility by making charges that admit of proper and authoritative investigation. They have done this against Mr. Pugsley in the matter of the Mayes affidavit. They made insinuations against him, but dared not make a direct charge, and even fought shy of the Public Accounts Committee where there was ample opportunity to prove their charges of they had ben capable of proof. That the only means to attain decisive and reliable results in respect to the charges mouthed so flippantly and volubly in the House and on the party platform, was and has been, not only neglected, but avoided under challenge, is prima facie evidence that the charges sugge[illegible] were groundless and those making them knew or felt that they were groundless or they would have gone through fire and water in the attempt to prove them; and, to this end would have taken the only means available to provide proof. The conclusion is irresistible that the Conservative Opposition at Ottawa, have no faith in the charges they bandy about. This applies as well to the Mayes slanders as to the slanders voiced by the report of the partizan Commission of the New Brunswick Government. If the Opposition had had the slightest belief in the slanders they are exploiting against Hon. Mr Pugsley, they would not hesitate to have an indictment formulated, and the accused brought to trial. But they are content to play the role of slander at large and shrink like cravens from coming to close quarters.

Letting "I dare not" wait upon "I would" like the poor cat i' the adage.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Who would have thought it. Mr. Walter Brown says: "There are now plans for the invasion of Canada in the pigeon holes of a certain foreign government, and men are in Canada studying the defences." Hereupon ladies will do well to look under their beds to see if there is an invader there.

Ex-President Roosevelt and his son, now of Africa, are the greatest deuce of heroes, since the days when Col. Sam Hughes and my man Turpin operated in South Africa. But the latter were originals and the Presidential pair are only feeble imitations. Col. Sam hunted wild Boers, while Teddy is chiefly slaughtering paper-news—news-paper—lions.

THE END OF THE DEBATE

(The Globe.)

By the sudden collapse of the debate on the New Brunswick Commission's report it may be inferred that even the Opposition appreciated the futility of attempting to make out an intricate and complicated case on the floor of Parliament. It is only necessary to report the [illegible] of the debate to make this manifest. Mr. Crothers contented himself with reading large sections of the report, declaring that he took his stand on that. He did not care for the evidence, he said; he proposed to adhere to what he described as a judicial utterance. Unfortunately for him, Dr. Pugsley made such havoc of the report that Mr. Crocket largely abandoned the report and took refuge in four ponderous foolscap volumes of the complete evidence, from which he quoted snippets of testimony, and as he was the only man in the House who was so favoured he had it all his own way.

Dr. Pugsley spoke for nearly five hours, Mr. Crothers for fully five. The Minister's defence secured a full House and a crowded Press Gallery. Mr. Crothers' effort naturally created less interest and was delivered to a slim House. It may safely be asserted that not one man, with the possible exception of the Speaker, was present during the whole of it. Very few of those even on the Opposition side heard half of it. And yet this is the way it is proposed to try a case involving the honour and reputation of a distinguished public man, involving as it does also the Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick. It is important to note, too, the ideas of fairness that obtain among Dr. Pugsley's opponents. Mr. Crothers was put up to read a document that was already in every member's hand. This, of course, compelled Dr. Pugsley to base his reply [illegible] on the report. Mr Crocket then [illegible] the floor to assail him with the evidence which Dr. Pugsley has been unable to read and when, having had his say, he is unable, under the rules of the House, to make any reply. How does this square with the received notion of British fair play?

As a matter of fact, however, Mr. Crocket [illegible] House [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Crocket [illegible] that in looking about for a Judge to preside It was unfortunate that they should have selected the one occupant of the Bench in that Province who is known never to have abandoned his craving to re-enter the political field, and that if they desired to gain respect for the finding of such a body they should not have made up its membership of three Tory partisans, with a notorious party man like H. A. Powell to act as counsel.

RURAL MAIL DELIVERY FOR PETERBOROUGH

The application of a reform so revolutionary as rural mail delivery takes time, but Districts are being continuously placed under its operation.

In Peterborough county arrangements are in progress for the establishment of rural mail delivery between the city of Peterborough and Ennismore on a daily mail route, and the same applies to the route between Lakefield and Lakehurst, where there is a daily mail at present.

Other districts in the county, where the mail routes render such a system practicable, will in due course be provided with rural mail delivery facilities, all doubting Thomases to the contrary notwithstanding.

THE STRAIGHT ROAD TO A MAN'S HEART.

BY AN ARTLESS SPINSTER.

Of course, the moment one talks of the way to a man's heart one immediately thinks of the time-worn saw as the most important pathway.

Not being quite Elizabethan or French — for our Gallic friends are indeed, at times, distressingly frank of speech—having, then, been brought up to a becoming modesty in language, I will merely say that this pathway was tersely indicated by the dear old lay who said:

"Feed the brute."

As a means of keeping a man in a good temper there is truely nothing more powerful than a good dinner; but until you are married to him what chance, I ask, have you of feeding him?

Yet he falls in love with you!

Therefore must there be other ways to his wayward heart. And now I'll tell you some.

Theer are some men whose hearts are like a railway junction. You simply can't avoid the lines! And the moment you step on one—hey presto! you're into the junction—I mean the heart.

No fun. No excitement. No nothing. The only thing to be said for the whole business is, that being a junction, one can get out of it as easily as one gets in!

The quickest way to a man's heart —I mean a heart worth while, you know, not a boarding house that change its lodgers every twenty-four hours — the very shortest road is that you may bring him, if you only make it almost, but by no means quite, impassible.

You see, if a man is any good, he's a sportsman above everything. The things that give him most trouble to get are the things he wants. If the homliest girl in America were only perched on a high tower, surrounded by a wall that was spiked all over, pretty nearly every man would be staring at her through telescopes and devising means for scaling the wall.

You've got to be as sweet, and pretty, and "come hither"-ish as your type will admit; yet make him realize that you are a dreadfully long way away, and very swift of foot. That's the way to a man's heart.

Another thing men are — I don't wish to be rude, but really men are like sheep. In their likes and dislikes their habits and methods of thought, they follow one another in an absolutely farmyard manner.

So once you've found your way to one heart, you can find your way to as many more as you lke. Not that you would wsh to, of course.

Love said you mus tgive a man a run for his money in order to find the quickest path to his heart, but I also said, if you remember, that you must look back over your shoulder as you run.

Men like being looked at. It is not only then that even the least beautiful of the sex think themselves well worth our regard, but by firmly fixing a soulful glance on a man you convince the dear thing for the moment he owns your every thought. Then do a little more running away!

And don't tell fibs, and don't say nasty things about other girls, or talk slang, or makes fun of serious things, if you want to find the quickest way to a really nice man's heart.

He may seem not to mind, appear even to be amused by these little failings, but, take my word for it, you're getting off the direct road.

You want the quickest path to a man's heart, but seem to want a sort of mixture of goddness and angel when you get there. don't you?

Then be the thing you want him to think you.

Of course, harmless deceptions, like running just fast enough to be caught, and gazing soulfully when you're thinking what you will have for a Spring hat, don't count.

They are only our "little ways"—the ways that lead us by the quickest route to a man's heart.

CELEBRATES HIS ONE HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY

thought that he would have overtaxed his strength.

His career has been as eventful as it has been protracted. The people of this generation can scarcely imagine the conditions existing when, as a little boy he began to receive his first impressions of life. He has witnessed the advance of civilization through ten decades, and it is only upon looking back that the wonder of them all becomes impressive. The story he could tell would require a volume and in this a meagre synopsis can be given of a few interesting episodes.

First Employment.

When a lad of nine or ten years he earned his first wages of four pence a day—16 hours—for keeping birds away from fresh-sown grain. Like other little fellows his mind might not be at all times on his work, and it was then he would feel the cruel cut of a switch from his employer. At the age of thirteen years he commenced to learn shoemaking, for which privilege he paid a bounty of £5. His apprenticeship lasted seven years, his wages being his board and a scanty supply of clothing. In those days boys had to pay to learn a trade and his father could not afford to begin him at anything which was very costly.

Crossed the Ocean.

In the year 1837 Mr. Mantell sailed on the East India Company's vessel "Brightman" To the Examiner he stated that the passage was made in six weeks and three days, which was considered fast time in those days, when Lusitanias were undreamed of

At Montreal, then but a small place, the women brought to ship roasted pigeons and buns, which they sold to the passengers. The trip was continued in barges on up the St. Lawrence. Horses on the shore drew them up the river and frequently the passengers had to disembark and walk along the shore. Arriving in Toronto Mr. Mantell was in time to take part in the McKenzie rebellion, receiving from the Government a rather important appointment.

Almost Left Canada.

He followed his trade in Toronto, Cobourg and London and during a severe winter in the latter town he decided to go south to a more agreeable clime He set out one day taking his kit of tools, but was overtaken by a storm at a place called North Street. He put up at an inn and in the morning the snow had tied up the country, the roads being impassable. This circumstance resulted in his remaining at this place for nearly 20 years, during which time he was married

Mr. Mantell stated that in those days provisions were plentiful, and very cheap. Beef sold at 25 cents a quarter, and was purchased merely for its tallow, which was used in the making of candles. Every second day he used to walk to London for a supply of bread, and then, after breakfast, commence his daily toil.

Early History.

When a child in England he witnessed the wild joy with which the [illegible] the defeat of Napoleon was received. The older boys used to run through the fields slashing with sticks at weeds, cutting them down, and shouting, "Kill the damn Frenchmen!" This was an illustration of the National spirit of the day.

Punishment of Crime.

He also described the inhuman methods of punishing law-breakers in the early part of the past century. Severity was the general rule, and clemency seldom engaged the considerations of the judges. Besides the stocks and pillories, the gibbet was in common use. When a person had been hung the body was immediately placed in a gibbet, a sort of cage, made of intersecting iron bars. It was connected to the end of a long pole, which was placed upright, and the body left to the public view as a warning.

There it would remain until the carnivorous birds had picked the bones. Pirates were gibetted alive, because they had committed murder on the seas, and Mr. Mantell said that it was not infrequent to hear of them being exposed in the cage of death in expiation of their crimes.

No Educational System.

In education he said that the world has seen great progress. When he was a boy, the schools of any importance were private, and scholars had to pay large fees to enter them. The only public schools were called parish schools, and were situated in the centre of each parish, which was about the same size as an ordinary township. Most of the children therefore, had to walk long distances and on this account were prevented from attending.

The accommodation was most inadequate. The pupils had a piece of slae and pencil to write on. Such a thing as a scribbler was unheard of. The only books in use was the New Testament and Cobb's spelling book. About one out of every 20 could sign his name, so poor was the provision for education.

Infancy of Methodism.

Mr. Mantell also recalls the first time he ever saw the Methodist sect which had then only a few followers. The simple Quaker-like garb of the ministers attracted the attention of the people who gathered out of curiosity. It formed such a contrast with the robes and gowns of the English church clergy that the people laughed at it, not being accustomed to it. Mr. Mantell has always remembered the first text he heard a Methodist preacher speak on. it was, "Our former sins God winked at, but now commands all men, everywhere to repent."

The followers of the new religion did not always fare well. Mr. Mantell said he had heard of them being stoned and had seen them 'ducked.' This latter operation was performed in the big horse-trough which was usually found in front of the taverns. The victim was caught by a number of men and thrown into the trough where he was dipped up and down several times until half-drowned.

The English church ministers had control of the people to some extent. If anyone wanted a 'character' or recommendation he had to get it from the minister and if their displeasure had been incurred this was taken into consideration by the clergyman.

An Honorary Mason.

Mr. Mantell has been living in Peterborugh for eighteen months, having come from Tillsonburg, where, before leaving, he forsook his trade, deciding that he had worked long enough. He lived in that town for 23 years, and on his departure was made an Honorary member of the Masonic Lodge, of which he was the oldest member. He has been a Mason for fifty years, and has always tried to live up to the principles of that order.

The Secret of His Health.

Mr. Mantell states that he had no secret to good health other than regular habits. Regular meals, substantial food and regular hours for sleep are pillars in the foundation of a strong constitution. At one time he used to smoke and has chewed tobacco during recent years. He is not a total abstainer, but, as with tobacco, has always been temperate and good living. His friends hope that he will enjoy continued strength in health and have all his faculties until the inevitable moment arrives, when he will be called to his reward.

NON-JURY SITTINGS OF THE HIGH COURT WILL OPEN ON THE 18th

So Far Only One Case Has Been Inscribed to be Heard—Mr. Robt. P. Parker of Hamilton, vs. Mrs. M. Parker of This City.

TO OPEN AT 10 O'CLOCK.

The non-jury sittings of High Court will be held at the Court House, commencing at 1 o'clock on Tuesday, the eighteenth of May. Word has not yet been received as to who will be the High Court Judge to preside on that occasion.

So far there has been only one case inscribed for hearing, that of Robert E. Parker vs Minnie E. Parker, widow of the late Alfred Parker, and her three children.

The plaintiff is the eldest son of the late Alfred Parker, the stepson of Minnie E. Parker, above named, and half brother of the above named infants. The said Minnie E. Parker and Robert E. Parker were appointed joint administrators of the estate of the late Alfred Parker, which was valued by them at the sum of $41,704.30, of which real estate valued at about $31,000, is in the city of Peterborough and house property representing about $5,000, in the City of Ottawa, but no part of the assets of the firm of A. Parker & Son in Hamilton was included in the estate assets.

The late Alfred Parker and the plaintiff commenced partnership on April 1st, 1908, and carried on business of dyers in the city of Hamilton under the name of Alfred Parker and Son, until the death of the said Alfred Parker.

The said partnership agreement provided, amongst other things, that upon the death of either of them the survivor would become the sole, absolute owner of the stock in trade, machinery, plant, equipment, and other assets of the partnership business of A. Parker & Son, including the real estate and buildings upon and in which the said partnership was carried on.

The plaintiff is ready and willing to pay off and discharge the said mortgage monies so advanced to the said firm by the late Alfred Parker, personally, and to relieve his estate therefrom from all covenants of the late Alfred Parker

The plaintiff claims a declaration that a partnership subsisted between Alf. Parker and himself, in the terms set forth in said writing; a declaration that the whole of the assets of the said firm are now the absolute property of the said plaintiff, and an order vesting the same in the plaintiff.

Messrs. Roger, Bennet and Goodwill, solicitors for the plaintiff, and Dumble and Johnston, for the defendants.

Sick Twenty Years, Had Given Up All Hope.

Pe-ru-na Relieved After All Else Had Failed.

Chronic Internal Catarrh.

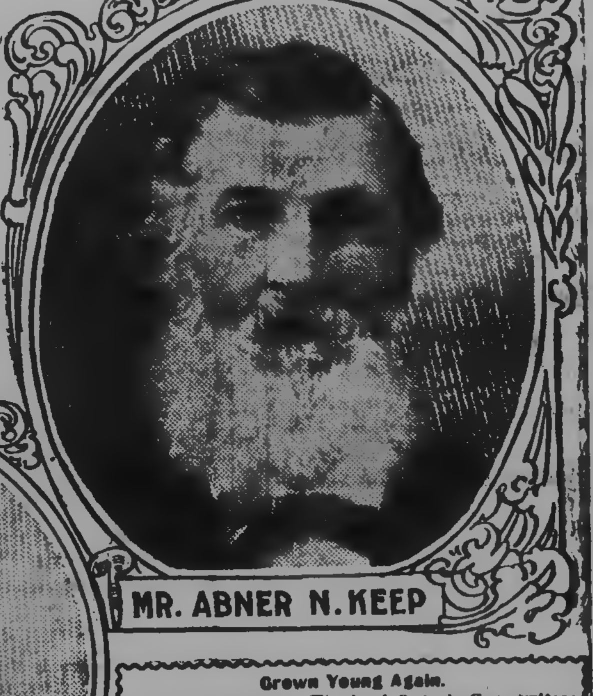
Many an invalid is dragging out a miserable existence with catarrh of the internal organs. There is no disease equal to this in producing complete wretchedness, absolute despair, haggard misery, and stubborn weakness.

An army of this sort of victims have one by one discovered that Peruna could be relied upon to relieve such cases.

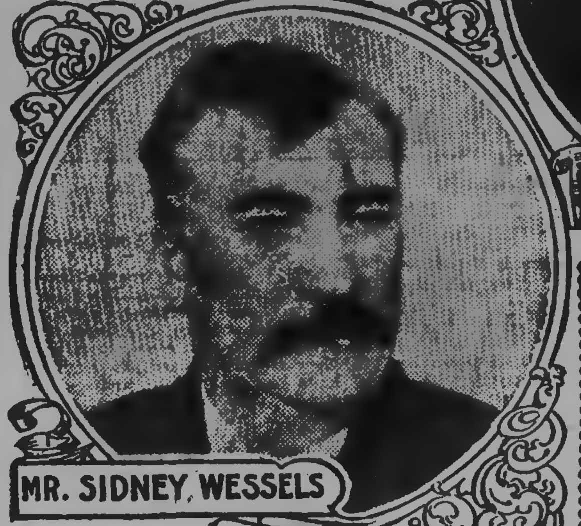
One man tells another man, and in this way the news spreads until in all parts of the country are to be found men who have been permanently liberated from the thraldom of internal troubles.

Many cases of catarrh of the stomach, kidneys and other abdominal organs have reported themselves as permanently relieved.

We give below testimonials which illustrate the benefit of Peruna in these cases.



MR. ABNER N. KEEP



MR. SIDNEY WESSELS

Grown Young Again.

Mr. Abner N. Keep, Vineland, Ontario, Can., writes: "For over twenty years I was a sufferer from catarrh and had tried almost everything I could hear of. I doctored with physicians in Philadelphia and Buffalo, besides with specialists in Nebraska, but did not get relief.

"Finally, after being exhausted in health and funds, I decided to try Peruna. This was after moving to this country two years ago.

"One bottle of Peruna gave relief. After taking five bottles I was sound and well.

"I am eighty-two years old and feel as good to-day as when I was in my thirties.

"I give this for the benefit of the afflicted in general, as I am but one of many in this country who know what it is to contend with sickness and pay out the last dollar in doctor bills."

Appetite Returned, Enjoys Meals.

Mr. Sidney Wessels, Meritton Ontario, Can., writes:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia and indigestion for twenty years, during which time I tried different doctors, but did not get the desired results.

"I have been compelled for weeks at a time to give up work, being completely prostrated. I had to confine myself to a milk diet, as nothing would remain on my stomach.

"I had about given up, thinking my case incurable, when I heard of Peruna and decided to try it.

"One bottle made a great change, and after using another bottle of this wonderful medicine, I had complete freedom from pain, my appetite had returned and I could again enjoy my meals. I believe Peruna is the grandest medicine under the sun."

Mr. Robert E. Hanvey, Treas. Knights of Industrial Freedom, also a well-known writer and lecturer, writes from 118 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill., as follows:

"I was in good health until about four years ago, when my back became lame and sore. The pains kept increasing with severe twitches and slow, exhaustive aches. Urine was highly colored and passed with great irregularity.

"I knew this must be inflammation of the urinary organs.

"Having read of Peruna I decided to try it.

"I found relief from the pain within ten days. The aches gradually diminished, and it was a blessed relief I can assure you.

"Within three months I was well once more. My appetite had returned, nervousness and irritability were things of the past, and for over two years now I have been a healthy man."

Mr. H. L. Emory, Vice Chancellor and Master of Arms, K. P.'s, of Omaha, Neb., writes from 205 North Sixteenth St., the following words of praise for Peruna as a tonic. He says:

"It is with pleasure I recommend Peruna as a tonic of unusual merit. A large number of prominent members of the different orders with which I have been connected have been cured by the use of Peruna in cases of catarrh of the stomach and head; also in kidney complaint and weakness of the pelvic organs.

"Peruna tones up the system, aids digestion, induces sleep, and is well worthy the confidence of sufferers of the above complaints."

Peruna has saved many people from disaster by rendering the kidneys service when they were not able to bear their own burdens.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, May 8.—The market opened with a rush of bullish activity, and with numbers of stocks selling at a new high price on this movement. Rails were quite as strong as industrials although the business in the latter group is broader and there is a deal of buying from commission houses, in fact, commission buying was in much larger proportions than for a long time past. The very favourable trade reports and especially the resumption of buying by the railroads together with optimistic utterances regarding all the metal trades were regarded as sufficient grounds for a further bull movement among industrial stocks. Foreign buying was also a helpful influence as was the reactionary tendency in the wheat market. We expect, if nothing unfavourable occurs over the week's end to see a rush of buying stocks on the bulges, but instead take profits in the stocks which save gone up so fast. Americans irregular in London. Foreign houses had liberal buying orders here. The market sold off a little at the close which was firm. U. S. steel common.

Grain News.

Chicago, May 8.—Liverpool cables 1 ⅛d. lower to ⅛d higher for wheat this morning, causing this market to open about 2 cents lower. There was a little effort made to arlly prices, but too much wheat was offered for sale and prices gradually sagged off again. July lost three cents from yesterday, and closed at about the lowest of the day. The short interest has been eliminated and it looks to us as if this market, especially the deferred options might sell considerably lower. Corn and oats weak with wheat.

THE NEW TRANSPORTATION BUILDING AT THE CANADIAN NATIONAL A FINE HALL

The new Transportation Building, the latest addition to the Canadian National's Exhibition City, is to be substantial, ornate and modern, to be in keeping with the two million dollars worth of other buildings which give the Canadian National Exhibition the most extensve and best equipped exhibition grounds on the continent.

The new Transportation Building, the latest addition to the Canadian National's Exhibition City.

This newest structure is of red pressed brick and buff stone trimmings with concrete foundation and roof supports of trusses of steel. It is 337 feet long by 153 feet wide, and provides 43,000 feet of exhibit floor space. There will be four entrances with ornamental pediments over each entrance and also over the corner pavilions, and a balustrade surrounding the whole building. Toilet accommodation for men and women is provided for at the north and south entrances with drinking fountains at all of them.

With the steady increase in the use of the automobile which, however, does not seem to offset the trade in carriages, buggies, wagons, etc. Transportation is becoming more and more a feature of Exhibitions, and the Canadian National, with its splendid facilities provided by the new Transportation Building, will be in a position to make the most of the feature.

The work of building is already well under way, and August 28th, when the Exhibition opens, will see it complete in every detail.

But this is simply one evidence that the Canadian National is determined to keep not merely abreast, but some distance in advance of the procession. In all other lines the big fair is going ahead. In exhibits of all knds, band music, and special attractions, nothing has been overlooked that will help make August 28th to September 13th red letter days in the Exhibition history of Canada, and keep the Canadian National in its place as one of the greatest annual exhibitions on this or any other continent.

Interesting Story Of A Small Boy's First Business Success

Alf. Veeman, Who Won the First Prize in The Examiner Newsboys' Competition, Gained 54 New Subscribers in a Short Time—A Boy That Should Make Good.

PRIZE WAS CHEQUE FOR $25

An example of what boys can do if they are really eager to do anything but play and fritter away their time upon useless, if not harmful things, has been shown in the Newsboys' Competition recently conducted in the interests of the Examiner. The winner of the first was Alf Veenman, son of Mr. A. C. Veenman, Albert street, Last night, he received twenty-five dollars, the prize to the boy who obtained the largest number of new subscribers to the Examiner before May 1st. He had only to apply himself after school hours, and he set to work in earnest at the first news of the contest. He had more obstacles than the most boys, but he overcame them all and it is probably due to his perseverance more than anything else that he was able to roll the cheque in his pocket; to proudly show his playmates, and to take home to his mother, as his first real assistance.

His Commencement

Alf will soon be fourteen years old. His parents came to Canada a year or two ago from England and on this account the boy was handicapped by not being acquainted by many people and could not secure their subscriptions, on the ground of friendship. When he started he had not even one subscriber. He hustled around and was successful in getting two families to take the paper. A boy was wanted to take a route and among those who presented themselves for it, Alf modestly entered his name. He was chosen and he is still taking it. As boys will be boys there are many who through carelessness or for some other reason, neglect a subscriber at times. In this respect it may be said that Alf has had few if any complaints from his customers.

Result of Working

The two customers, in addition to his route, gradually grew, and when the competition closed he had the largest number of new subscribers. The two had grown to 56 and in a few days there are several others who have promised to begin the paper. Fifty-four new subscribers was his showing and were gained as stated above, only by perseverance. With this increase in the number of papers he carried, he gave the route to his brother and is looking after his customers.

"I am going to have a new suit for Sunday, and I will give the rest of the money to mother," the little chap stated last night, and he seemed quite proud that he could do so.

With so many boys showing incompetency, even in youthful years, it is a pleasure to find a worker and boy whose honesty and gentlemanly qualities have never been questioned. Continuing in the same straight and narrow path which he has entered, Alf should find his way into more important lines than carrying papers. In these he will find the same business principles ruling and the same necessity for honesty, and close attention to the work in hand.

A Little Moral

This should be a lesson to all boys who want to make anything of themselves. In order to succeed they must begin by forming right habits and by acquiring the essentials of business energy and honesty. Boys should also remember that politeness always pays and they should acquire a respectful and gentlemanly demeanor towards those with whom their business brings them into contact.

NIP IT IN THE BLOOD.

First Appearance of Dandruff a Forerunner of Future Baldness.

That such is the case has been conclusively proven by scientific research. Prof. Unna, the noted European skin specialist, declares that dandruff is the burrowed-up cuticle of the scalp caused by parasites, destroying the vitality in the hair bulb. The hair becomes lifeless, and, in time, falls out. This can be prevented.

Newbro's Herpicide kills this dandruff germ and restores the hair to its natural softness and abundancy.

Herpicide is now used by thousands of people—all satisfied that it is the most wonderful hair preparation on the market today.

Will Accommodate 550

The church proper has the latest designed circular seats procured from the Globe Seating Co., of Walkerville. It is capable of seating 450 and the gallery which is on the south side provides for about 100 more, the total capacity being, therefore, 550. A splendid effect is given both the interior and exterior by the coloured Gothic windows, secured from the Hobb's Window Co., of Toronto. The platform and choir pit are in the north side. The gallery has been well planned and tends to enhance the interior appearance. The pastor's room is on the north side and is well arranged.

The Basement

The basement, under the whole building, has been entirely utilized. There is a modern kitchen which will prove its value during socials and at homes. There are two cloak rooms, different Sunday School class rooms, ladies' parlour and other rooms. The Pease furnaces were installed by the Best Stove Company.

A donation of $300 from the Nicholls estate is being used to further equip the library which is also in the basement. Six hundred new volumes are being added, thus bringing up the library to a fine standard.

The electrical equipment of the church is all that could be desired, the chandeliers and lights adding a pleasingly artistic effect. The church is grained throughout, the work being done by Messrs. Johnston and Edwards.

The spacious alcove at the rear of the pulpit platform was designed for a pipe organ which will be installed at a later date.

The Contractors

All the work of building and equipping the church has been done by Peterborough contractors. Mr. Wm. Blackwell prepared the plans and the Gothic style which he selected gives the building a quaint and appropriate appearance. Over the porch there is a French battle tower which when completed will greatly enhance the main design. The stonework was done by Messrs. Sherwood and Burns; the brickwork by Mr. Geo. Haywood; the plumbing by Messrs. Sullivan and Hutchison. The carpenter work was under the supervision of Mr. T. G. Gillespie to whose wise and careful foresight the beautiful interior is largely due. Mr. Lorne Hicks, carried out the electrical equipment in a creditable manner. Mr. Jos. Johnston had the contract for the plastering and Messrs. Johnston and Edwards had the graining. With the exception of the pews the work of erection and equipping was performed by Peterborough men.

A Summary

The church as a whole is a decided asset to Peterborough's fine public buildings. The pastor, Rev. W. C. Ridinford took charge of the congregation when they were contemplating the new church and it is largely due to his zeal, energy and perseverance that the original ideas have been brought to such a splendid culmination. The Ladies' Aid Society have rendered valued service. The cost of the building has been about $12,000 and over half has already been paid. The men of the congregation and especially the members of the building committee have been untiring in their efforts and it is hoped by all that continued and centralization of work will be shown until all the cost has been met and that the Park St. Baptist will maintain its standing as one of the most flourishing churches in Peterborough.

FRUIT AND FISH NEWS FROM HARRY BRADSHAW'S STORE

Starts His Third Year in Business With a Growing Patronage.

Mr. Harry Bradshaw began this week his third year in business with brighter prospects than ever, thanks to his numerous customers, whose numbers are growing larger each year. He wishes to announce that he will have a nice shipment of early strawberries on Saturday. Pineapples are coming in fast because of the hot weather down south. The cool weather in Canada, however, will make them cheap until about the end of May, so that now is the time to lay in a good stock for preserving.

Mr. Bradshaw has also made arrangements to handle fish on a large scale this season. He has contracted with an independent fisherman for daily supplies of trout and whitefish, of just the right size, fresh from Lake Superior, as soon as caught. 2d-107

Mr. J. A. Culverwell Promises That Company Will Set Price On Their Power At Burleigh

Representing the Central Ontario Power Co. He Waited on Council Last Night—Aldermen Demand That the Price be Named Before They Take Any Steps—The Power at Burleigh.

REGARDING OTHER POWER.

Two offers of selling electric power have been received by the city during the past week, apparently demonstrating that Peterborough is in the centre of a power district and that a good supply can be secured from the dams either on the north or on the south. A few nights ago the Seymour Power Company, of Campbellford, presented an offer at a meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council. Last night negotiations were opened for the Burleigh Falls Power with the Central Ontario Power Co. No price was set and the representatives were not in a position to quote it, but it is likely that in a week or two they will set their figures and the negotiations may take on a more material aspect.

Mr. J. A. Culverwell, managing director of the Central Ontario Power Co. was present with Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., of Lindsay, and also of Toronto, and these gentlemen presented reasons why the city should purchase Burleigh Falls Power. It was stated that Peterborough recognized the worth of this power and the aldermen stated that they also were willing to buy, but they would not go ahead unless the company would set their price.

Mr. Culverwell

Mr. Culverwell was the first speaker. He went into the question rather fully. He was only one of the members of the Central Ontario Power Co. and they were desirous of getting a return for their investment. Peterborough was the most likely market for the power. It was almost impossible to get people to believe that the city needed power and as Peterborough realized themselves exactly what they required in this matter, the company were anxious to do business with them.

Mr. Culverwell emphasized the fact that the company had entire control of the power at Burleigh, contrary to some statements which he had heard rumoured. The dam was built there and all that was needed now was the erection of a power house. He pointed out desirable locations for this and stated that the city can bring the power at Burleigh into its limits more cheaply than by any other means of [illegible]. Peterborough could [illegible] from the Burleigh dam and it would be constant through the working hours of the day.

Engineer's Report

[illegible]

Mr. Culverwell stated that they were willing [illegible] the [illegible] and then [illegible] the plant [illegible] operating themselves. This he said would [illegible] Peterborough to bring in power as cheap, if not cheaper, than any other city on the continent.

Mr. McLaughlin

Mr. McLaughlin reminded the council that the city had most rapidly developed during the past ten years. It was not going to stop now, and this fact must be taken into consideration. The future must be provided for and if the city desires to maintain its industrial position, it must be able to supply manufacturing industries with the necessary power. The value of Burleigh Falls to Peterborough was realized by practically every citizen. "If you feel that you do not need this power," he stated, "then we might as well stop right here, but if you are confident that Peterborough is going to continue its growth, is going to bring in new manufactures, it is very apparent that a good electrical power supply is a most important asset."

Conclusion

Mr. McLaughlin did not think that it was fair to ask a price at a preliminary talk over the matter.

Alderman Turner said that the council was tired of the deal with the company holding fire. They wanted something definite to work upon.

Alderman Bradburn would not agree to getting an engineer's report until the company would set their price.

To conclude matter it was moved by Aldermen Bradburn and Buller, that the Central Ontario Power Co. be asked if they wish to sell Burleigh Falls to the city, and if so will they give the city an option, and the offer will be given serious and prompt consideration by the council, as it is desirous of having this power property purchased by the city.

Mr. Culverwell stated that he was pleased to reach this stage. It augured well for the completion of the business which has been under consideration. He stated that there would be a meeting of the company in a week or ten days, and in that time he would be in a position to give the city an option.

During the course of his remarks Mr. Culverwell made a few statements regarding the Seymour Power Co., which he said had only a small amount of power for sale, and they did not own all the power that has been said of them. Mr. Culverwell asked the aldermen to stay with the Burleigh Falls Power proposition. It would give them the best returns and would be one of the cheapest investments they had ever made.

FOUR YOUNG LADIES GRADUATE FROM THE NICHOLLS HOSPITAL

Received Their Medals and Diplomas at the Graduating Exercises at the Collegiate Institute Last Evening—Addresses by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt and Dr. G. Stewart Cameron.

MR. RICHARD HALL

Chairman of Nicholls Hospital, who presided at the graduating exercises last evening.

THE VALEDICTORY.

The Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute held a large and interesting assembly last evning on the occasion of the graduating exercises of the class of 1909, of the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses. Four young ladies received their medals and diplomas after three years of deligent study. Those who graduated were: Misses Laura E. and Clara G. Elliott, of Woodbridge; Rita De La Mater, of Toronto, and Miss Isabel J. Smith, of Cobourg. Miss Laura E. Elliott was the valedictorian, she having obtained the highest percentage of marks.

The chairman of the evening was Mr. Richard Hall, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and seated on the platform were Messrs Wm. Madill, Wm. Kemp, John McClelland, John Green, R. Fair, W. H. Hill, and Revs. J. G. Potter and E. A. Langfeldt, D.D., and Drs. Cameron and Scott.

The evening's programme was instrumental numbers by Misses Helen Davies and C. Reesor, sopranos; Miss Meldrum, piano, and Messrs. Frank Bemrose, of Toronto, and J. Crane, tenors.

Chairman's Remarks

Mr. Richard Hall, in opening said that he very much appreciated the large attendance. It manifested the growing interest being taken by the public. Nicholls Hospital graduates were always in demand both in Canada and the United States. Since the inception of the training school, seventy young ladies had gone forth as trained nurses. At the present time there was a staff of seventeen nurses.

The Nicholls Hospital board were much indebted to the doctors of the city who gave much of their time in lecturing the nurses. During the year, the chairman said, there had bene five hundred and ninety patients treated and only twenty-three had died, which was a splendid record.

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt's Address

Rev. Dr. Langfeldt in his remarks said that once more the opportunity was given the public to pay their respects to the nurses of Nicholls Hospital and to manifest their interest in the hospital and the young ladies who, after diligent study were going forth equipped for the work that laid before them. Judging from the large audience present, the people of Peterborough, Dr. Langfeldt said, were awakening to what Nicholls Hospital meant to them. Few cities of the same size had as fine an hospital as Peterborough and one that cost the ratepayers so little. "We are gratefully reminded," he remarked, "of the late Mrs. Nicholls and the executors of her estate who have endowed so lavishly, this noble institution." It behooved each citizen to do his best to make it even better than it was and if each one would take his share there would be no doubt that Nicholls Hospital would be one of the best in the Province. Every citizen should look upon it as being his or her own property and should do everything to promote its best interests. Dr. Langfeldt said that he had often thought that the people of Peterborough were not demonstrative but probably none the less sincere. However, it was his opinion that a word of encouragement once in a while would do a great deal of good.

In view of the constant demands upon the hospital, the speaker stated that an enlargement of the building would soon be a necessity. The very fact that there are a great many demands upon it, is an evidence of its usefulness and that it is appreciated.

To the graduates, the reverend doctor said that the nursing profession was distinguished by nobility of character and self sacrifice. While a doctor could do a great deal to relieve sickness, the kind treatment of the nurse made many a sick bed pleasant. But it was possible that this noble profession might be degenerated to a mere mercenary consideration. He hoped that the graduates last evening would not make money their chief object, but would bear in mind the words of Christ, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these, My brethren ye have done it until Me."

Dr. Langfeldt spoke in the highest terms of the work of the city physicians, but he suggested, that a house surgeon be appointed if the means would permit such a step. He thought that by not allowing a doctor on the staff of the hospital until he was a resident of the city for one year, was a hindrance to the progress of the institution.

In conclusion, Dr. Langfeldt said that the nurses of Nicholls Hospital compared favourably with those of any hospital. He urged the graduates to be loyal to their training school and to speak well of it, so that there would be a greater interest and co-operation on the part of the citizens, in the work of the hospital.

Address to Graduates

Dr. G. Stewart Cameron, in his address to the graduating class, took occasion to thank the chairman for his kind remarks regarding the [illegible]. He said that with the last century millions of dollars had been spent in the establishment of hospitals. He hoped that as the funds of the Nicholls Hospital increased, it would become more efficient than it was at present. He referred in complimentary terms to the superintendent and nurses of the hospital. The nurses at all times showed a willingness to learn and often gave up pleasures that they might direct their attention to their studies.

Speaking of the noble profession of nursing, Dr. Cameron dwelt at some length on the life of Florence Nightingale. Everyone in starting out in life should set before them some high ideal and there could be none better than that of doing some good for others. Florence Nightingale was born of wealthy parents, but notwithstanding this, she gave up all in the service of her country. Everyone knew of her untiring zeal and self sacrifive in caring for the sick and wounded in the Crimea war. It was she who started the first training school for nurses in London, giving the gift of the English Government for her services, towards erecting the St. Thomas Hospital.

Absolutel thoroughness and devotion to work were the essentials for success and he hoped that whenever the graduates would be called that success would attend them.

Presentation of Diplomas

The graduates then repeated the charge to the nurses, after Dr. W. D. Scott and the diplomas were presented by Mr. Richard Hall. The medals were presented by Mr. John McClelland and pinned on by the superintendent, Miss De La Mater. The presentation of numerous beautiful bouquets of flowers was then made by a little girl amid the unabated applause of the audience.

The presentation of the bandaging prize to Miss Isabel J. Smith was made by Dr. Scott, who took occasion to congratulate her and to address a few remarks to the class.

The Valedictory

Hiss Laura E. Elliott read the following valedictory address:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:

This is graduation day for another class of nurses in the Nicholls Hospital.

Throughout our course we have been taught to move quietly, speak low, and talk little and, in a Valedictory, you cannot expect a representative of the graduating class to belie all this teaching and training.

Three years have gone quickly and now we are about to leave the kindly protection of our hospital and strike out into the world for ourselves to put into practise the many things we have learned.

In a hospital so well and so abundantly equipped as ours, so efficiently managed and with so many kind and conditions of people constantly coming and going—we could not fail to learn much from our splendid opportunities for for practical experience.

The liberality of its founders has given Peterborough a hospital second to none in cities of its size—and, indeed, in many that are larger. But gifts and endowments can be wasted and often are. Yet in our case, the wisdom and foresight of the board are such, that under their management the hospital has grown and developed into a mighty blessing to the city and surrounding country.

To Miss De La Mater we owe, in a large measure, that successful issue of our three years' work which we are here to-night to commemorate. Her tact and devotion to our welfare has been constantly shown in the generous treatment we have received at her hands—and the present occasion is one more tribute to her ability to train her nurses for the battle against disease and death, in which her heart and brain have been directing us during the term.

In mentioning those to whom our tribute is due for any success we may have attained in our work—we must not forget the names of our assistant-superintendents, Miss Helen Coleman, who was with us for a great part of our course—Miss Ratcliffe, one of our own graduates, and Miss McGregor, lately come to the hospital, but who has already proved herself worthy of high position.

The relations between the graduating class and the junior staff have always been of the best, and our stay with them has been as pleasant as it well could be in the midst of such suffering as we meet with day by day.

To the medical staff our grateful thanks are due for the unfailing kindness and consideration shown to us in many trying and difficult duties, and for the valuable instruction given on the various subjects connected with our course of training.

It is always pleasing to realize that an aim which we have long held in view has been at last attained—but now—as we are about to leave the place of our training and enter on our life work we find we have grown to love the work and the place and we regret the separation which must follow.

No matter where we may go—or what our future may hold—we shall always have happy memories of the pleasant and busy days we spent in the Nicholls Hospital.

Among these not the least pleasant will be the memory of this evening when by their presence here—so many of the friends of our class and the institution have shown their appreciation of what the Nicholls Hospital has done—is doing—and will continue to do.

A SENSATIONAL SHOOTING AFFRAY AT WINDSOR IN WHICH POLICE WERE HURT

Windsor, Ont., May 8.—Two police officers, Sergt. Reid and Constable Lister, and George Quamby, janitor of the City Hall, were wounded seriously in a sensational shooting affray last night in police headquarters, located in the basement of the municipal building.

Word had come to the police station that a stranger was attempting to sell a bicycle to a secondhand dealer, whose suspicions were aroused that the wheel was stolen. Sergt. Reid went down and invited the supposed owner of the bicycle to accompany him to headquarters.

The prisoner was being registered and searched when he whipped out and fired a 38-calibre revolver. The first shot passed through Lister's right arm, the second through Quamby's left arm, and the third slipped off a portion of Reid's index finger on his left hand.

The would-be murderer then turned and fled, with Reid in pursuit.

In the corridor another shot was fired at Reid, but it passed under his arm, just grazing him. A final shot was fired through the window in the door at the entrance to the court-room.

Reid kept after his man and chased him on block, when he saw Officer Cade, and the two officers succeeded in locating their quarry in a lumber yard, cowering behind a pile of wooden posts.

He was taken back to headquarters and lodged in a cell. He gave his name at Herman Martin, aged 23, but told various stories of his address, including Colorado, Milwaukee and Berlin, Ont. Chief Wills is inclined to think the latter is correct, as the prisoner mentioned the Wellington Rifles, and said he had been a musician in that regiment.

Quamby is the most seriously injured. The bullet shattered his arm and lodged in the shoulder. He is suffering severly from shock. He is 51 years of age, but has a rugged constitution. Lister is a veteran member of the force, having served over 30 years. His wound is not serious, but he is weak from loss of blood, and suffers also from shock.

STARTLING STATEMENT

It's Statements Like That of H. Heyman, Kingston, Ont., That is Making Mi-o-na World Famous For Obstinate Stomach Complaints.

Mr. H. Heyman, 132 Colborne street, Kingston, Ont., says: "Mi-o-na is worth its weight in gold as a remedy to quickly cure long-standing cases of dyspepsia. For years I had suffered with my stomach and could find no cure nor even relief. I could not eat anything, as it would sour and form gas on my stomach that had a pressure on the heart. Heavy pains would come around my sides and pit of my stomach. I was unable to sleep for this and there was nothing to relieve my miserable condition. I was weak and languid and would feel as tired in the morning as on going to bed and perspiration would break out all over my body. I would be so weak from vomiting that I would fall to my knees. My head would ache and spells of dizziness would leave me unable to see. Doctors had termed the trouble gastritis, but failed to benefit me. I tried Mi-o-na, of which I procured a bottle on the advice of a friend, which has cured me when all else failed. I am sound and well and feel grateful to Mi-o-na for my present health."

It's the known results obtained by Mi-o-na that places it far and away above all other remedies and confirms Wm. Madill in offering to refund the money if Mi-o-na fails to cure stomach troubles call and get your money back.

AN EXPLANATION

Reading the charge which Herbert Spring, a lad of 16, laid against his former employer, his parent states that his action was unknown to them at home. When they learned of it they tried to have it withdrawn, but were told that it would cos considerable and they had to let it proceed. The action of the employer was just what the parents had requested of him, and they regret very much that the court saw fit to impose a fine. The employer was going to appeal the case, but on the mother's pleading hu allowed it to pass. The step-mother of the boy asked the Examiner to make this explanation and also to state that it was done with a boy's impetuosity and he was now sorry for his action.

It has been announced at the Salvation Army Citadel that the proposed improvements and changes to the barracks will be begun this month. A reference has been made some time ago to what these changes were, and the people are looking forward to the adornment and enlargement of the building. THREE MARATHONS IN NEW YORK.

Examiner Special.

New York, May 8th.—To-day is surely Marathon day in this city. No less than three classics will be decided during the afternoon. Two of them will have the best amateurs in the country striving for honors, and the other will be for professionals."

The one for "Pros" is the $10,000 international race and will bring together the fastest distance runners in the world. In class and number of entries it will excel the recent Derby.

Practically all of those who ran themselves into a state verging on collapse chasing the fast St. Yves in that race are entered, and besides them there will be several other champions, several of whom have been picked to defeat the flying Frenchman.

While St Yves will be the favourite for the race, John Svanberg, the Swede, Louis Cibot, the Frenchman, who won the recent six-day-go-as-you-please-race and John D. Marsh, who won the Canadian Marathon, have a host of followers who claim that they will be far ahead of St. Yves at the end of the long journey. The race will be held at Polo Grounds immediately after the baseball game at American League Park.

And while these great runners are speeding around the course endeavouring to gain fame and American dollars, more than a hundred of this country's fastest amateurs will be striving for the amateur title and handsome cups.

In connection with one of the Marathons a set of games will be held. Under the auspices of the Northwestern A. C., the Bronx Marathon race, which was postponed from yesterday, and the Brooklyn Marathon, which the Acorn A. C. had booked for Saratoga Park yesterday, will be run.

In each of these many great runners will compete. Henry Renaud, the New Hampshire lad, who won the recent Boston classic, is the favourite for the Bronx race. He arrived in this city on Friday, and said he was in better condition than when he defeated his two hundred opponents in Boston. Opposed to Renaud in this race will be many runners whose class stamps them as worthy rivals of the New Hampshire hero.

Jim Crowley, Harry Jensen and Jim Clarke are the favourites for the Brooklyn race. All of them have Marathon victories to their credit and each is confident that he will win this race.

The open games at the Bronx Oval, which will be decided while the Marathon runners are travelling over the hills of Worchester and the Bronx, will bring to the mark twoscore of the best athletes in the metropolitan district. Among them are metropolitan and national title holders. In the list of entries are George Bonhag, Harry Porter, Bobby Cloughen, Lawson Robertson and Billy Keating.

BEST PERFORMANCES OF THE STARTERS IN TO-DAY'S MARATHON

What the Dozen Men Who are Battling for Their Share of the $10,000 Purse Have Done in the Past—Some Famous Runners in the Squad of Marathoners.

To-day's big Marathon race in New York is attracting wide-spread attention and promises to be a spectacular event if the fame of the starter is to be taken as a guarantee. They come from many different countries and have got some mighty good records tucked away with them. The following dope gives the nationality and best performance of each.

Henri St. Yves, France—Won the American $10,000 Derby. Did Marathon distance in trial run in 2:31.

Louis Cibot, France—Won the International six-day go-as-you-please contest with Orphee as a partner.

Orphee, Fronce—Won the International six-day go-as-you-please contest with Cibot as a partner.

John D. Marsh, Canada—Won the Canadian $5,000 Derby in 2:39:47.

Fred Simpson, Canada—Twice second in the Hamilton Herald race. Beat Fred Appleby, of England.

John Svanberg, Sweden—Ninth in Olympic Marathon, England, fourth in Olympic Marathon, Athens.

Fred Appleby, England—Holder of the world's fifteen mile championship. Did 15 miles in 1:20, defeating Alf. Shrubb.

Pat. White, Ireland—Second to Henri Siret, of France, in the English professional Marathon.

Mat. Maloney, United States—Won Amateur Marathon in 2:36.

Carcavajel, Cuba—Won endurance contest in Havana, against a relay of nine runners.

Crook, United States—Best performances, 15 miles in 1:27. Twenty miles in 2:04:40.

Dorando Pietri, Italy—First over the line in Olympic Marathon, but was disqualified, second in the New York Marathon Derby.

SHRUBB EXPECTS A HARD RACE.

Alf. Shrubb, speaking of his chances against Longboat in to-day's race at Montreal said:

I feel in great shape for my race on Saturday. I ran seven miles to-day, and after I had finished I saw Longboat run six miles; and after what I saw about him to-day he will give me a great race. I shall not have it all my own way. I can see that after to-day. He has been training hard for nearly two weeks now, and he looks to me in great shape. However, I will do my best to win.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

Baltimore turned the tables on Torontos yesterday, and Joe Kelley's band were beaten at the Island by 6 runs to 2, in a game that was marked by free hitting on both sides. Baltimore bunched theirs, however, and Torontos did not hit with men on bases. Both teams had an even dozen hits, Hall for Baltimore and Houser for Toronto banging out home runs over the right field bleachers. Torontos did some snappy fielding getting their usual double play. Moffitt pitched seven innings for Toronto and Hickey finished the game. Dessau was on the rubber for Baltimore.

Jersey City walloped Buffalo 2 to 0 yesterday, thus breaking the losing streak of the Skeeters. Merritt pitched for Jersey City and Taylor for Buffalo.

The games between Providence and Rochester at Rochester, and between Montreal and Newark at Montreal, were postponed on account of wet grounds.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

In the National League Pittsburg made it eight wins in a row by beating St. Louis 5 to 3. The Pirates got fifteen hits. Rhodes, who started the game, only lasted until the fifth, when he gave way in favour of Sallee. All pitchers look alike to the Pirates, and they hammered the ball to all parts of the lot. Willis worked for Pittsburg and was never in danger.

The Cubs Again.

The Cubs seem to have found themselves again and yesterday shut out Cincinnati 5 to 0. Hagerman having the honour of pitching the first white wash battle for the Cubs. He held the Reds to six hits, while Fromme was touched up for nine.

Bowerman Gloats.

Frank Bowerman had another laugh at New York yesterday. The Boston manager was traded to that club by the Giants, and he has been their hoodoo all season. Boston won yesterday by 2 to 1 after a pitchers' battle between Rube Marquard and Mattern, each of which allowed but four hits. Boston won in the eighth when they scored two runs on a pass, Sweeney's two-bagger, and an infield out and the squeeze play.

The Sluggers Lost.

Brooklyn's winning streak was broken yesterday when Philadelphia stopped the Dodgers. Foxen, formerly of Jersey City, who worked for the Phillies was invincible until the ninth, when Brooklyn scored one. Meantime, however, the Phillies had piled up four. Rucker started for Broklyn, and was driven out of the box, Wilhelm finishing out.

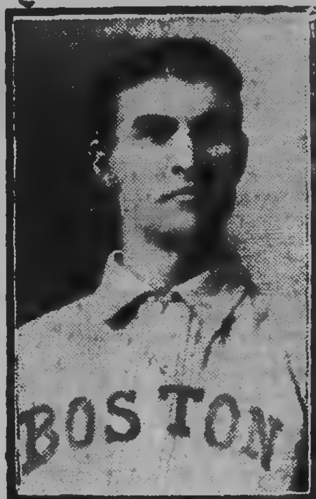
THE AMERICAN LEAGUE.

In the American League, Washington was beaten by Philadelphia 1 to 0, in a pitchers' battle between Coombs and Johnson, the latter allowing five and the former seven hits. The winning run was scored in the ninth, when Murphy hit for three bases, and scored on Freeman's wild throw in.

Fight at New York.

There was a little more than ordinary excitement thrown in to the New York-Boston game in New York. In the first place it took twelve innings to decide the contest, the Highlanders winning out 4 to 3. New York got but four hits off Chech, while the Bean Eaters got only three off Pitchers Newton and Lake. The latter won his own game by a timely double, followed by a single by Cree. A little mix-up between Kid Elberfield and Umpire Tim Hurst was the second feature of the game. The "Kid" disputed a decision and bumped into Hurst, who immediately slapped a right swing to the jaw. Elberfield was thereupon put out of the game.

TRADED BY McGRAW HE IS GIANTS HOODO



FRANK BOWERMAN

This is the little man who has captured John T. Graw's goat.

He is Frank Bowerman, manager of the Boston National League club, the man who made Romeo, Mich., famous. Bowerman is a popular citizen of Romeo (see map) when he is not piloting the pesky athletes form the centre of learning, the town which some one says looks like a clam and isnt' an oyster.

You remember Bowerman was one of the Giants released by McGraw a year or so ago when he made his famous trade? Ever since that day the backstop has been a thorn in the side of the pugnacious manager. This year Frank is a pilot as well as McGraw and in the early games has had the satisfaction of putting it over on his former boss.

The following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Rev. Mr. Riddiford.

ENTHUSIASTIC OVER THE SCRAP

Fight Fans Glad To Hear of Next Wednesday Night's Mit Fight.

The announcement that Jimmy Kelly, of Buffalo, and Tommy Daly, of Toronto, has set the fight fans going, and there promises to be a big crowd on hand in Brock St. Rink next Wednesday night, when the bout will be pulled off. The reputation both boys have got of being clever hard hitting boxers, who will mix it from the first gong, makes it a certainty that the bout will be a hard fought one from start to finish. Both are in shape as they have had several bouts on their hands recently. Daly has many friends here and Kelly won admiration for himself by his fight against Corny Burns in the Roller Rink.

There will be a good preliminary bout and a fine evening's sport may be looked forward to.

THREE MIDLAND LEAGUE GAMES BILLED TO-DAY

Three games are being played in the Midland Football League to-day. All of them in district No. 1, and good matches should be the result in every case, although the teams have had little opportunity to practice, owing to the backward weather. Following are games scheduled for to-day:

Peterborough Y.M.C.A. at Bethany.
Referee—G. Skelding of the Brintons team.
Oshawa at Bowmanville.
Referee—Leslie Wilson of Cobourg.
Cobourg at Oshawa, St. Georges.

ROLLER RINK.

Tuesday May 11th, Fox Chase, Great Sport for all.

WITH THE RUNNERS.

The New York World publishes the following letter:

To the Sporting Editor of The World:

A few words from a Havanees just to tell you that when the big Marathon comes off and the representatives of 'steen nations (including P. and P.) run their little twenty-six mile jaunt, you had better keep an eye or two, if you can spare both, on Carvajal.

We New York Cubans will be out in full force, and you'll easily discern us from the Swedes, Dagoes, Cockneys, table-de-hoters, and the good old Americans (vide G. M. Cohan) by the flags and paraphernalia we'll display, no less than by the following slogan in purest Castilian.:

"Ibbity Bibbity, Zibbity, Zal, Ibbity, Bibbity, Carvajal."

Which, translated in up-to-date Bowery, means:

"Carve-a-chicken, carve-a-fowl, Carve-a-lemon, Carvajal."

After he wins, you'll probably say: "It was the turn of some other nation — next time it'll be a Young Turk."

Y.M.C.A. TEAM FOR BETHANY TO-DAY

The following team left for Bethany to-day to represent the Y.M.C.A. in their first Midland League game of the season:

Goal—McFadden.
Backs—Fleming and Flowers.
Half Backs—Sisson, Patton and Armstrong.
Forwards—Milburn, Barrie, French, Canniff and Castor.

Physical Director S. W. Collins accompanied the team.

DONOVAN HELD IN RESERVE DETROIT'S WIN JUST THE SAME

"BILL" DONOVAN."

The American League champions are leading the procession. Last season Jennings could not make the tribe claw in unison for some time after the opening and predictions were made that the champions of the year before had become household pets.

But this was soon changed and the brick-haired grass puller led his crew over the line by th ewidth of one of those blonde hairs referred to as "such fine hair."

But it's diffeernt this year. The Tigers began snarling from the crack of the gun and are going so fast they promise to open all sorts of distance between themselves and No. 2 before midseason.

And just think of it! Jennings hasn't loosed his Royal Bengal up to date. He is holding him until the kettles start boiling in the maple bushes, for fear his coat will be mussed. The question bothering the league is, "If Detroit can remain in front without Donovan, what's going to happen when Jennings slips his leash?"

The Perfect Type of Man

No two men were ever all alike. When they match at the chest they differ in waist or in length of limb.

Different ways of walking have their effect upon one's carriage. Shoulders never really match. It is impossible to produce clothes which will absolutely fit unless the figure of the wearer is normal, and every man's figure must be specially studied. All properly fitting clothes must possess a corresponding unlikeness.

By the Semi-ready physique type system of tailoring every garment can be quickly finished to shape and to overcome figure defects. The finisher can intensify or diminish height—build out hollow spots, and improve a physique so cleverly that he has to all appearances produced this perfect type.

The occasional streaks of warm weather which have been doled out to us somewaht sparingly during the past week, have given rise to the long deferred hope that spring is with us for keeps and in following the natural sequence of things, the thoughts of a large proportion of Peterborough's population swing around to anticipatory visions of the delights of vacation time, which of course brings up the question of summer resorts and waht changes will be found there this year.

While the time is nearly two months away when most of Peterborough's business men will be grass widowers, while wives and children are getting a coat of tan and an abundance of good health at one or other of the many breathing spots that have been so richly bestrewn in the vicinity of this city, yet it is not too early for the preparing of plans for the season when such things come around.

The intervening weeks will soon slip around and it will not seem long before the annual exodus of holiday makers from Peterborough to the summer resorts will be in full swing. Most Peterborough people have to wait of necessity until the schools are closed down before they can abandon their permanent homes for their summer residences, but the people from across the line, the light-hearted, free spending sons and daughters of Uncle Sam will be here before that time. Next month will see a large number of them over for the summer, and the advance guard, in fact, is here already in the person of Mr. Hopkins, of Boston, always the first to arrive, who went up to Boscobel, his summer home at Boschink, on Wednesday, and who will remain there until the cold weather comes next fall.

Stony Lake, the most popular of the resorts in the district, is still "rough" enough to please the man that wants to get away from the call of fashion and society and yet possesses all the advantages of civilization. A man can live in a tent, wear an old sweater and a pair of trousers of the 1895 vintage and fish to his heart's content in solitude if he wants to, or he can, if so he prefer, live in a comfortable hotel, wear the latest in cuting clothes, and spend the days in idling and the nights in dancing. The two courses are open to him at Stony Lake or he can take the middle channel and fish in his old clothes in the day time and dance in his "glad" togs in the evening.

There are plenty of both classes at Stony Lake, but they manage to get along comfortably together. Of course the old timer will sneer a little as he paddles along with vigorous stroke, sending his light canoe flying through the water, at the spectacle afforded by a visitor from across the line lolling in the stern of a skiff with a steel rod swung over the side while a guide rows him around the fishing beds.

Your old timer somehow resents the invasion of the visitors who do not seem inclined to rough it as was the custom at Stony Lake, but he is too polite to show his feelings, and there is never any difficulty. There is plenty of room at Stony Lake for both classes of summer visitors.

Most people are glad to see the influx into Stony Lake from Rochester, Buffalo and other American cities along the border and they are warmly welcomed. They add a picturesque variety to the population of Stony Lake, do those nattily dressed girls and modish young men from across the line even if they are sometimes inclined to hang out the star spangled banner with a few Geo. M. Cohen effects. They will soon be here, possibly not so many as last year, but yet there will be plenty of them and they will be cordially received as usual when they do come.

They will find very few changes at Stony Lake this year except that a number of the boarding houses have changed hands. There will be a new proprietor of the Victoria House, McCracken's landing, Mr. E. Picken, of Lakefield, having succeeded Messrs. Carveth and Freemen who have been in charge for the past three years. Extensive improvements are being planned and the facilities will be greatly enhanced.

There will be a new Vemede this year. The famous tourist headquarters was visited by a disastrous fire last fall, but is being rebuilt and will soon be ready for the opening of the season. A vastly improved building or rather series of buildings, have been erected, and the many people who make Vemeude their summer home, will no doubt appreciate the enterprise of Mrs. Graham.

Further up the lake, at Crowe's Landing, "Belvidere," one of the newer summer resorts, has changed hands, having been purchased by Mr. Webster, of Lakefield, from the former owner Mr. J R McKelvie, of Norwood. Many people will spend the summer there, the fame of the beauty of the scenery and the excellence of the fishing of that portion of the lake having spread.

South Beach grows bigger year by year, and this season will find another big increase to the popular hotel conducted by Mr Brooks. South Beach is called upon each year to handle a larger number of guests and no doubt, in spite of the increased accommodation Mr. Brooks will have no room to spare when the season proper opens.

Mr. Warren Darcy will again be in charge of the Burleigh Falls Hotel, and Mr. Wm. Thompson will be at Mount Julian. Both are making preparations for the season, and will be better equipped than ever to look after the comforts of their guests.

The same condition of affairs is true at Young's Point, where the proprietors of the different hotels will soon have everything in good shape for the opening. A big season is expected at the Point.

All the hotels and boarding houses will necessarily have to have things in a better condition from a sanitary standpoint than ever before. The Water Commissioners have decided that all the larger places must instal septic tanks, and have appointed Mr. Geo. Cochrane to see that the work is carried out. Mr. Cochrane will, in all probability make a tour of the lake on Monday.

There will be no change in the steamboat service or in the personnel of the crews of the different steamers. Th Stoney Lake Navigation Company will have the steamers Stoney Lake, Capt. Scollard, Steamer Empress, Capt. Robinson, and the Steamer Majestic, Capt. P. Young, Jr., in commission and will give the same courteous and efficient service as in other years. The Otonabee Navigation Company will run a steamer from Peterborough to Stony Lake daily, during the season, as they did last year.

Chemong Park.

Next in favour among the summer resorts frequented by Peterborough people is Chemong Park. Here the conditions are altogether different; naturally so when the geographical aspect of the case is considered. The people at Chemong are like one large happy family. They live within a few yards of their neighbours, and intercourse is much more convenient than at Stony Lake, where the highways are built on the Venice pattern. Chemong Park is so easily accessible from the city that business men are enabled to spend the evenings with their family, an impossible condition at Stony Lake. The big auto car and the stage make an evening trip to the park, which is much appreciated by the business men. Some of these, however, prefer to wheel out, and thus the spectacle is daily seen of patrefamilias toiling up one of the six hills, hot and dusty, but with Excelsior as his motto and the ozone laden breezes from the pines luring him on.

Chemong will flourish this summer, indications pointing to a bigger crowd than during the past season. The hotel will be in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Brown, and under their popular management should have a most successful summer. Improvements are being made and the hotel is in good order to receive visitors.

A number of Peterborough people are already making arrangements to move out to the park, but the backward weather has delayed operations and it will be some weeks before the advance guard of the colony arrives.

As usual sailing is expected to be a big feature of the holiday pleasures at Chemong, a number of new sailing craft will, it is said, be added to the fleet this season, and some exciting brushes may be looked forward to when the rival skippers spread their canvas to the breeze. Chemong will receive a large quota of visitors from across the line this year and the season will be a particularly gay one.

Rice Lake.

Rice Lake, the third in the trinity of Peterborough's summer resorts, while not as well known or as widely patronized as the others, is equally beautiful in its own way. In fact many people prefer its scenery and surroundings to those of either Stony Lake and Chemong and, indeed, as regards fishing, especially for maskinonge, Rice Lake is probably the best of all the chain that surrounds Peterborough. It is a beautiful sheet of water and the resorts on its shores are as pretty as any in the neighbourhood of Peterborough. It is becoming most popular with a large number of people, and will attract many visitors this season. The different hotels and boarding houses on the lake are making arrangements for the opening of the season. The Otonabee Navigation Company and the other steamboat owners will give a good service to the lake this season, and if the electric railway to the lake from Cobourg materializes it will tend to boom things generally.

THIS FATHER FEELS PROUD OF SON'S NAME

Enough to Corner World, says the Parent, if There is Anything in a Name.

Oxford, Md., May 8.—The Kentuckian, Chiles, who died the other day from what many persons believe was a surplusage of names, may have been more widely known than Paul Taylor, a young man residing with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cadmus C. Taylor, near here, but it is certain that the deceased Kentuckian's conglomeration of names do not possess the "true lyric touch" that is to be found in young Taylor's. The elder Taylor says that his son's name is Paul Ignatius Abel O'Gratius Theodore Stevedore Pleiades Socrates Naylor Taylor.

"Can there be found to-day a more poetical name in the whole country than this?" he asks. "If there is anything in a name Paul certainly has enough to corner the world by the time he reaches his fortieth year. To say the least, he ought to own the Eastern Shore and all that is therein, for he is the most distinguished personage on the whole peninsula when it comes to a name."

The way a RUSSELL car climbs hills

The way it plows through sand and mud that would stagger an ordinary machine—the way it stands up for months and years of pounding, jostling service over rough roads: these are the things to consider in your choice of a car. : : : : : :

We have recently received the following telegram from Mr. Fred. S. Crosby, St. John, N.B., to whom we recently shipped a RUSSELL "Thirty" Touring Car:

St. John, N. B.—Car received. It's a corker; takes everything on high gear.
(Signed) FRED. S. CROSBY

It is so every time. Mr. Crosby's satisfaction is the common experience of every owner of a RUSSELL car. But, most important of all, it's a satisfaction that has only just begun.

It is a significant fact that the most enthusiastic praise for the RUSSELL comes from those who have driven the car not for a week or a month, but for year in and year out.

That is becuase quality is built into it—quality that you can see in external things and qualily that you can't see as well.

When a car like the RUSSELL has persistently made good for years, is it not worth investigating before you buy?

The RUSSELL is reliable—absolutely. It is comfortable—wonderfully so. It has the standard features adopted by the leading cars of the world.

Models from $1,500 to $4,500, 18 to 50 Horsepower.

Two Leading Cars: Model L, $2,000, 24 horsepower, the RUSSELL "Thirty," Model H, $2,500. Each the extreme value for the price—each standard in all features and contruction. Model H is large with more powerful motor than Model L, and with a degree of elegance usually found only in cars costing far more. Ask for a demonstration. Shall we not send you our catalogue?

OTONABEE FARMER KNOCKED DOWN AND CLUBBED BY TWO UNKNOWN MEN WHO TRIED TO ROB HIM OF HIS MONEY

Alfred Gaddy, Who Resides About Two Miles and a Half From the City, a Victim of Dastardly Assault Saturday Night--Lives Alone

ASSAILANTS ESCAPED.

Cries of Murder Attracted Neighbours—A Stick of Wood With Which He Was Struck Found—Defended Himself With Lantern.

With vehement cries of "Murder! Murder!" that could be heard, it is said, for a distance of three-quarters of a mile, Alfred Gaddy, who resides on his farm in Otonabee, about two and a half miles from the city, brought several of his neighbours to his rescue last evening, between nine and ten o'clock. Gaddy is a man of about sixty years of age, and was evidently a victim of a most dastardly assault last night, shortly after 9 o'clock by two unknown men. The apparent intention of the thugs was to rob the old man, but failing in this, they made off, and no trace of them has since been learned. It is believed that they were persons who knew the old man and that they are not strangers to that vicinity. Mr. Gaddy, fortunately, was not seriously injured, there being a mark on the side of his head, where, it is thought, he was struck by a club. The police are investigating the affair.

Wanted Buggy Fixed.

With the pretence that he wanted some wire to fix the shaft of a buggy, which he had broken, one of the young men called at Mr. Gaddy's house, and asked if he could furnish a little. Mr. Gaddy did not have the desired wire, but procured some binder twine. He lighted a lantern, and the two proceeded to where the vehicle was supposed to be. The young man took Goddy up the road about fifty yards from his gate. There was no buggy there at all, but a second man loomed into sight, who asked the first where he was going. He was told to wait a few minutes and the two would walk up the road together.

Immediately after he had uttered these words, it is said, the one who had made the request, swung around and hit the old man on the head. Gaddy, however, retaliated, by striking his assailant with the lantern. The old man stated that the two got at him then and beat him, and went through his pockets, but his cries evidently scared them and they made away.

Found the Stick.

Mr. Robert Wilson, a neighbour of the assaulted man, was soon on the scene, followed by about five or six others, who had heard the cries. Gaddy was lying on the side of the road.

The Examiner communicated with Mr. Wilson last evening and learned the particulars of the affair. Mr. Wilson found the stick with which the blow was struck and he is of the opinion that it was taken from Mr. Gaddy's wood pile. Mr. Gaddy was very excited and pretty badly frightened. He said that he would be able to identify the two men. They were quite young, fairly well dressed, and one had a very red face.

Saw Man Running.

While walking home, between nine and ten o'clock, another resident of Otonabee met a young man running towards the little store at the end of the street railway on the opposite side of the river. The fellow was going very fast and not looking ahead of him, ran right into the farmer. Nothing further was seen of him.

CHOIR OF ST. JOHN'S HAD REHEARSAL

The second rehearsal for the Choral Festival to be given in St. John's Church by the choir on Wednesday, May 19th, was held last night with good results. Chorus and orchestra entered heartily into the spirit of the music, and everything points to a really excellent rendering of all the numbers when the date arrives.

HEAVY SENTENCE FOR THE TWO KIDNAPPERS

Jas. Boyle Gets Life Sentence, While Mrs. Boyle is Fined $5000 and Costs and Goes to Penitentiary for a Term of Twenty-five Years---Kidnapped Willie Whitla of Sharon, Pa.

J. N. Barber, Special.

Mercier, Pa., May 10.—James Boyle, who was convicted of kidnapping little Whillie Whitla, of Sharon, some weeks ago, was sentenced here this morning, receiving the heaviest sentence that the law would permit, i.e. life imprisonment. Helen Boyle, his wife and accomplice in the crime, was sentenced to a term of twenty-five years in the Western Penitentiary, and was in addition fined $5,000 and costs. The case has caused the greatest interest all over the State. The severity of the sentence was not expected, as it was thought that the pair would get off with a lighter punishment.

St. Andrew's Congregation Celebrates Anniversary Of Their Pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter

Yesterday was the twentieth anniversary of the ordination of Rev. J. G. Potter to the ministry and the event was observed by special services at St. Andrew's Church. Rev. Alexander McGillivray, of Bonar Presbyterian Church, Toronto, who ordained Mr. Potter, was the preacher at both services and large congregations were present. At the evening services Mr. McGillivray outlined the duties of the Christian church in an able sermon that was followed with deep interest.

Mr. McGillivray's sermon at the morning service was principally to parents and Sunday School workers.

The musical services at both services were of a high standard. The anthem at the morning service was "Gentle Jesus Gently Lead Us," and at the evening service "Abide With Me," the solo being taken by Rev. Mr. Potter.

In the morning Miss Mabel McCaw sang very sweetly "I think when I read that sweet story of old," and at the evening service she sang "Abide With Me." Mr. Mortimer Johnston sang a solo in fine voice at the morning service and Principal Downie was heard to fine advantage at the evening service in a solo, "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Potter referred in feeling language to the death of Mrs. Wm. Bennet, wife of Rev. Wm. Bennet, who passed away Sunday morning.

A congregational reunion will be held this evening. There is no admission fee and one of the features will be an address by Rev. Mr. McGillivray on "A Trip to the Holy Land," illustrated by limelight views.

CASE OF PARKER VERSUS PARKER

Fuller Particulars are Given of This Action by the Counsel.

In case the public should misunderstand the nature of the above action, of which an abstract of the pleadings filed in the Local Registrar's office was given in Saturday's issue, the parties and their Solicitors publish the following statement:—

The action is entirely a friendly one and is brought by the direction of the Official Guardian of the Infants, Mr. Harcourt, to settle a question of title of certain lands in Hamilton. The late Alfred Parker had made an agreement with his son as to these lands, but died suddenly before the legal formalities had been completed. His widow, Mrs. Minnie E. Parker, wishes the arrangement completed, as her late husband had intended, but Mr. Parker's infant heirs have no power so to do and the Official Guardian, on their behalf, desires the Order of the Court before he feels at liberty to execute the necessary documents. The formal allegations made in the pleadings are simply to bring before the Court the necessary facts upon which to base an Order.

TOTAL COLLECTIONS WERE OVER $400

The congregations at the three services at Park St. Baptist Church yesterday, responded liberally to the appeal for money towards defraying the expenses incurred by the construction of the new building. The total collections amountd to over $400. This evening a tea and entertainment will be held at which addresses will be delivered by the clergy of the city and a musical programme rendered.

GROCER'S DELIVERY HORSE IN A DASH

Started on a Merry Merry This Morning Cutting a Wide Dash.

For a real live runaway there is no class of horse that can spurt faster or do more damage than those owned by grocers, once they have been started on a rash run. This morning Mr. J. T. Braund's delivery horse started on George street, near the railway switch, north of Murray St. After it had gone five or six blocks, parcels and boxes were scattered here and there, and in the neighbourhood of Dublin street the waggon was being dragged along on the box, with the wheels in the air. It is believed to have been started by one of the street cars.

THE WEATHER.

There has been an unusual amount of moisture this spring and at the present time there does not appear to be any prospect of better weather, though doubtless it will eventually come. March had a rainfall of [illegible]70; April, 4.81, and this month (to date) rain has fallen to the depth of 1½ inches. The rainfall last night was ½ of an inch.

THE POLICY THAT FAILED

The Mail and Empire complains because Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not join the crucify-him cry of the Opposition rabble against Hon. Wm. Pugsley. The organ and the parliamentary exigeants demanded judgment on a report of a provincial commission. They insisted on lugging an extraneous matter, a political exotic, into the House of Commons. They condemned the Government right and left for not taking action sooner upon a report founded upon the so-called investigation in which the whole truth was not brought out and which refused the evidence of Mr. Pugsley himself, besides making important and vital omissions. And yet this partisan report has not been adopted by the New Brunswick Legislature. It has been in the hands of the Government a month and the Legislature, in whose province dealing with it lies, has allowed a month to elapse without considering it. Meanwhile Parliament has considered and passed upon it and discredited its findings so far as their partisan character, bears against Mr. Pugsley. The Conservative Opposition themselves have no confidence in the report; they dared not base a direct charge upon it. Considering its character and the character of the investigation upon which it was founded, it is no wonder that even the New Brunswick Government disowns its own child. The commission served its purpose, when it was appointed to give weight to scandals and slanders, intended to influence the Dominion election. This having failed, having only served to improve Mr. Pugsley's triumph, the commission has apparently lost any promise of party usefulness and it goes to the Opposition lumber room with the other scandal wreckage which has been employed by statesmen to build up a bad cause by pulling down a good one and with no other support for the past two or three years. One would think that he Conservative Opposition having failed so signally to either injure the Government and Liberal leaders or improve its own position, by the policy of slander and scandal, would think of some policy that might be worthy of a party having the slightest claim to an interest in the public welfare of he counry. The policy of scandal has proved to be a flat failure.

Dead scandals form good subjects for dissection.—Byron.

WHEAT DEMAND AND SUPPLY

Some time ago the Examiner quoted the opinion of Sir Walter Crookes, to the effect that the increasing demand for wheat would overtake and surpass the agricultural capacity for supply. This is, perhaps, a pessimistic view. No doubt the demand is increasing, and will continue to increase as civilization takes a wider range and the peoples of Europe and elsewhere, who have lived on black bread will, with increasing improvement of condition, come to consider the finest of the wheat none too good for them. But to meet this demand there are increasing possibilities of production. Besides large new areas of wheat-growing lands to be subjected to production in Russia and Canada, especially in Canada, there is a great possibility of increasing yield on areas long under crop. Careless cultivation, involving soil exhaustion, has prevailed over much of the vast area of this continent. In this very province of Ontario, with better methods of cultivation, with attention to restoring exhausted fertility, it is almost safe to say that the grain production can be doubled. The eastern United States are in a very much similar position New England farms have been abandoned, having been cropped, without supplying the elements removed by grain growing, to the point of barrenness. These lands, as in Ontario, can, with proper methods of cultivation and necessary fertilization, be made productive The great wheat-growing states of the United States middle west have, in the haste to grow rich, had to bear the burden of over-cropping, and to such an extent that United States farmers of the middle west are deserting their farms in regiments and even brigades, numerous enough to make an army of invasion and are peacefully seizing upon the Canadian West. These abandoned lands are not past usefulness, fertilization and careful cultivation will make them important factors in contributing to the world's crop of wheat. It is therefore quite evident that mother earth has not yet reached the limit of production. When the skimming style of farming fails to meet the requirements of the situation then intensive farming will have to follow, as it has done in Great Britain and parts of Europe, where every foot of soil is intensely tilled, with results that are astonishing to the farmer this side of the Atlantic, whose fences occupy an area of land larger than that which supports a whole family in England, Ireland or Scotland. Mr. Rollin L. Smith, of St. Louis, N.S., who has devoted a great many years to the study of the grain question, has published a book on the "Wheatfields and Markets of the World. In his book he controverts the contention of Sir William Crookes. He shows that while the demands of the world for wheat may greatly grow, the world's capacity for production will keep pace with them. Mr. Smith shows that the present production of wheat by the whole world is 3,062 million bushels per year. He also shows that the world's wheat crop can be increased to from 5,000 million to 6,000 million bushels per year. Taking the world's population at 1,400 millions, this would give from four to five bushels per head, and even more than that; for it is probable that more than half the people of the world never knew and may never know the taste of a wheaten loaf. Divine Providence promised seed time and harvest, so long as the world remains. This pledge involves the promise that the earth will provide enough corn to feed her children.

Wheat can be matured in wide areas of Canada in the latitude of Iceland.

ONTARIO'S COAT OF ARMS

When the papers printed alleged illustrations of the New Ontario Coat of Arms were supported, we were comforted under the trying experience by the reflection that it was a joke, a cartoon funnyism. But it appears to have been a solemn and melancholy fact. Ontario's Coat of Arms has been finished in approved style by the heraldic tailor who keps a shop in St. James. Now Ontario is ready to set up her carriege and have a Coat of Arms for its panels. Our Coat of Arms is a solemn official fixture. The last issue of The Canada Gazette contains notice of a royal warrant assigning a crest and supporters to the present armourial bearings of the Province of Ontario "for the greater honour and distinction of the said Province."

The proclamation reads in part as follows:

> "Upon a wreath of the colours a bear passant sable, and the supporters on the dexter side, a moose, and on the sinister side a Canadian deer, both proper," together with this motto, 'Ut incepit fidelis, sic permanet,' as the same are in the painting herunto annexed more plainly depicted, to be borne for the said Province of Ontario on seals, shields, banners, flags or otherwise, according to the laws of arms.
>
> "Our will and pleasure, therefore, is that you, Henry, Duke of Norfolk, to whom the cognizance of matters of this nature doth properly belong, do require and command that this our concession and declaration be recorded in our college of arms, etc.
>
> "Given at our court at St. James this twenty-seventh day of February, 1909, in the ninth year of our reign. By his Majesty's command. (Signed) Crewe."

It is very proper and becoming that a province as great as Ontario should possess the dignity of a Coat of Arms. But it seems that some more successful and satisfactory design might have been contrived.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If this weather is what the water-waggon will give, we don't want it.

A florist proudly advertises a blue rose. That's no freak compared with the latter-day woman's hat.

Enough rain to keep down the dust, and it will keep down the "dust" in the farmer's pocket if he doesn't soon get a chance to put in his seed.

The American senate has placed an almost prohibitory tariff against brimstone. It evidently considers that our good cousins over the border can raise ——, without outside assistance.

There is anger in England, says the Toronto Star, because 2,250 persons hold 16,000,000 acres of land, but out here land is so plentiful that Ontario recently gave 2,000,000 acres to two persons, one of whom said he had half a mind not to take it.

Fashion's hand is far-reaching; it stretches out to China to grasp the Chinese pig-tail to serve as a scaffolding on the nape of the neck to support the hilariously hideous headgear of today. Last year at one Chinese port — Hong-Kong — 207,414 pounds of human (Chinese) hair, or 107 tons were shipped to this continent. What ghastly reflections this fact suggests, such as a dainty woman wearing at the base of her pretty skull, "puffs" woven from the pigtail of some Chinese criminal, that once bore stains of the blood shed by the headsman's axe, or possibly cut from the scalp of some leprous coolie.

CARELESS CULTIVATION

(Toronto Star.)

That the United States is approaching the point wheer it will cease to export wheat is the moral of an article in Collier's Weekly, entitled, 'The Problem of the Hungry Stomach." In the five years from 1899 to 1903 the average annual export of wheat from that country was 128,500,000 bushels. In the five years from 1904 to 1908 the average export was 52,100,000 bushels. At this rate the next five years would see the disappearance of an export of unground wheat from the United States. On the other hand the Canadian export increased from 10,000,000 to 40,000,000 in ten years; and this writer predicts that the United States will soon become an importer of wheat from Canada.

This does not mean that the possibilities of the United States as a wheat growing country have reached their limit. France, with an area of about one-fifteenth of the United States, raises half as much wheat as the larger country. Probably its natural fertility is greater, but the chief calse of the difference lies in intensive cultivation. The immense area of the United States has led to careless cultivation, a sort of skimming of the cream off the soil. The American farmer, instead of taking measures to renew the fertility of the soil, kept moving westward to virgin fields, and he is now moving northward into Canada. He moves, not because the older fields are yielding up to their limit, but because it is easier and more immediately profitable to grow wheat in the newer regions.

The movement which populated first the States in the Mississippi basin, and then Minnesota and the Dakotas, is now adding rapidly to the population of Canada. Region after region of our great West will be occupied and tilled in the same careless prodigal way as the wheat-growing States of the Union.

But this process cannot go on forever. Intensive farming will be brought about, both in the United States and Canada, by the necessities of a growing population. Under the strain of this necessity the United States could produce easily double its present crop of wheat, and probably very much more. Up to this time the surface of this continent has only been scratched.

My big lots and small Houses just suit wise wage earners for Homes or the most profitable place for their savings. Men should not forget the high rents they were compelled to pay for poor houses a short time ago, and they may rest assured that similar conditions will soon return. In many cases the Rent you are paying will buy you a Home of your own. Interested parties tell you my lots are to far out. Did you ever hear of any person dying because he had to walk half a mile twice a day? Ask your Doctor. If you would like to be your own land lord go and see my Lots, then with five dollars in your pocket, come and see me, the rest will be easy

MOTHERS WHO HAVE DAUGHTERS

Find Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winchester, Ind.—"Four doctors told me that they could never make me regular, and that I would eventually have dropsy. I would bloat, and suffer from bearing-down pains, cramps and chills, and I could not sleep nights. My mother wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking one and one-half bottles of the Compound, I am all right again, and I recommend it to every suffering woman."—MRS. MAY DEAL, Winchester, Ind.

Hundreds of such letters from girls and mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them have been received by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health by Lydia E. HIGHWAY ROBBER WAS CAPTURED

Beamsville Man Follows Stranger Who Held Him Up.

THIEF SEIZES A WAGON

After Robbing ex-Warden Calder of Lincoln County of Two Dollars at Point of Revolver, Jesse S. Strickler Makes Boy Drive Him to Depot—Is Later Arrested Hiding In Lumber Piles.

St. Catharines, May 10.—Jesse S. Strickler, a stranger, who has so far refused to tell his place of residence, is in jail on a charge of highway robbery. Early yesterday morning as W. B. Calder, a former warden of Lincoln County, was on his way to this city from his home in Beamsville he met the prisoner on the highway. Strickler drew a revolver, and, levelling it at Mr. Calder, demanded his money. Mr. Calder handed over $2. Going a little distance down the road, Strickler met a lad named Kelter driving a delivery wagon. At the point of the revolver he forced the boy to drive him to the Beamsville station on the Grand Trunk Railway. Mr. Calder in the meantime met a friend, and, securing a horse, went in pursuit of the highwayman. Seeing that he was likely to be overtaken, Strickler fired two shots at the pursuing horse, but both went wild. Near the station Strickler jumped from the wagon and hid among a number of piles of lumber, where he was later captured by County Constable Tufferd and brought to this city.

CHILDREN DROWN.

Boy Gives Life In Vain Attempt to Saved Little Girl.

Chatham, May 10.—At Dresden on Friday afternoon Vivian Talbot, the eight-year-old daughter of Mrs. W. J. Talbot, and Rufus Snell, the 12-year-old son of Mr. Joseph Snell, North Dresden, were drowned in the swollen water of Lang's Creek. It being the afternoon of Arbor Day, the public school children held a picnic in Jeff's woods. The creek was swollen by heavy rains, but a fallen tree made a partial crossing, which the children completed by means of a plank. The Talbot girl was crossing when the plank gave way, precipitating her into the stream. Young Snell plunged in to the rescue, but was carried under by the current. About twenty rods down the stream the girl's body was brought ashore by her brother, Archie Talbot, and Harry Robinson, but attempts at resuscitation proved useless. Snell's body has not been recovered. Coroner Wiley deemed an inquest necessary.

Twenty-Four Hours for Manslaughter.

Vancouver, B.C., May 10.—Wm. Ellis, the British Columbia Electric Railway signalman who last December gave careless orders to two interurban cars, which resulted in a collision and the death of two motormen, was found guilty on two charges of manslaughter. He has been in jail since the accident, and as he is suffering from illness, which will probably result fatally, he was sentenced to only 24 hours in the penitentiary.

To Probe Massacres.

Constantinople, May 10.—The Government is pressing relief work in Adana Province with considerable vigor. It was announced yesterday that $150,000 had been sent there.

The Grand Vizier and Ferid Pasha, the Minister of the Interior, Saturday received a deputation of Armenian clergy and laity, headed by Arscharani, the provisionel representative of the patriarchate, who was assured that the Government would enquire thoroughly into the Adana massacres and severely punish the instigators.

Paris Style In Moustache.

Paris, May 10.—A new fashion in moustaches which has been introduced into Paris from Germany is now making its appearance on the boulevards.

Men are to be seen walking about with closely-cropped moustaches, which resemble the stub end of a toothbrush. The moustache is cropped close, and is then brushed up and, with the aid of a hot iron, is made to stand out like bristles.

Father's Insane Rage.

Brantford, May 10.—The drug store of Cameron & Higginbotham was robbed Friday night, and the detention of a 14-year-old boy employe followed. His father, a respectable resident, was summoned to the police station and became so enraged that he lost his mental balance and it required the efforts of three policemen to remove him from the police cells, where he wanted to kill his son.

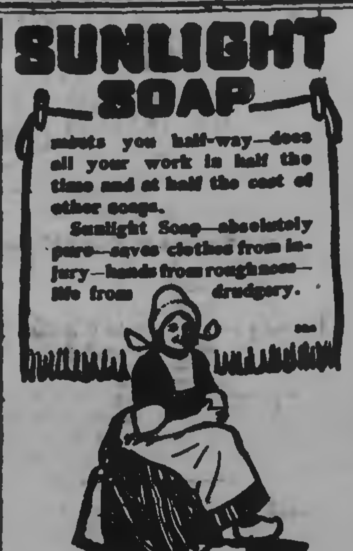
NAGGING LUMBAGO

When your back is sore and lame, when it hurts to stoop over, to lift, to straighten up after bending down—that's a sure sign of lameness in the muscles that can be relieved and cured by "Nerviline." Rub it over the back and sides, the more rubbing the better. Let the pain-destroying properties of Nerviline sink through all the cords and muscles that are lame—tension and stiffness will ease off—lameness will disappear after the third application.

Nerviline

Although absolutely sure to cure the aches of sciatica and lumbago, it is well to assist Nerviline by putting on a Nerviline Porous Plaster, which will continue to supply warmth and protection to the tender spot and thereby prevent a relapse.

Remember this: There is no muscular ache or pain, no strain, swelling, sprain, or external soreness, that the Nerviline Treatment can't cure. Nerviline Plasters 25c each and large 25c bottles of Nerviline are sold by all dealers.



SUNLIGHT SOAP

meets you half-way—does all your work in half the time and at half the cost of other soaps.

Sunlight Soap—absolutely pure—saves clothes from injury—hands from roughness—life from drudgery.

WILL BE TWO SUICIDES?

Mrs. Boyle Promises That She and Husband Will Not Go to Prison.

Mercer, Pa., May 10.—Unless present plans are changed Jas. H. Boyle and his wife, Helen Anna Boyle, will be sentenced to-day for the abduction of Willie Whitla.

Every effort will be made by the authorities to prevent such a happening, but it is certain that if permitted, Boyle will again attempt to tell a sensational story, implicating a third party in the kidnapping.

Mrs. Boyle says: "Jimmy has something to say and ought not to be gagged. I will not say anything, but Jimmy will, and I will aid him to have his say if I can.

"Seriously, I want to tell you there is going to be a double suicide. I will not spend much time in the penitentiary. I have made all arrangements and have the means now to depart quietly and quickly. Jimmy will do the same.

"When my sentence would expire I would be an old woman. I would have no friends and no money. Who wants anything to do with an old woman? I would rather die young.

"This is my 23rd birthday and I'm in a very poor position to celebrate the event. I am innocent of crime, however, and maybe God in His goodness will yet allow me to spend many happy anniversaries."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Work on the Soo drydock plant will begin in July.

Ferdinand Gagnon, a Soo barber, believes he is one of the heirs of a $5,000,000 estate in California.

The body found beside Kettle Creek, near St. Thomas, was that of Wm. Tomlinson, a machinist.

The two-year-old daughter of Louis Moore of Bancroft was burned so badly that she died in five hours.

Millionaire aeronauts will sail from Massachusetts over Canada this summer for the automobile club trophy.

Mrs. George Farrell of Demorestville was burned to death through the explosion of a lamp. She was sitting up with a sick brother-in-law.

A Montreal doctor charged by the Pharmaceutical Association with illegal sale of cocaine will retaliate with 700 charges against 150 druggists, including the president of the association.

Robert J. Aitken of the Canadian Electric Co. in the Soo, has been awarded the contract for installing the new municipal telephone system, which will connect Scho Bay, McLennon, and Port Findlay, near the Soo.

"Be Britons," Says Beresford.

Liverpool, May 10.—Lord Charles Beresford, upon whom the Liverpool University yesterday conferred the degree of doctor of laws, took occasion to lecture his compatriots on the "Deplorable physical defects that recently have developed in the race."

Lord Charles referred especially to the naval scare that has dominated England of late, and declared that the nation had lost the old British method of looking at things with calmness and dignity.

If the Cabinet committee now considering the question of the lack of naval readiness raised by himself found things, as he had no doubt they would, there would be no necessity and panic and recrimination, but the nation would have to reassert the old British spirit, see where things were wrong, and calmly put them right.

Bodies Robbed.

Brantford, May 10.—Another phase of the case in which Mrs. Carolan charged Patrick Jones and Wm. E. Dunne with removing the remains of her son and daughter from the Roman Catholic cemetery was presented at the Police Court Saturday. The bodies, replaced in the grave, had been exhumed and only a part of the remains were found, while two gold rings and a large pearl rosary by which Mrs. Carolan hoped to identify the daughter were missing.

Grave Digger Jones denied seeing any jewelry and stated that when he first made the removal, the remains were unceremoniously placed in a hole he dug. Dunne, the other defendant, denied any knowledge of the affair, while Jones claimed he acted on Dunne's order. Magistrate Livingstone adjourned the proceedings.

Considering Blythe's Case.

Ottawa, May 10.—The Cabinet on Saturday had under consideration the capital case of Walter Blythe, the Agincourt railway man, under sentence to be hanged on Friday next for the murder of his wife. It is understood that there is considerable difference of opinion as to whether the crime should be commuted to life imprisonment for manslaughter, and no recommendation for commutation has as yet been made to His Excellency. Blythe in a fit of rage beat his wife with a poker and she died from the effects of the blows.

Patten's Operations.

Kansas City, May 10.—James A. Patten, recent bull leader in wheat passed through here Saturday on his way to Chicago. Mr. Patten said: "At no time have I held more than ten million bushels. It just happened that for once in my life I was able to predict accurately."

Indian Charged With Assault.

St. Thomas, May 10.—Jos. Doxtater, an Indian shoe repairer, is under arrest on a charge of assault on Ida Knight, aged six years. Doxtater dragged the little girl into his shop on Saturday morning, but her eleven-year-old brother gave the alarm and she was rescued by the employes of a nearby mill. The Indian, who was partly intoxicated, escaped, but was later arrested by the police.

To Spite Fire Chief.

Victoria, B.C., May 10.—That a spite campaign is being organized against the new fire chief, Thomas Davis, formerly of the Toronto fire department, appointed a fortnight ago, is believed here, owing to the epidemic of false alarms. The department has been given five runs on account of false alarms in the last 48 hours.

Two Montreal Failures.

Montreal, May 10.—Israel Crossman of the Canadian Shirt & Overall Co. has gone under with liabilities at $85,000, while the alleged assets only reach $10,000, plus the secured creditors.

Shaer & Eliasoph, after 12 months business as makers of ladies' wear, also assigned Saturday. Their accumulated liabilities reach $34,000, with assets amounting to $7,000.

Italians Shoot Cattle.

Brantford, May 10.—Reports of serious vandalism among the Italian colony of cement workers at Blue Lake have been received by the city authorities. Horses, cattle and sheep have been ruthlessly shot in the field by the gang, members of which go about the community heavily armed with revolvers. When constables appeared a shot was fired, but the ringleaders were arrested.

A Chinese School.

Washington, May 10.—Wu Ching Fany, Chinese Minister to the United States, has accepted the presidency of the Chinese school of Chicago, according to an announcement made yesterday. The school, which was formally opened on Thursday, was started under the auspices of the Chinese Government. There are thirty-two students already enrolled in the school.

Doherty for Old Land.

Montreal, May 10.—There is a report here in Conservative circles that ex-Judge Doherty, M.P. for St. Ann's, will only sit for the present Parliament, and then take up his residence in London, practicing his profession in the British metropolis and eventually seeking an Irish constituency for the Imperial House of Commons.

Troubles of Their Own.

Buffalo, May 10.—After a big meeting of members of the Longshoremen's Association, held here yesterday afternoon, President T. V. O'Connor said: "We did not discuss a sympathetic strike. Our men are not at present involved in the lake trouble."

Gold In New York State.

Lake Placid, N.Y., May 10.—Much excitement prevails in this region through the alleged discovery of gold deposits by Henry Allen, deputy sheriff of Essex County on property owned by him in the Adirondacks. They are reported to carry immense values.

Didn't Shoot to Kill.

Windsor, May 10.—Herman Kraft, alias Martin, aged 23, in court Saturday, was charged with shooting with intent to murder Policemen Reid and Lister, and Geo. Quamby. He said he was not shooting to kill, but merely to assist in escaping.

Babe Ginned With Cotton.

Galveston, Texas, May 10.—The disappearance of little Alfred Hartman, the two-year-old son of George and Angelina Hartman of Gillespie County, five months ago, has been solved by the finding of the flattened body of the infant in a bale of cotton opened at a gin in Liverpool, England.

The child crept into the press while it was open, and falling asleep was ginned in the bale.

Sentenced to the Chair.

Norwich, N.Y., May 10.—Earl B. Hill, aged 19, who was convicted of murder in the first degree in the Supreme Court here on Thursday, was yesterday sentenced to be electrocuted at Auburn Prison during the week beginning June 20.

Smallpox In Teddy's Camp.

Nairobi, British East Africa, May 10.—The Roosevelt expedition is still in camp on the ranch of Sir Alfred Pease. It is reported that two more cases of smallpox have been discovered among the porters of the expedition.

Everything She Ate

SEEMED A BURDEN TO CARRY.

HAD STOMACH TROUBLE FOUR YEARS.

When your food has not been properly digested, your body has not received the benefit it should. The exertions of the gastric juice have been confined entirely to removing the unmasticated undigested portions of food which they cannot properly digest as speedily as possible from the body, thereby only giving the blood a small percentage of nourishment with which to feed the tissues. Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the bowels, promotes perfect digestion, makes pure blood, tones the stomach, and thus restores perfect health and strength to the debilitated system.

Mrs. D. A. Francisco, Rossland, B.C., writes: "I was suffering from stomach trouble of the worst kind for about four years. Everything I ate seemed a burden to carry. I always arose in the morning with a sickening and feverish taste in my mouth and was also troubled with swellings in my hands and feet, which my physician said was due to the disordered state of my stomach. I tried everything that was purchasable, and also consulted two or three physicians, but could find no relief until one of my neighbors told me of a wonderful cure by Burdock Blood Bitters. I used altogether ten bottles and am now perfectly cured. I wish to recommend B.B.B. to anyone who may be so unfortunate as I was.

This evening at eight o'clock in the Salvation Army Citadel a song service will be given entitled "Rescued in London," by the local singing brigade. This beautiful service was written by the Rev. H. All those interested in the cause of Godliness, Morality and Temperance, should hear this beautiful service as the moral through the service gives to all an object lesson that should prove beneficial to each as they journey through life. There will be a number of full choruses, quartettes, solos, etc., and a very enjoyable evening is expected. The chair will be taken at eight o'clock by Staff-Capt. Walton, late of Toronto, and the local silver band will render selections during the evening.—Com.

PRESENTATIONS TO MR. HAROLD TANNEY

By the Belmont Club and Charlotte St. Choir—Has Left for Galt.

Mr. Harold Tanney, who has been a clerk in the local shoe store of Mr R. Neill for the past two years has been promoted to the managership of Mr. Neill's store at Galt, and left to take charge this morning. Before leaving he was made the recipient of a handsome presentation by the Belmont Club, of which he was a member, filling the office of vice-president, since its organization. The members gathered in their rooms on Saturday evening to say good-bye to Mr. Tanney. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Oliver Milburn, who expressed the regret felt at Mr. Tanney's departure. The best wishes of the club went with him for future success. Mr N. Greenhalgh presented him with a handsome silver napkin ring, suitably engraved with the crest of the club.

Mr. Tanney was also presented with a fountain pen by the members of Charlotte St. Methodist Church choir.

HOUSE-CLEANING TIME.

I cannot find my razor strop,
My shaving mug is off the shelf;
There's not a chair for me to drop
Into, the while I dress myself.
One shirt must last me through the week,
One collar do, though thick with grime;
The laundry she forgot to send—
Once more it is house-cleaning time.

I call for fresh and mended socks,
"Just wear the ones you have," says she;
"I've had no time for darning hose—
I wish you wouldn't bother me."
My pipes have disappeared from view,
My books have vanished from my den,
There is comfort in the home,
For she is cleaning house again.

My favourite armchair now holds
Three statues and a rose-leaf jar;
Upon the couch six portieres
And heaps of laundried curtains are.
There is no place for me to rest;
At eight o'clock the stairs I climb,
And find my bed upon the floor,
Because it is house-cleaning time.

I note the window shelves are gone,
There is no curtain in the room,
So I must shut off all the light—
It's like undressing in a tomb.
And as I tumble into bed,
I think some poet ought to rhyme
Of woman's inhumanity
To man about house-cleaning time.

Field Of 40 Acres At Nassau Said To Possess Advantages For Excellent Camp Ground

A location that is said to be in every way an excellent one for the camping grounds of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons has been inspected at Nassan and the military men who have seen it are satisfied that it can offer particular advantages. Colonel Syer, of Millbrook, and Capt. S. T. Medd, of the city examined the grounds some time ago and the officer in command of the Dragoons was very much pleased with the situation.

The field is about 40 acres in extent and is at Nassau, on the west side of the river. It borders on the river and thus the water supply for the horses is assured. There is an electric light supply close at hand. The telephone is also found at the power house. The G.T.R. line to Lakefield runs very close, thus doing away with the great trouble of carting the impediments from the cars to the camping ground. The trains conveying the men and horses with supplies, could be run to Nassau, unloaded there and have only to be drawn across the river to the camp. This is a very strong point in favour of the grounds in mention, and in fact all the necessaries are admirably provided for.

Colonel Syer is reported to have sent in his statement regarding these grounds and strongly favours them. As stated on Saturday it now remains with the city to secure the camp for his district and as pointed out, the 400 men and 400 horses will mean that no small amount of money will be left in the city.

"A Friend Of The Boy" Again Refers To Central Park Problem

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice in the Examiner of Saturday a reply to my letter in regard to ball playing at Central Park, from Mr. D. W. Dumble, and am glad to see that Mr. Dumble approves of plenty of outdoor exercise for the boys and young men of the city. However, his letter all the more clearly indicates the desirability of keping Central Park as a play-ground. He states that for twenty years he has been urging the necessity of play-grounds, and has to admit that nothing has been done in that regard. Why, therefore, in view of the course that he has adopted during so long a time should he so strongly support a scheme that takes away from the boys of Peterborough the only play-ground in the central part of the city, knowing that twenty years' urging have not produced a substitute. He asks whether Central Park should be made a play-ground or a park, but there seems no reason why it should not be both. Once the lawn is in good shape, a year's playing on its surface would not be noticed. Why does not our council, if they have any authority in the matter, consider the question carefully.

Thanking you for agin allowing me to take up your space, I am,

"A Friend of the Boy."

FLYING PAPER SCARES HORSES

Farmers' Cobs Nearly Started on the Market.

Loose papers caught by the wind and blown here and there on the market on Saturday almost caused two runaways. The horses were started, but the drivers were capable of holding them and of thus preventing them from getting away. It is believed that these papers are blown in the first place from the dumping ground at the end of Charlotte street. Many of the loads of refuse are thrown near the street line, and the paper is gradually worked into the street and on to the market. It was stated on Saturday by some of the farmers that an effort should be made to prevent this paper from being deposited so near the centre of the city.

AN AT HOME BY ST. PETER'S T.A.S.

On Wednesday Night—An Enjoyable Time Will be Provided.

The committee in charge of the At Home which is being arranged for Wednesday night in St. Peter's T.A.S. rooms are confident that a most enjoyable evening will be provided. The affair promises to be one of the best held under this department of the society and preparations are being made for a large attendance. The arrangements provide for an evening much similar to those held in the past but an effort will be made to surpass them.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING ON 18TH

Purity Ware Co. By-law and Reduced Freight Rate on Coal Will Be Discussed.

A meeting of the Board of Trade will be held on Tuesday at 8 o'clock in the Council Chamber, and not tomorrow evening, as was announced in Saturday's paper. The Purity Ware Co. by-law will be taken up and fully discussed. Another question that will come up before the Board will be reduced freight rates on coal. An interesting meeting is assured.

SPECIAL CANVASS FOR NEW MEMBERS

St. Peter's T. A. S. Strong in Their Determination to Reach 1000 Mark.

The regular meeting of St. Peter's T.A.S. was held yesterday afternoon when it was announced that a special meeting would be held next Sunday to complete arrangements for a canvass to increase the membership. In May and October a special effort is made to secure new members and an attempt will be made to have 1,000 members by January next, on the occasion of the 10th anniversary. The members are enthusiastic in the work and with the number close up to four figures, a garrison finish should bring about the desired result. At yesterday's meeting Mr. Vincent McCabe gave a splendid address on temperance.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Roy L. McCardell, a newspaperman in New York, offered the theatrical public drama entitled 'The Gay Life.' It was gay enough, but it's existence was, alas! of short duration, living through just one week.

Redway in Vaudeville.

Eddie Redway, the original John Dough, in "The Gingerbread Man," and who delighted the Peterborough theatre-goers on his appearance at the Grand, is appearing in a vaudeville comedy sketch, entitled "Four to One."

McPHEE IS COMING.

The real show will be with us soon when McPhee and his big company of players will hold the boards at the Grand Opera House for two nights only, and Saturday matinee, commencing Friday evening, May 14. This big Company travels in their own private Pullman cars, and carries a first-class band and orchestra and a carload of beautiful scenery and effects. The McPhee Company will present on Friday evening the great scenic production "For Her Brothers' Sake"; Saturday evening, a beautiful comedy drama "The Great Diamond Mystery," a play that delights the children and pleases all classes; on Saturday evening, Howard Russell's greatest success, "The Girl I Love" will be presented. Six high-class specialties will be introduced between the acts. McPhee's motto is a dollar show at bargain prices. Evening prices, 10c 20c and 30c. Matinee prices, children 10c, adults, 20c. Band concert daily at noon.

"I REMEMBER YOU."

Louis Drener's song, "I Remember You," will hardly survive another month in the public fancy at the rate it is now being murdered. It was interpolated into "The Girls of Gottenburg" to brighten the musical offerings and proved a decided hit everywhere the girls appeared. It recently arrived in Peterborough, speaking in a general sense, and every other boy on the street is whistling it or something which sounds much like it. It is moreover, being two-stepped, barn-danced, capriced, and served up in many other forms at dances, public and private. Enquiry shows that more copies of it were sold on Saturday than any other song in one day. If you cannot play "I Remember You" your repertoire of popular "classics" is not complete. A topical song temporarily holds sway with the public. The natives in Hamburg caught on to the expression "I'm Afraid to go Home in the Dark," and the following is how frequently heard "Why Eyes, I Remember You," but in a short time it will be shelved like hundreds of others, gone before it.

AS "SMIFF" SEES OUR COAT OF ARMS

This is the way the Bobcaygeon Independent unloads his disgusted soul from the ghastly burden of that heraldic monstrosity, Ontario's new coat of arms.

The children are greatly tickled with the menagerie on the New Ontario Coat of Arms. A moose, and a deer, and a bear. It's immense. A skunk would give strength to the collection. And why not have a few birds, and fishes. The sucker that comes in the Spring tra-la, surely deserves a place in the picture. The Beaver, so it appears, is the property of the Dominion, and no province can appropriate it to itself. That being the case what is the matter with our having the gentle wood chuck in our tin type. Then again would it not be far more appropriate to adopt domestic live stock and have the shield supported by an Ayrshire Bull, and a Tamworth Sow, with a Plymouth Rock Hen doing a single-foot bouncing stunt on the cross-bar overhead. That would represent our agricultural industries. It might be said that a crowing rooster would be better than the hen. Not so. The crow of the native rooster is not a saleable commodity, whereas the egg product of the hen runs into millions of dollars. After all it would perhaps have been most sensible had there been no introduction of animals on their hind legs, and left us with just a plain shield and the Maple Leaf.

PASTOR INVITED FOR ANOTHER YEAR

At Regular Meeting of the Quarterly Board of Mark St. Methodist Church.

The regular meeting of the quarterly board of the Mark St. Methodist Church was held on Saturday afternoon with a good attendance of the members. The financial statement was very encouraging, all the financial claims having been provided for. The pastor, Rev. C. H. Coon, stated that there had been a slight decrease in the church membership, owing to removals from Peterborough and also due to a number of deaths. In every other respect the year was a satisfactory one. Mr. Jos. Soucee was re-elected recording steward.

An unanimous invitation was extended to the pastor to remain another year in charge of the congregation.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, May 10.—Stocks opened irregular, gains and losses being mixed. Atchison and Erie were the strongest issues, although St. Paul sold at a point advance, too. There was a lot of profit-taking selling throughout the forenoon in the leading issues which have made the largest gains recently and while this was going on some of the inactive issues were taken in hand and put higher. Rock Islands made new high record figures. Industrial issues were heavy from the start, but the losses were confined to fractions up to noon. Sentiment on the floor was mixed and professionals were said to be looking and working for a reaction.

Supreme Mission Of The Church Subject Of Scholarly Address

New Park Street Baptist Church Was Formally Dedicated Yesterday Afternoon—Reverend W. A. Cameron, B.A., of Toronto, Delivers Inspiring Sermons.

AN ELOQUENT SPEAKER.

The new Park Street Baptist Church was formally dedicated to the service of God yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, when an address suitable to the occasion was delivered by Rev. W. A. Cameron, B.A., pastor of the Bloor Street Baptist Church. The new building, which is a fine one, was well filled at all services yesterday, and the congregation might justly feel proud of their place of worship. The pastor, Rev. W. T. Riddiford, was assisted at the service by Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Murray St Church, who delivered the dedicatory prayer. Special music was rendered by the choir and a male quartette.

Rev. W. A. Cameron is a young man of exceptional ability and a most eloquent speaker. His address yesterday on the "Supreme Mission of The Church" was an inspiring one, and his remarks could not fail to make a lasting impression on those who heard him. His subject was one of vital importance to every Christian.

The Address.

Rev. Mr. Cameron did not choose a text, but spoke on "The Supreme Mission of The Church." In commencing, the speaker asked what was meant by "the church." "Did it mean a beautiful building, in which persons gathered one day out of seven, for worship, or for various other reasons?" That was not what it meant. It was something more. It was an organized, vitalized body, which, by reason of the indwelling of truth, became the central spirit of a community. It represented the spiritual life of a nation. It was the House of God, from which emanated, through its ministers and teachers, the saving grace of God. The speaker thought of what Canada would be without its churches. He believed that this country, if the spring of its life—which was the church—was cut off, would be visited by death and devastation.

People could speak of the faults of the church, and the preacher believed that it had some, but where was an organization to be found with such an unselfish motive as the church?

Mission Not Political.

"What is the supreme mission of the church?" the eloquent speaker asked. It was neither political nor institutional. When he said that it was not political, he remarked that he did not mean that the church was uninterested in the welfare of men, nor that preachers should not speak of politics. He referred to the political situation in Jesus' day, when the whole Jewish nation was full of discussion over its lost liberties. Christ came in the midst of this tangle of politics, but as one studied His life, it was evident that He refused to obtain by political methods what He could obtain by spiritual forces. Then, in the light of these facts, it was seen that the Supreme mission of Christ was not a political one.

Not Institutional.

Rev. Mr. Cameron, continuing his remarks, pointed out that the mission was not an institutional one. He likened the church of Jesus Christ to a river rising in the mountains, flowing on its course to the sea, forming as it did, pools and reservoirs that turned the wheels of mills, to grind out the bread that we ate. So did the church supply places for the refreshing of men's souls, feeding them with the beneficences of God. There would not be many hospitals and charitable institutions in the land, were it not for the church.

But a warning note must be sounded, the speaker said, that the church did not become humanitarian; spending its time in looking after the human side only and failing to carry out its real mission. It was made clear in Christ's ministry that the mission of His church was not institutional.

The Supreme Mission.

Leaving the negative side of the question, the reverend gentleman took up the positive. The mission of Jesus was the one given His disciples and afterwards to the church, to preach salvation to men. The supreme mission was not to legislate, nor to educate, but it was to regenerate. The aim of culture was education, but the aim of Christianity was regeneration. The speaker said that he did not wish to say that the aesthetic attractiveness of a service, such as liturgy or form was incompatible with Christianity, but it alone was of little avail. In conclusion, he urged his hearers to be co-workers with Christ. "Your service was His service," he said, "in the carrying out of the supreme mission of His church.

Rev. Mr. Cameron also preached to large congregations at both the morning and evening services.

Apsley People Wrestle With An Important And Unusual School Tangle

Special Staff Correspondence.

Apsley, May 8th.—School questions are always burning questions, no matter whether they pertain to the system of schools established in the provinces or in the smaller municipalities of the country.

At the present time the people of Apsley are wrestling with a school problem. The matter has been the subject of discussion for some time, but now it appears as if it had reached a point where either one or other of the contending fractions would come out victorious. The trouble in this particular case is that for many years the townships of Chandos, Anstruther and Burleigh were united for municipal purposes. Some time ago a school section was organized in the vicinty of Apsley, the district including a part of the township of Chandos as well as that portion of the township of Anstruther known as the village of Apsley. The school for the section was established at a point about a mile and one half north of this village. Not long since the township of Chandos withdrew from the united townships and set up a municipal parliament of its own.

Long Walk for Pupils

As a matter of fact the pupils who are attending the school north of Apsley are mostly from the village itself. In fact it is claimed that only two pupils out of thirty-eight who attend the school reside in the immediate vicinty of the bulding. The residents of Apsley have been agitating with a view of having the schoolhouse moved to the village, contending that it is an imposition for the pupils from Apsley to walk a mile and one half to school, wherein if the school was established in the village, only two pupils would be obliged to walk that distance.

It happens, however, at the present time, that two out of the three school trustees reside in Chandos, in the vicinity of the present schoolhouse and they are, of course, averse to changing the site of the school.

The Point Involved

The point involved is as to whether or not the dissolution of the municipal government that existed between the townships of Chandos, Anstruther and Burleigh does not disolve the union school section that was in force prior to the separation of the townships.

The people of the village are determined that the matter shall be decided immediately, as there are anxious that steps be taken to enable them to erect a new schoolhouse in the village and have it ready for occupation by September 1st next. If the dissolution of the united municipal governments also terminates the union school section, a new school will be immediately organized, comprising the village and territory immediately adjacent and a new bulding established forthwith.

It is understood that an opinion on this matter is being received from eminent legal authorities with a view to having the matter speedily adjusted. The residents of Apsley maintain that the people of Chandos who reside in that section, formerly included in the union school secton are not elgible to vote for the election of school trustees but should be obliged to set up a new school of their own.

The question is a vital one to the people of Anstruther and the outcome will be awaited with a great deal of interest.

THE HOME PHYSICIAN

Some Hints to Keep People Well.

Ninety-nine per cent. of the ordinary sicknesses are caused by the bowels, the kidneys or the skin.

As you know, these organs are the great purifiers of the human system. They filter impurities from the blood and pass them from the body. If the kidneys, bowels or skin weaken or get tired out or fail to do their regular work—then the blood becomes laden with impurities and poisoned. If it be the fault of the kidneys, then the skin is overworked in its efforts to throw off the excess of urea or waste matter. The glands become inflamed and enlarged—pimples break out—and there may be a rash or eczema of the skin. If it is the fault of the skin, then the kidneys are strained by overwork and there is constant pain in the back, dizziness, neuralgia, headaches and rheumatism. If it be the fault of the bowels, the blood is poisoned, the skin and kidneys weakened, the stomach upset—and, of course, there is Constipation and Biliousness.

How easy it is, then, to be free of all these troubles!

"Fruit-a-tives" is not merely a remedy for any one of these troubles but a cure for all. "Fruit-a-tives" acts on the skin, the liver, and the kidneys. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps all these great organs well and strong, and thus insures the blood being always pure and rich. With "Fruit-a-tives" in the house to take at the first sign of not feeling well, you need not have a day's sickness. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FRANCE ALARMED BY BIG STRIKE

Danger of Huge Strike to Republic Is Apparent to All.

MAY MEAN NEW COMMUNE

Premier Clemenceau Realizes That Trouble With Government Employes Is Now a Fight to the Finish and Defeat Means Death to Parliament—He Has a Majority of the People With Him.

Paris, May 10.—The Government is resolved to stake its existence on its fight against the insurgent postal and telegraph employes and railway servants. Premier Clemenceau and his energetic Minister of Public Works, Louis Barthou, are now fully aware that the immense majority of the nation is supporting them in their struggle with the revolutionary employes. Even extreme radicals like Mascuraud deny that state servants have the right to strike. The Clemenceau Cabinet has taken measures, and is fully prepared to crush the threatened revolutionary strikes.

The French Republic has never before been confronted with a more serious situation. Its own servants in the postal and railway departments have been organizing themselves into groups and syndicates, fraternizing with the workingmen of the General Federation of Labor and with the proletariat under the dictatorship of "King" Pataud and his communard leaders, who shake their first at President Fallieres and at all the representatives of civil and military authority. They preach anti-militarism and anarchy.

Capital is alarmed, and during the last six weeks over a hundred million dollars of French funds has been invested abroad. The agitation of the rebellious civil servants has already done incalculable injury to the industrial and commercial prosperity of the country. M. Clemenceau knows perfectly well that unless this revolt of Government employes is nipped in the bud the Parliamentary regime in France must disappear and be replaced by the Commune of 1871. No foreigners would feel secure in a country without law or order, and France, while retaining her intellectual and artistic supremacy, would sink, politically and militarily, to the rank of a second-class nation.

All intelligent Frenchman are fully alive to the national peril and stand firmly behind M. Clemenceau in the present life and death struggle against the anarchy, and the proclamation of the Commune of 1871, which is personified by "King" Pataud and the insurgent state employes.

Belgium Will Aid.

Brussels, May 10.—An arrangement has been concluded by the various Ministries whereby in case of necessity the state employes, including soldiers, could be detailed to other services for the purpose of meeting such contingencies as might arise.

Militia Orders.

Ottawa, May 10.—Militia general orders authorize the formation of a corps of school cadet instructors (militia), to be composed of qualified male teachers of the public schools of Canada. For the current year this is to consist of fifty lieutenants.

The uniform will be a double-breasted black coat, with militia buttons, plain trousers and infantry field service caps. So far as stores permit, cadet corps will be given one machine sub-target gun and 2,000 paper targets.

All future appointments to the medical service of the active militia are to be made to the Canadian Army Medical Corps.

Will Confiscate Abdul's Millions.

Constantinople, May 10.—Up to the present time the sum of $7,500,000 has been found in the treasury boxes of the Imperial palace at Yildiz, occupied before his deposition by Abdul Hamid. Two and a half million dollars of this is in cash, while $5,000,000 is in marketable securities equivalent to cash. Furthermore papers were found indicating that Abdul Hamid has on deposit in Germany, England, France and the United States upwards of $15,000,000. It is understood that the Cabinet takes the attitude that all these foreign deposits, as well as the treasure at Yildiz are the property of the state.

KIDNEY DISEASE
COMES ON QUIETLY.

Perhaps no of' gans work harder than the kidneys to ve the general health of the body a people are troubled with some ki dney Complaint, but do not suspect may have been in the system for so e. There may have been backache, ling of the feet and ankles, disturb f the urinary organs, such as brick d eposit in the urine, highly colored scanty or cloudy urine, bladder pains, frequent or supressed urination, burning sensation when urinating, etc.

Do not neglect any of these symptoms, for, if neglected they will eventually lead to Bright's Disease, Dropsy and Diabetes.

On the first sign of anything wrong Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go to the seat of trouble, strengthen the kidneys and help them to filter the blood properly and flush off all the impurities which cause kidney trouble.

Miss Albertha B. Clarke, Stony Creek, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with kidney trouble for several years; my back was weak, I had such terrible headaches, and I was so restless I could not sleep at night and tried everything without any benefit. Meantime a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got four boxes and they completely cured me. I now feel as well as I ever did and would advise everyone suffering from Kidney Disease to try them."

MORRIS GAINS A SEAT.

Returns From Newfoundland Elections Show One Turnover Already.

St. John's, Nfld., May 10.—Only two constituencies have yet returned the results of the polling in Saturday's general election in Newfoundland.

One of these, Carbonear, elected Goddison, a supporter of Sir Edward Morris, the acting Premier, by 44 votes to the seat which he lost by 23 votes at the last election in November.

In Brigus, Warren, a Morrisite, retains his seat by a majority reduced from 174 to 24.

The uncertainty as to the general result of the election is greatly increased by the curiously divergent results to the two constituencies which announced returns, Carbonear and Brigus.

The adherents of Sir Edward Morris, the acting Premier, are jubilant over their capture of the Carbonear seat, which has been a Liberal stronghold continuously for 20 years, but this surprising return was offset in a measure by the fact that they narrowly escaped losing Brigus. The Brigus constituency has returned a Conservative for 16 years, but Saturday the majority was reduced to a narrow margin.

JAPS SEEM UNPOPULAR.

Vancouverites Split Over Reception to Battleships.

Vancouver, B.C., May 10.—The celebration of the visit of the Japanese cruisers Aso and Sayo on May 17 is likely to be a badly mixed affair, as is shown by the marked opposition to the celebration arrangement in civic quarters. The civic finance committee by very decided majority have turned down a recommendation of Mayor Douglas for $1,000 donation to the militia officers in aid of parade and entertainment expense.

Ald. McMillan declared, when the military deputation presented its request for the appropriation, that Vancouver ought rather to show the Japs "how well prepared we are to shoot them." Four aldermen out of five voted with McMillan, despite the protests of the military men that their action was against Imperial ethics, and that Vancouver should cultivate trade relations with Japan.

The Trades and Labor Council have also officially decided that no labor organization should take any part whatever in the celebration.

This is all in the face of a published appeal of the mayor to the citizens to make the celebration a success.

Kinrades Move to Toronto.

Toronto, May 10.—The Kinrade family, whose movements have been so prominently before the public for weeks, arrived in the city last night about 9 p.m. and were driven by cab to their apartments at 23 Homewood avenue.

It is believed that they will take up residence in Toronto for the summer at least, as Mr. Kinrade does not intend to resume his duties as principal of the Canon street school until September.

Geo. T. Blackstock, K.C., and the provincial officers and medical specialists have made their reports to the Attorney-General, and what further action, if any, is to be taken rests with the Department.

29,000,000 Wage Earners.

Washington, D.C., May 10.—In the tariff debate Saturday, Senator Lodge, calculating that the number of people engaged in trades and occupations in the United States at 29,000,000, declared that, including those who were dependant upon their wages for support, they made up "practically the whole population of the nation." Asserting that the protective system had been in force in some form since 1816, he insisted that to change it now would be to bring disaster upon the nation.

Royal Prince for India.

London, May 10.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Calcutta asserts that the British Government is seriously considering the question of placing the vice-royalship of India in the hands of a prince of the royal blood, and the suggestion is made that one of the younger sons of the Prince of Wales be trained for the post. Lord Minto is the present viceroy.

Juror Went Insane.

Concord, Mass., May 10.—Willis A. White, a member of the jury which on Tuesday convicted Chester S. Jordan of murder, was sent to the Worcester Insane Hospital yesterday by Judge Prescott Keyes of the District Court, who decided that the man was insane. It is believed that White broke down under the strain of the trial.

Diplomats Smugglers?

Yokohama, May 10.—The Japanese press makes serious charges of smuggling for foreigners at Yokohama and Kobe, alleging that the evasion of the duty on tobacco has reached the extreme limit. The charges declare that great suspicion of fraud rests with certain members of the diplomatic corps.

Struck With Pickaxe.

Sarnia, May 10.—An Indian, David Jacobs, a railway navvy, suddenly stooped to pick up some stones beside the track, was accidentally struck on the head with a pick-axe wielded by an elder brother, who was loosening the ties. He will probably die.

THE CONMEE BILL GETS ITS READING

Conmee and Canada Life Measures Get Third Reading.

MR. BORDEN FIGHTS HARD

Opposition Leader Puts Up a Stiff Struggle on Score of Government's Power to Expropriate Land Which He Says Belongs to Province—Messrs. Turriff and Lancaster Get After the Insurance Bill.

Ottawa, May 10.—After a mild parting kick administered by Mr. Borden and a division challenged by the Opposition on the third reading, Mr. Conmee's bill to incorporate the Ontario & Michigan Power Co. completed its stormy passage through the House of Commons Saturday.

R. L. Borden strongly resisted the argument that the Federal Government had the right to expropriate provincial lands.

"If this Parliament, acting within its jurisdiction, can expropriate or authorize the expropriation of lands belonging to the Provincial Government, then the Legislature of the province, acting within its jurisdiction, can authorize the expropriation of lands belonging to the Government of Canada. There is no escape from that.

"If my right hon. friend's view is correct the western provinces could get their lands back from Canada by expropriating them, without much compensation, because the ordinary principle of compensation, as anyone who bestows the slightest attention upon the subject knows, is the value of the land, but the person who expropriates, but to the person from whom it was expropriated.

"As a matter of fact, no such power exists."

Mr. Borden concluded by saying that the power of expropriation was the only point in the bill from which he dissented.

In discussing the Canada Life bill, J. G. Turriff (Lib., Assiniboia) said it was corporation legislation against the people of the worst type. It would take away the rights of some 30,000 or 40,000 Canadian policyholders, but, more serious than that was the fact that they could not take away the rights of the British and American policyholders. Since the rate paid to the policyholders had gone down, the rates to the stockholders had gone up. So had the salaries, which were now 50 per cent. of the original capital of the company and six per cent. on the present paid-up capital.

Mr. Roy (Lib., Montmagny) thought it would be a good thing if the legislation was delayed for six months, so that shareholders and policyholders might reach an agreement.

In 1873, the people who wanted the legislation could have got what they asked for, said Mr. Lancaster, who said it was an unfair statement that A. H. Clarke had made that Senator Cox was the target of the Opposition. The bill should be left over until the insurance law had been amended.

Mr. Lennox asked Sir Wilfrid Laurier if the Government had received any opinion on the measure from the Minister of Justice, and was told that no further opinion had been given by Mr. Aylesworth that had been stated in the House. The bill was then passed through the various stages and carried on division.

The sub-committee of the banking and commerce committee, which has been considering in camera details of the insurance bill will, to-morrow, make a report to the full committee, which it is expected will send the bill on the same day to the House of Commons.

It is expected that if any amendments are proposed, it will be agreed to take them into consideration in the committee of the whole House.

Unless unexpected difficulties arise it is believed the bill will be given its third reading this week by the Commons, but will still have to be passed by the Senate.

Liberal members of Parliament have signed a resolution addressed to Hon. Wm. Pugsley, expressing their "unbounded confidence" in his honesty and integrity and their "belief in the absolute unfairness and partisanship" of the Landry commission report; also complaining that the Conservative party did not carry out arrangements as to the duration of the debate "because they believed they could prevent the Government from receiving as large a majority as they would have had had the vote been taken when agreed upon."

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

EXAMINER'S BIG SPORTING EXTRA ON SATURDAY WAS APPRECIATED IN PETERBORO

Did you see the Examiner's Sporting Edition on Saturday night?

Nearly everyone in Peterborough, who follows athletics did and as a result the Examiner has been overwhelmed with congratulations upon the most ambitious and most successful sporting extra ever issued by a Peterborough paper. At 7:30 o'clock, just as advertised and less than thirty-five minutes after Henri St. Yves had trotted across the line the winner of the New York Marathon by five laps, the Examiner's sporting extra, giving a complete account of the big $10,000 Derby, as well as the Shrubb-Longboat race in Montreal, the result of the Toronto-Baltimore Eastern League game and the scores of other big League contests, was on the street and was being eagerly snapped up by the people who have learned to know what they con expect merit in an Examiner extra. That they were delighted was putting it mildly.

There was all kinds of interest in both the Montreal and New York races and the sporting enthusiasts wanted to know all about both. They got the fullest possible information in the extra. The Examiner's extra was not merely a couple of columns of bulletins on the races, but was a complete page giving a readable connected story of the struggles with the most spectacular and interesting features of both depicted. Readers of the Examiner special knew all about the spectacular early stage duel between St. Yves and John D. Marsh, about the plucky work of Svanberg, and his finishing second—after collapsing in a heap, about Dorando's quitting and then finishing fresh and strong amid a storm of mingled cheers and hisses, about the remarkable grit of Fred Appleby, the little Englishman, who fainted once but went on and finished like a hundred yards man, only to keel over again, and about Simpson's steady going which finally won him fourth place and a goodly share of the prize money. They knew too, that Alfie Shrubb had beaten Tom Longboat a third of a mile and they knew the whole story of the race, that Shrubb had gradually increased his lead and settled down to hold it, while the Indian ran fifteen miles just as fast as he had ever done it and a whole lot faster than most people imagined he could do the distance in.

Time was when the most of the people of Peterborough would have to wait until Monday to hear the details of any big sporting event but the Eximiner has changed all that recently and the service that is being given is appreciated.

There was so great a demand for the extras that the press had to be started again and several hundred more run off, and even then the issue was entirely sold out. The newsboys quickly realized that they had a good thing in the Examiner extras and ten minutes after the big press started turning them out there were twenty-five boys on the street selling the specials like hot cakes and some of the enterprising youngsters made a nice little piece of pocket money for themselves in a few minutes. They found no difficulty in selling them as the people knew that they could depend in getting all the details in the Examiner and were eager to get the paper.

The Examiner in getting out the best sporting extra published in Peterborough owes considerable to the splendid service given by the C.P.R. Telegraph Company, who had a line into the grounds at Montreal, and who had arranged good connections with the New York race. The local employees of the company did everything possible to assist the Examiner in giving the public a complete and speedy account of the two big races. With their co-operation it was possible to score such a tremendous success.

SATURDAY'S MARATHON WAS MARKED BY SCENES OF MOST PLUCKY DETERMINATION

New York, May 8.—Grand International Marathon; distance 26 miles 385 yards; for purse of $10,000; thirteen starters; first seven to finish to share in prizes; $5,000 to first, $2,000 to second, $1,200 to third, etc.

Winner, Henri St. Yves, France; time 2:44:05. Second, John Svanberg, Sweden, 2:50:54. Third, Ted Crook, United States, 2:52:10. Fourth, Fred. Simpson, Canadian Indian, 2:54:13. Fifth, Fred Appleby, England, 2:56:17. Sixth, Dorando Pietri, Italy, 2:58:19. Seventh, Edouard Cibot, France, 3:03:26. Attendance, 20,000.

In a gruelling race, in the course of which runner after runner collapsed, only to stumble on again with almost superhuman effort to the end, Henri St. Yves, the stocky little French Marathon runner, who jumped into fame a month ago by defeating such runners as Dorando, Hayes, Shrubb and Longboat in the first great professional outdoor Marathon Derby held in New York, to-day took the measure of twelve sturdy competitors in an international Marathon held at the Polo Grounds, and romped home a winner by the handsome margin of 5 laps, or five-sixths of a mile.

John Svanberg, carrying the blue and yellow of Sweden, finished second after one of the pluckiest uphill fights ever witnessed on the running track, and led Crook, an unknown runner from New England, who staggered over the tape in third place. The once mighty Dorando, considered a likely winner before the start of the race, finished no better than sixth, his many halts in the latter part of the race proving too great a handicap for him to overcome at the end.

The fourth and fifth men, Fred. Simpson, the Canadian Indian, and Fred. Appleby, the English entry, plodded their patient way to the end, as did Edouard Cibot, the French six-day runner, who finished seventh. John D. Marsh, the Canadian entrant, after running second to St. Yves for fifteen miles, found the pace too much for him, and give up in the twenty-fifth mile when all hope of qualifying for the purse money had been lost.

Of the other contestants, Tom Morrissey, of Yonkers, only recently turned professional, running under American colours, collapsed utterly in the sixteenth mile, and had to be carried from the field, but Pat White and Mat Maloney, running for Ireland; Louis Orphée, running for France, and Felix Carvajal, running for Cuba, plodded on doggedly to the end.

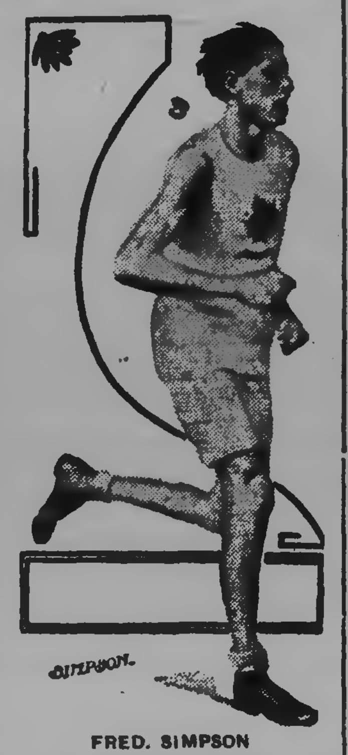
St. Yves' time, 2:44:05, was almost four minutes slower than the mark set by him in the Marathon Derby of a month ago. The pace at which the first ten miles were run, however, was very much faster than that which has characterized former events of this kind, the five miles being negotiated in 27 minutes 56 seconds, and the ten miles in 56:03.

The race brought to the Polo Grounds a crowd of nearly 20,000 enthusiasts, a great many of whom were in their seats hours before the start. The weather was ideal. The air had just enough crispness to make the terrible strain of running as light as possible. Nevertheless, the heart-breaking pace set for the first ten miles soon told on the runners, and man after man sank to the turf exhausted, only to go on again, spurred by trainers, and shouts of the spectators and the lively music of the band.

At the crack of the starting pistol Marsh took the lead, with St. Yves edging him stride for stride, the little Frenchman pattering on like a steady Shetland pony, never more than few feet behind the Canadian.

For fifteen miles the two ran practically together, for although St. Yves assumed the role of pacemaker in the fourth mile and ran up his gait to a racking speed, the man from Canada hung on. Behind these two, distanced sometimes by a few yards, at others by several laps, the tow-headed Svanberg strode his even way along with Scandinavian phlegm.

In the sixteen mile St Yves had killed his man, and Marsh began to fall back slowly, at first by inches, and then by yards and complete laps. First Svanberg, then Appleby, running with long graceful strides, passed him. For a while the plucky Canadian fought against Dorando passing him, but the Italian would not be denied, and amid the shouts of his almost frantic supporters rushed by with a fine burst of speed.



FRED. SIMPSON
Who Ran the Most Creditable and Plucky Race of His Career on Saturday.

This theatrical sprint of the Italian runner was not followed up, however, and to the dismay of the thousands who had pinned their faith on him, he stopped when opposite his quarters. After three minutes of fanning and rubbing he was again in the race, but twice again, in the sixteen and nineteen miles, he retired from the contest, once leaving the grounds altogether. From the twentieth mile to the end he ran in splendid form, however, but even thought he gained lap after lap upon every one of his competitors, not excepting St. Yves, his many stops in the race doomed him to failure in his efforts to make up his lost ground.

As the race wore on the runners began to show signs of distress. First Morrissey, then Appleby, then Svanberg, two laps only behind St. Yves, toppled over on the grass, utterly spent. All three struggled to their feet again and continued bravely, but fcr Morrissey the strain had been too much, and he had to leave the field, carried in the arms of his trainers.

The surprise of the day as the end neared was Crook, the Fall River runner, who, running as if each lap would be his last, managed to creep his way to the front, past Dorando, past Marsh, past Appleby, past Simpson, and on to the very heels of Svanberg.

As a sensational finish to an already stirring race, Crook, Svanberg and Appleby all crumpled up after crossing the finish, and had to be carried off the field. Dorando, however, was in apparently as good condition at the finish as at the start, and galloped off the grounds amid both cheers and hisses.

HOW ABOUT THAT THIRD OF A MILE LEAD NOW LOU?

Montreal, May 8.—Take it from me, Tom Longboat will give Alfred Shrubb a good, close run to-day at the M. A. A. A. grounds, or he will drop in his tracks.

These stories of his excesses have been exaggerated, and when I saw him to-day, he looked and felt fine. He says he'll win out. I don't think he will, but I cannot see eye and eye with rabid Shrubbites, who say Alfie will beat him by a mile.

If Shrubb beats the Indian a full circuit of the track, a third of a mile, I will be surprised. The Indian is not quite on the edge, and the Englishman will not dare to take liberties with him, lest he kill himself off, and lose out.

Shrubb does not like the journey once he passes the twelve-mile mark. He runs from there on, on his nerve, plus what lead he gets on his opponent by reason of his prenomenal early speed. Shrubb is right, and just confident of making a joke of the redskin.—Lou E. Marsh to the Toronto Star.

LOCAL BASEBALL

Two of the City League teams met in a work-out game on Saturday at the Exhibition grounds. The Lakeviews, at the end of the ninth innings were three runs to the good on the Rovers—the cub team. The score was 12 to 9. Paddy Gorham was pitching for the Lakeviews, and Jack Patterson catching. The latter put up a fine game for this time of the year, catching four or five runners at second, and all the time watching the bases like a hawk. Neary and Wood was the battery for the Rovers. Neary is comparatively new at the game, but is giving a good account of himself. Dannie Hillier is reported guiding the Rovers' barque, and should keep the boys together and maintain discipline.

• • •

There has been a suggestion regarding the formation of a Senior League that the Lock Works put in a team. One of the men of the shop believes they can get a team together. There is another proposition among some of the players who want to provide a faster line of ball than the Intermediates can supply. There may be developments in a short time.

The Intermediate City Baseball League should soon be starting now, and it is up to the committee to draw up the schedule. Another matter is the certificates which should be issued at any time. The teams are beginning to get into shape and in a few weeks should show some kind of class in their work.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR WEDNESDAY NIGHT'S BOUT

All arrangements have been completed for the bout between Jimmy Kelly, of Buffalo, and Tommy Daly, of Toronto, in the Brock St. Rink on Wednesday night, which gives promise of being one of the hardest mit fights ever pulled off in Peterborough. The rink will prove a very satisfactory place to hold the match. A platform will be erected in the centre, well elevated, so that the fans in any part of the house will have a clear and uninterrupted observation of the entire go. Word has been received from both boys that they are in the best of shape and both expect to win. The feeling among local followers of the game is pretty well divided. Those who have seen them both in action say that it will be a tough go and do not attempt to pick a winner, but the fans who have only watched Kelly's work, think that he will take a whole lot of beating. Whichever way the bout goes it will be a scrap for the whole ten rounds.

The management is making arrangements for a fast preliminary bout and altogether there will be doings Wednesday night.

FRED SIMPSON RAN FINE RACE.

Considering that it was his second gruelling grind in one week and that he was not supposed to be in condition for the first one, Fred Simpson made a grand showing in Saturday's Derby in New York, and it is pleasing to note that for his pluck in finishing fourth he will get $900 in prize money. The Indian left a field of well-known gallopers behind him, beating John D. Marsh, the winner of a week ago; Dorando, the little Italian; Fred Appleby, the English phenom; Maloney, the American runner; Pat White, the Irish champion; Louis Cibot and Edouard Orphee, the French long-distance men; Morrissey, a well-known American amateur and winner of the Boston Marathon, and Carvajal, the Cuban. To trim such men as those after having followed John D. Marsh through a record-breaking Marathon seven days before is about as noteworthy an achievement as the Indian has ever done. He finished all in collapsing at the line, thus showing that he had run himself out, and indicating that there is no streak in the Indian, but that he is as game as they make them. And, with the exception of Dorando, they were all game in Saturday's race, Svanberg, Appleby, Crook and Simpson all collapsed but the Italian left the track, apparently all in and had to be coaxed back and then finished like a quarter miler, sprinting across to his dressing room afterwards, amid hisses from the crowd, who did not relish his strong finish after his appearance of being all in.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

Torontos again put the Indian sign on Baltimore at the Island on Saturday, winning 5 to 4, after having apparently lost the contest. The Leafs had five errors, but they managed to bunch their hits, and won out in the eighth. Grimshaw's hitting and double play unasisted were two of the most prominent features. McGinley pitched for Torontos and Buyers for series at Toronto to-day, Adkins pitching against Rudolph. Torontos have at last secured Carl Lundgren, the well-known Chicago Cubs' twirler. Jersey City opens a four-game series at the Island to-morrow.

Montreal Walloped.

Before the biggest crowd that ever saw a game in Montreal, Iron Man McGinnity's Newark hired men put it all over Caseys' gladiators Saturday by 11 runs to 3. Flater, the Skeeters' big league pitcher, held the Royals to six hits, while Smith was touched up for thirteen.

A Pitching Battle.

Rochester beat Providence Saturday by 1 to 0 in a pitching duel between Holmes and Lavender. The Bronchos only had four hits, but it proved enough to win.

Buffalo could not hit Goettell Saturday, getting five hits and as a result Jersey City won 4 to 1 in an interesting game.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

In the National League Pittsburg's winning streak was stopped after 8 victories and stopped with a bang, too, St. Louis beating the Pirates 8 to 0. Pittsburg could not hit Powell, while the Cardinals bunched their safeties on Adams, Brandon and Maddox.

Cubs Won and Lost.

Chicago beat Cincinnati 6 to 3, on Saturday, using Reulbach and Higginbotham, their new purchase from St. Louis, while Rowan and Gasper worked for the Reds. The Cubs won out in the seventh and eighth by getting their hits in a cluster. On Sunday, however, St. Louis, who had stopped Pittsburg the day before, got the Cubs' goat, beating them 5 to 2. Failure to hit Rhodes wa sthe principal reason for the Chicago's failure to bring home the bacon.

Giants Trimmed.

Boston trimmed the New York Giants Saturday 2 to 1, splendid pitching by Mattern holding the Gothamites to two lonely hits. Ames was in form, too, and five safeties represented the Bean Eaters' efforts with the willow.

Dodgers Lost Again.

The Phillies stopped Brooklyn again on Saturday, getting thirteen hits off Pitchers Scalan and Wilhelm, and winning 8 to 2. Moren held the Dodgers to eight well scattered hits.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE.

In the American League Chicago and Cleveland broke even in a double header Sunday. The Sox won the first 4 to 2, and dropped the second 4 to 1. In the first Walsh pitched against Cy Young and allowed but four hits, while in the second, White the Sox recruit pitcher from Wichita, was stacked up against Berger, the Cleveland pitcher having the better of the argument, allowing but four hits, as compared with seven.

Highlanders Lost.

The New York Highlanders, although they out hit Boston, were beaten 6 to 4 in a free-hitting game. Morgan and Steele for Boston, and Quinn and Warhop for the Highlanders, were the pitchers.

Phillies Won.

Philadelphia beat Washington 1 to 0 in an excellent game in which the hitting was light on both sides. Krause, for Philadelphia, and Burns Hughes and Smith, for the Senators, were the pitchers.

Naps Beat Chicago.

On Saturday in the American, the Nops bumped Chicago 8 to 4. Rhoades and Liebhardt for Cleveland, and Smith and Owen, for Chicago, did the twirling.

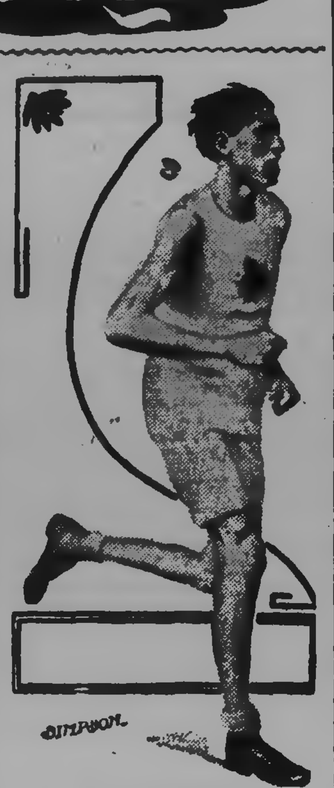
Time was when the most of the people of Peterborough would have to wait until Monday to hear the details of any big sporting event but the Eximiner has changed all that recently and the service that is being given is appreciated.

There was so great a demand for the extras that the press had to be started again and several hundred more run off, and even then the issue was entirely sold out. The newsboys quickly realized that they had a good thing in the Examiner extras and ten minutes after the big press started turning them out there were twenty-five boys on the street selling the specials like hot cakes and some of the enterprising youngsters made a nice little piece of pocket money for themselves in a few minutes. They found no difficulty in selling them as the people knew that they could depend in getting all the details in the Examiner and were eager to get the paper.

The Examiner in getting out the best sporting extra published in Peterborough owes considerable to the splendid service given by the C.P.R. Telegraph Company, who had a line into the grounds at Montreal, and who had arranged good connections with the New York race. The local employees of the company did everything possible to assist the Examiner in giving the public a complete and speedy account of the two big races. With their co-operation it was possible to score such a tremendous success.



FRED. SIMPSON
Who Ran the Most Creditable and Plucky Race of His Career on Saturday.

SATURDAY'S MARATHON WAS MARKED BY SCENES OF MOST PLUCKY DETERMINATION

New York, May 8.—Grand International Marathon; distance 26 miles 385 yards; for purse of $10,000; thirteen starters; first seven to finish to share in prizes; $5,000 to first, $2,000 to second, $1,200 to third, etc.

Winner, Henri St. Yves, France; time 2:44:05. Second, John Svanberg, Sweden, 2:50:54. Third, Ted Crook, United States, 2:52:10. Fourth, Fred. Simpson, Canadian Indian, 2:54:13. Fifth, Fred.Appleby, England, 2:56:17. Sixth, Dorando Pietri, Italy, 2:58:10. Seventh, Edouard Cibot, France, 3:03:26. Attendance, 20,000.

In a gruelling race, in the course of which runner after runner collapsed, only to stumble on again with almost superhuman effort to the end, Henri St. Yves, the stocky little French Marathon runner, who jumped into fame a month ago by defeating such runners as Dorando, Hayes, Shrubb and Longboat in the first great professional outdoor Marathon Derby held in New York, to-day took the measure of twelve sturdy competitors in an international Marathon held at the Polo Grounds, and romped home a winner by the handsome margin of 5 laps, or five-sixths of a mile.

John Svanberg, carrying the blue and yellow of Sweden, finished second after one of the pluckiest uphill fights ever witnessed on the running track, and led Crook, an unknown runner from New England, who staggered over the tape in third place. The once mighty Dorando, considered a likely winner before the start of the race, finished no better than sixth,his many halts in the latter part of the race proving too great a handicap for him to overcome at the end.

The fourth and fifth men, Fred. Simpson, the Canadian Indian, and Fred. Appleby, the English entry, plodded their patient way to the end, as did Edouard Cibot, the French six-day runner,who finished seventh. John D. Marsh, the Canadian entrant, after running second to St. Yves for fifteen miles, found the pace too much for him, and give up in the twenty-fifth mile when all hope of qualifying for the purse money had been lost.

Of the other contestants, Tom Morrissey, of Yonkers, only recently turned professional, running under American colours, collapsed utterly in the sixteenth mile, and had to be carried from the field, but Pat White and Mat Maloney, running for Ireland; Louis Orphee, running for France, and Felix Carvajal, running for Cuba, plodded on doggedly to the end.

St. Yves' time, 2:44:05. was almost four minutes slower than the mark set by him in the Marathon Derby of a month ago. The pace at which the first ten miles were run, however, was very much faster than that which has characterized former events of this kind, the five miles being negotiated in 27 minutes 56 seconds, and the ten miles in 56:02.

The race brought to the Polo Grounds a crowd of nearly 20,000 enthusiasts, a great many of whom were in their seats hours before the start. The weather was ideal. The air had just enough crispness to make the terrible strain of running as light as possible. Nevertheless, the heart-breaking pace set for the first ten miles soon told on the runners, and man after man sank to the turf exhausted, only to go on again, spurred by trainers, and shouts of the spectators and the lively music of the band.

At the crack of the starting pistol Marsh took the lead, with St. Yves edging him stride for stride, the little Frenchman pattering on like a steady Shetland pony, never more than few feet behind the Canadian.

For fifteen miles the two ran practically together, for although St. Yves assumed the role of pacemaker in the fourth mile and ran up his gait to a racking speed, the man from Canada hung on. Behind these two, distanced sometimes by a few yards, at others by several laps, the tow-headed Svanberg strode his even way along with Scandinavian phlegm.

In the sixteen mile St Yves had killed his man, and Marsh began to fall back slowly, at first by inches, and then by yards and complete laps. First Svanberg, then Appleby, running with long graceful strides, passed him. For a while the plucky Canadian fought against Dorando passing him, but the Italian would not be denied, and amid the shouts of his almost frantic supporters rushed by with a fine burst of speed.

This theatrical sprint of the Italian runner was not followed up, however, and to the dismay of the thousands who had pinned their faith on him, he stopped when opposite his quarters. After three minutes of fanning and rubbing he was again in the race, but twice again, in the sixteen and nineteen miles, he retired from the contest, once leaving the grounds altogether. From the twentieth mile to the end he ran in splendid form, however, but even thought he gained lap after lap upon every one of his competitors, not excepting St. Yves, his many stops in the race doomed him to failure in his efforts to make up his lost ground.

As the race wore on the runners began to show signs of distress. First Morrissey, then Appleby, then Svanberg, two laps only behind St. Yves, toppled over on the grass, utterly spent. All three struggled to their feet again and continued bravely, but for Morrissey the strain had been too much, and he had to leave the field, carried in the arms of his trainers.

The surprise of the day as the end neared was Crook, the Fall River runner, who, running as if each lap would be his last, managed to creep his way to the front, past Dorando, past Marsh, past Appleby, past Simpson, and on to the very heels of Svanberg.

As a sensational finish to an already stirring race, Crook, Svanberg and Appleby all crumpled up after crossing the finish, and had to be carried off the field. Dorando, however, was in apparently as good condition at the finish as at the start, and galloped off the grounds amid both cheers and hisses.

HOW ABOUT THAT THIRD OF A MILE LEAD NOW LOU?

Montreal, May 8.—Take it from me, Tom Longboat will give Alfred Shrubb a good, close run to-day at the M. A. A. A. grounds, or he will drop in his tracks.

These stories of his excesses have been exaggerated, and when I saw him to-day, he looked and felt fine. He says he'll win out. I don't think he will, but I cannot see eye and eye with rabid Shrubbites, who say Alfie will beat him by a mile.

If Shrubb beats the Indian a full circuit of the track, a third of a mile, I will be surprised. The Indian is not quite on the edge, and the Englishman will not dare to take liberties with him, lest he kill himself off, and lose out.

Shrubb does not like the journey once he passes the twelve-mile mark. He runs from there on, on his nerve, plus what lead he gets on his opponent by reason of his prenomenal early speed. Shrubb is right, and just confident of making a joke of the redskin.—Lou E. Marsh to the Toronto Star.

LOCAL BASEBALL

Two of the City League teams met in a work-out game on Saturday at the Exhibition grounds. The Lakeviews, at the end of the ninth innings were three runs to the good on the Rovers—the cub team. The score was 12 to 9. Paddy Gorham was pitching for the Lakeviews, and Jack Patterson catching. The latter put up a fine game for this time of the year, catching four or five runners at second, and all the time watching the bases like a hawk. Neary and Wood was the battery for the Rovers. Neary is comparatively new at the game, but is giving a good account of himself. Dannie Hillier is reported guiding the Rovers' barque, and should keep the boys together and maintain discipline.

• • •

There has been a suggestion regarding the formation of a Senior League that the Lock Works put in a team. One of the men of the shop believes they can get a team together. There is another proposition among some of the players who want to provide a faster line of ball than the Intermediates can supply. There may be developments in a short time.

The Intermediate City Baseball League should soon be starting now, and it is up to the committee to draw up the schedule. Another matter is the certificates which should be issued at any time. The teams are beginning to get into shape and in a few weeks should show some kind of class in their work.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR WEDNESDAY NIGHT'S BOUT

All arrangements have been completed for the bout between Jimmy Kelly, of Buffalo, and Tommy Daly, of Toronto, in the Brock St. Rink on Wednesday night, which gives promise of being one of the hardest mit fights ever pulled off in Peterborough. The rink will prove a very satisfactory place to hold the match. A platform will be erected in the centre, well elevated, so that the fans in any part of the house will have a clear and uninterrupted observation of the entire go. Word has been received from both boys that they are in the best of shape and both expect to win. The feeling among local followers of the game is pretty well divided. Those who have seen them both in action say that it will be a tough go and do not attempt to pick a winner, but the fans who have only watched Kelly's work, think that he will take a whole lot of beating. Whichever way the bout goes it will be a scrap for the whole ten rounds.

The management is making arrangements for a fast preliminary bout and altogether there will be doings Wednesday night.

FRED SIMPSON RAN FINE RACE.

Considering that it was his second gruelling grind in one week and that he was not supposed to be in condition for the first one, Fred Simpson made a grand showing in Saturday's Derby in New York, and it is pleasing to note that for his pluck in finishing fourth he will get $900 in prize money. The Indian left a field of well-known gallopers behind him, beating John D. Marsh, the winner of a week ago; Dorando, the little Italian; Fred Appleby, the English phenom; Maloney, the American runner; Pat White, the Irish champion; Louis Cibot and Edouard Orphee, the French long-distance men; Morrissey, a well-known American amateur and winner of the Boston Marathon, and Carvajal, the Cuban. To trim such men as those after having followed John D. Marsh through a record-breaking Marathon seven days before is about as noteworthy an achievement as the Indian has ever done. He finished all in collapsing at the line, thus showing that he had run himself out, and indicating that there is no streak in the Indian, but that he is as game as they make them. And, with the exception of Dorando, they were all game in Saturday's race, Svanberg, Appleby, Crook and Simpson all collapsed but the Italian left the track, apparently all in and had to be coaxed back and then finished like a quarter miler, sprinting across to his dressing room afterwards, amid hisses from the crowd, who did not relish his strong finish after his appearance of being all in.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

Torontos again put the Indian sign on Baltimore at the Island on Saturday, winning 5 to 4, after having apparently lost the contest. The Leafs had five errors, but they managed to bunch their hits, and won out in the eighth, Grimshaw's hitting and double play unasisted were two of the most prominent features. McGinley pitched for Torontos and Buyers for series at Toronto to-day, Adkins pitching against Rudolph. Torontos have at last secured Carl Lundgren, the well-known Chicago Cubs' twirler. Jersey City opens a four-game series at the Island to-morrow.

Montreal Walloped.

Before the biggest crowd that ever saw a game in Montreal, Iron Man McGinnity's Newark hired men put it all over Caseys' gladiators Saturday by 11 runs to 3. Flater, the Skeeters' big league pitcher, held the Royals to six hits, while Smith was touched up for thirteen.

A Pitching Battle.

Rochester beat Providence Saturday by 1 to 0 in a pitching duel between Holmes and Lavender. The Bronchos only had four hits, but it proved enough to win.

Buffalo could not hit Goettell Saturday, getting five hits and as a result Jersey City won 4 to 1 in an interesting game.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

In the National League Pittsburg's winning streak was stopped after 8 victories and stopped with a bang, too, St. Louis beating the Pirates 8 to 0. Pittsburg could not hit Powell, while the Cardinals bunched their safeties on Adams, Brandon and Maddox.

Cubs Won and Lost.

Chicago beat Cincinnati 6 to 3, on Saturday, using Reulbach and Higginbotham, their new purchase from St. Louis, while Rowan and Gasper worked for the Reds. The Cubs won out in the seventh and eighth by getting their hits in a cluster. On Sunday, however, St. Louis, who had stopped Pittsburg the day before, got the Cubs' goat, beating them 5 to 2. Failure to hit Rhodes wa sthe principal reason for the Chicago's failure to bring home the bacon.

Giants Trimmed.

Boston trimmed the New York Giants Saturday 2 to 1, splendid pitching by Mattern holding the Gothamites to two lonely hits. Ames was in form, too, and five safeties represented the Bean Eaters' efforts with the willow.

Dodgers Lost Again.

The Phillies stopped Brooklyn again on Saturday, getting thirteen hits off Pitchers Scalan and Wilhelm, and winning 8 to 2. Moren held the Dodgers to eight well scattered hits.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE.

In the American League Chicago and Cleveland broke even in a double header Sunday. The Sox won the first 4 to 2, and dropped the second 4 to 1. In the first Walsh pitched against Cy Young and allowed but four hits, while in the second, White the Sox recruit pitcher from Wichita, was stacked up against Berger, the Cleveland pitcher having the better of the argument, allowing but four hits, as compared with seven.

Highlanders Lost.

The New York Highlanders, although they out hit Boston, were beaten 6 to 4 in a free-hitting game. Morgan and Steele for Boston, and Quinn and Warhop for the Highlanders, were the pitchers.

Phillies Won.

Philadelphia beat Washington 1 to 0 in an excellent game in which the hitting was light on both sides. Krause, for Philadelphia, and Burns Hughes and Smith, for the Senators, were the pitchers.

Naps Beat Chicago.

On Saturday in the American, the Nops bumped Chicago 8 to 4. Rhoades and Liebhardt for Cleveland, and Smith and Owen, for Chicago, did the twirling.

EXAMINER'S BIG SPORTING EXTRA ON SATURDAY WAS APPRECIATED IN PETERBORO

Did you see the Examiner's Sporting Edition on Saturday night?

Nearly everyone in Peterborough, who follows athletics did and as a result the Examiner has been overwhelmed with congratulations upon the most ambitious and most successful sporting extra ever issued by a Peterborough paper. At 7:30 o'clock, just as advertised and less than thirty-five minutes after Henri St. Yves had trotted across the line the winner of the New York Marathon by five laps, the Examiner's sporting extra, giving a complete account of the big $10,000 Derby, as well as the Shrubb-Longboat race in Montreal, the result of the Toronto-Baltimore Eastern League game and the scores of other big League contests, was on the street and was being eagerly snapped up by the people who have learned to know what they con expect merit in an Examiner extra. That they were delighted was putting it mildly.

There was all kinds of interest in both the Montreal and New York races and the sporting enthusiasts wanted to know all about both. They got the fullest possible information in the extra. The Examiner's extra was not merely a couple of columns of bulletins on the races, but was a complete page giving a readable connected story of the struggles with the most spectacular and interesting features of both depicted. Readers of the Examiner special knew all about the spectacular early stage duel between St. Yves and John D. Marsh, about the plucky work of Svanberg, and his finishing second—after collapsing in a heap, about Dorando's quitting and then finishing fresh and strong amid a storm of mingled cheers and hisses, about the remarkable grit of Fred Appleby, the little Englishman, who fainted once but went on and finished like a hundred yards man, only to keel over again, and about Simpson's steady going which finally won him fourth place and a goodly share of the prize money. They knew too, that Alfie Shrubb had beaten Tom Longboat a third of a mile and they knew the whole story of the race, that Shrubb had gradually increased his lead and settled down to hold it, while the Indian ran fifteen miles just as fast as he had ever done it and a whole lot faster than most people imagined he could do the distance in.

Time was when the most of the people of Peterborough would have to wait until Monday to hear the details of any big sporting event but the Eximiner has changed all that recently and the service that is being given is appreciated.

There was so great a demand for the extras that the press had to be started again and several hundred more run off, and even then the issue was entirely sold out. The newsboys quickly realized that they had a good thing in the Examiner extras and ten minutes after the big press started turning them out there were twenty-five boys on the street selling the specials like hot cakes and some of the enterprising youngsters made a nice little piece of pocket money for themselves in a few minutes. The local employees of the company did everything possible to assist the Examiner in giving the public a complete and speedy account of the two big races. HOW ABOUT THAT THIRD OF A MILE LEAD NOW LOU?

Montreal, May 8.—Take it from me, Tom Longboat will give Alfred Shrubb a good, close run to-day at the M. A. A. A. grounds, or he will drop in his tracks.

These stories of his excesses have been exaggerated, and when I saw him to-day, he looked and felt fine. He says he'll win out. I don't think he will, but I cannot see eye and eye with rabid Shrubbites, who say Alfie will beat him by a mile.

If Shrubb beats the Indian a full circuit of the track, a third of a mile, I will be surprised. The Indian is not quite on the edge, and the Englishman will not dare to take liberties with him, lest he kill himself off, and lose out.

Shrubb does not like the journey once he passes the twelve-mile mark. He runs from there on, on his nerve, plus what lead he gets on his opponent by reason of his prenomenal early speed. Shrubb is right, and just confident of making a joke of the redskin.—Lou E. Marsh to the Toronto Star.

Toronto, May 8.—W. A. Hoagland, of Auburn, N. LOCAL BASEBALL

Two of the City League teams met in a work-out game on Saturday at the Exhibition grounds. The Lakeviews, at the end of the ninth innings were three runs to the good on the Rovers—the cub team. The score was 12 to 9. Paddy Gorham was pitching for the Lakeviews, and Jack Patterson catching. The latter put up a fine game for this time of the year, catching four or five runners at second, and all the time watching the bases like a hawk. Neary and Wood was the battery for the Rovers. Neary is comparatively new at the game, but is giving a good account of himself. Dannie Hillier is reported guiding the Rovers' barque, and should keep the boys together and maintain discipline.

• • •

There has been a suggestion regarding the formation of a Senior League that the Lock Works put in a team. One of the men of the shop believes they can get a team together. There is another proposition among some of the players who want to provide a faster line of ball than the Intermediates can supply. There may be developments in a short time.

The Intermediate City Baseball League should soon be starting now, and it is up to the committee to draw up the schedule. Another matter is the certificates which should be issued at any time. The teams are beginning to get into shape and in a few weeks should show some kind of class in their work.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR WEDNESDAY NIGHT'S BOUT

All arrangements have been completed for the bout between Jimmy Kelly, of Buffalo, and Tommy Daly, of Toronto, in the Brock St. Rink on Wednesday night, which gives promise of being one of the hardest mit fights ever pulled off in Peterborough. The rink will prove a very satisfactory place to hold the match. A platform will be erected in the centre, well elevated, so that the fans in any part of the house will have a clear and uninterrupted observation of the entire go. Word has been received from both boys that they are in the best of shape and both expect to win. The feeling among local followers of the game is pretty well divided. Those who have seen them both in action say that it will be a tough go and do not attempt to pick a winner, but the fans who have only watched Kelly's work, think that he will take a whole lot of beating. Whichever way the bout goes it will be a scrap for the whole ten rounds.

The management is making arrangements for a fast preliminary bout and altogether there will be doings Wednesday night.

FRED SIMPSON RAN FINE RACE.

Considering that it was his second gruelling grind in one week and that he was not supposed to be in condition for the first one, Fred Simpson made a grand showing in Saturday's Derby in New York, and it is pleasing to note that for his pluck in finishing fourth he will get $900 in prize money. The Indian left a field of well-known gallopers behind him, beating John D. Marsh, the winner of a week ago; Dorando, the little Italian; Fred Appleby, the English phenom; Maloney, the American runner; Pat White, the Irish champion; Louis Cibot and Edouard Orphee, the French long-distance men; Morrissey, a well-known American amateur and winner of the Boston Marathon, and Carvajal, the Cuban. To trim such men as those after having followed John D. Marsh through a record-breaking Marathon seven days before is about as noteworthy an achievement as the Indian has ever done. He finished all in collapsing at the line, thus showing that he had run himself out, and indicating that there is no streak in the Indian, but that he is as game as they make them. And, with the exception of Dorando, they were all game in Saturday's race, Svanberg, Appleby, Crook and Simpson all collapsed but the Italian left the track, apparently all in and had to be coaxed back and then finished like a quarter miler, sprinting across to his dressing room afterwards, amid hisses from the crowd, who did not relish his strong finish after his appearance of being all in.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

Torontos again put the Indian sign on Baltimore at the Island on Saturday, winning 5 to 4, after having apparently lost the contest. The Leafs had five errors, but they managed to bunch their hits, and won out in the eighth, Grimshaw's hitting and double play unasisted were two of the most prominent features. McGinley pitched for Torontos and Buyers for series at Toronto to-day, Adkins pitching against Rudolph. Torontos have at last secured Carl Lundgren, the well-known Chicago Cubs' twirler. Jersey City opens a four-game series at the Island to-morrow.

Montreal Walloped.

Before the biggest crowd that ever saw a game in Montreal, Iron Man McGinnity's Newark hired men put it all over Caseys' gladiators Saturday by 11 runs to 3. Flater, the Skeeters' big league pitcher, held the Royals to six hits, while Smith was touched up for thirteen.

A Pitching Battle.

Rochester beat Providence Saturday by 1 to 0 in a pitching duel between Holmes and Lavender. The Bronchos only had four hits, but it proved enough to win.

Buffalo could not hit Goettell Saturday, getting five hits and as a result Jersey City won 4 to 1 in an interesting game.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

In the National League Pittsburg's winning streak was stopped after 8 victories and stopped with a bang, too, St. Louis beating the Pirates 8 to 0. Pittsburg could not hit Powell, while the Cardinals bunched their safeties on Adams, Brandon and Maddox.

Cubs Won and Lost.

Chicago beat Cincinnati 6 to 3, on Saturday, using Reulbach and Higginbotham, their new purchase from St. Louis, while Rowan and Gasper worked for the Reds. The Cubs won out in the seventh and eighth by getting their hits in a cluster. On Sunday, however, St. Louis, who had stopped Pittsburg the day before, got the Cubs' goat, beating them 5 to 3. Failure to hit Rhodes wa sthe principal reason for the Chicago's failure to bring home the bacon.

Giants Trimmed.

Boston trimmed the New York Giants Saturday 2 to 1, splendid pitching by Mattern holding the Gothamites to two lonely hits. Ames was in form, too, and five safeties represented the Bean Eaters' efforts with the willow.

Dodgers Lost Again.

The Phillies stopped Brooklyn again on Saturday, getting thirteen hits off Pitchers Scalan and Wilhelm, and winning 8 to 2. Moren held the Dodgers to eight well scattered hits.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE.

In the American League Chicago and Cleveland broke even in a double header Sunday. The Sox won the first 4 to 2, and dropped the second 4 to 1. In the first Walsh pitched against Cy Young and allowed but four hits, while in the second, White the Sox recruit pitcher from Wichita, was stacked up against Berger, the Cleveland pitcher having the better of the argument, allowing but four hits, as compared with seven.

Highlanders Lost.

The New York Highlanders, although they out hit Boston, were beaten 6 to 4 in a free-hitting game. Morgan and Steele for Boston, and Quinn and Warhop for the Highlanders, were the pitchers.

Phillies Won.

Philadelphia beat Washington 1 to 0 in an excellent game in which the hitting was light on both sides. Krause, for Philadelphia, and Burns Hughes and Smith, for the Senators, were the pitchers.

Naps Beat Chicago.

On Saturday in the American, the Nops bumped Chicago 8 to 4. Rhoades and Liebhardt for Cleveland, and Smith and Owen, for Chicago, did the twirling.

MANY INVENTIONS HELP THE HOUSEKEEPER.

"Spring" and "Housecleaning" mean much the same to the Housewife, and it is difficult for her to think of one without the other looming large. It is an annual or semi-annual visitation that involves inconvenience and discomforts that make it a period to be anticipated with fear and trembling by the male portion of the household at least, notwithstanding that but a small portion of the work actually falls to their share. Housecleaning time is also welcomed by the funny paper jokemakers who, through years and years of practice, have become adepts in dressing the two or three existing housecleaning jokes up in new raiment to make quite a presentable appearance.

These remarks are intended to bear directly—if briefly—on the changed and improved method of housekeeping in some directions in the average household of to-day. Housecleaning has changed in two ways since the time of our father's father; it has become easier to accomplish, and more productive of results. The housewife has many inventions and appliances that simplify the work which once was done by elbow grease and that alone. Progress and ingenuity have solved some disagreeable questions for her in the last decade or two.

Unquestionably, the most distasteful part of housecleaning is the taking up of carpets with their multitudinous tacks, beating and relaying them. Nevertheless, sanitation requires that it be done. Nowadays, the tendency is for painted or varnished floors covered with rugs and mats and their use is continually growing. It is a simple matter to take up rugs from the floor and clean them. Not only are "finished" floors more sanitary but decidedly better-looking for even the most ordinary wood floor can be transformed at a small expense into one having the appearance of costly hardwood by the application of one or two coats of varnish stain which are now made in imitation Cherry, Oak, Mahogany, Walnut and so on, and are so durable that they will successfully withstand a great deal of wear and tear occasioned by the constant walking and the movement of furniture over them.

Wall papering is being largely supplanted by wall paints and finishes in beautiful colors and shades that will stand scrubbing with soap and water and come out of the operation bright and fresh as the day they were put on. This avoids "messy" papering operations. Woodwork such as wainscoting and cupboards, given one coat of paint, specially prepared for the surface, which will dry over night, enables the housewife to keep the kitchen and pantries fairly shining with cleanliness. "Last year's" fly screens after receiving a coat of enamel are as good as new again. Furniture, too, both in the kitchen and in the other rooms of the house need not remain shabby long. The process of cleaning it with polish, or refinishing it with paint or varnish is so simple, and the furniture so improved in appearance thereby, that most housewives include a course of refinishing furniture in their Spring housecleaning operations. This applies not only to drawing and dining room chairs, but to the rough kitchen and laundry chairs and to those wicker and cane ones that spend a good deal of their time on the verandah or lawn and not only to the tables, bookcases and lounges of more or less expensive woods, but to the home-made things of rough lumber, and so on throughout the entire house. Whereas painting about the house was once a considerable undertaking now it is a matter of very little expense and a small inconvenience. As one thrifty dame was heard to remark "The use of paints and varnishes at housekeeping time has become almost a mania with me; actually I look forward to housecleaning just because it gives me an excuse to fuss with paint."

These remarks, of course, do not begin to outline the improvements and changes that have come about in the housekeeping. They are simply intended as straws to show which way the wind is blowing. For instance, there is electric light and gas where there once were lamps to clean. There are the improvements in plumbing and heating arrangements, the telephone and the gas stove, and so on, until a book almost could be written on improvements along these lines.

She who has charge of the "home" has a high mission, and inventions that go to make her work less laborious and productive of greater results, are as momentous as discoveries in any other branch of modern life. It can no longer truthfully be said that invention in things that pertain to domestic life is lagging behind in the march of progress.

PRICE OF FLOUR LIKELY TO ADVANCE AGAIN

In all probability, the wholesale price of flour per hundredweight will be again advanced. At present the price is $2.90.

The scarcity of winter wheat and the steady demand of the market is having a decided effect all over the country. Flour has been selling for a high price already, but a prominent milling man intimated this morning that even a higher figure would have to be demanded.

In any case, as Manitoba flour is very largely used, there will undoubtedly be a decided increase in the retail trade.

The bakers, whom this change will most directly affect, say that there is no immediate likelihood of a change

"Le Fremersberg" Band's New Hunting Fantasia Is Superb

Undoubtedly the heaviest, and one of the choicest selections in the repertoire of the 57th Regimental band this summer, will be the grand hunting and pastoral fantasia, "Le Fremersberg," a tone picture composed by Koennemann, and arranged by Dan. Godfrey, Jr. It is a magnificent selection, as the following synopsis will indicate, and it has been mastered thoroughly by Professor Gliddon and his capable musicians.

"The Margrave-'s Horn," echoed by the mountains, is heard summoning the Lumstemen, and the fan-fare heard first in the distance, then drawing nearer, indicates their approach. Signal for the hunt to commence. During the rustic scene which follows, the horns are heard both near and in the distance. Song of the country folk (solo with refrain and dance). During dance, a storm approaches, wind rises and the peasants' dance becomes more animated. A peal of thunder stops the dance—the peasants rush shrieking away to seek shelter. The lightning flashes — the storm grows in intensity—at last it bursts forth in full fury—rain falls in torrents—thunder crashes.

The Margrave who has been overtaken by the storm is heard crying for help—in vain. The noise of the storm drowns his appeal. Overcome by weakness, the Margrave falls to the ground. Suddenly he hears the monastery bell and the chant of the monks. Following the sound, he finds the Fremersberg. The storm ceases—and the retainers who have been seeking the Margrave, find him in the monastery. All join joyfully in the Te Deum.

Is far more likely to be the adult without glasses, than is the weak-eyed little fellow whose eyes are not given timely and proper attention. Protect the naturally defective eye of youth and you are repaid with the strong eye in after life. Abuse the immature eye and it will necessitate glasses, not for a few months only, but for a lifetime.

NASAL CATARRH

Responsible for Much Deafness, Hoarseness, Bronchitis and Stomach Trouble.

Medicated Air Will Cure.

These are common diseases, but not less dangerous and difficult to cure on that account. In our climate the weather changes quickly. We are careless. Disease attacks us before we know it. A large majority of our people have nose, lung or throat troubles and find it hard to get cured.

It's remarkable with what tenacity both the medical profession and the laity adhere to the old theory that these diseases can be reached and combated by dosing. And this despite the fact that failure to cure in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred attends this mode of treatment.

STOMACH MEDICINE CAN'T CURE.

At best it is a roundabout way of trying to reach the disease which is in the air passages of the throat, nose, bronchial tubes and lungs. Leave the stomach alone—use a remedy that air will carry into the minutest air cells, into the tiniest cavities of the affected organs.

LIQUID REMEDIES DANGEROUS.

Doctors say only "Catarrhozone" can cure—you inhale it along with the air you breathe—it goes where the living disease germs are gnawing into your system—it kills these germs—it heals, soothes, it CURES.

CATARRHOZONE GUARANTEED.

Wouldn't it be wise to use Catarrhozone now—to-day—and be cured permanently?

You can send the soothing vapor of the pine woods, the richest balsams and healing essences right to the cause of your trouble by inhaling Catarrhozone.

Little drops of wonderful curative power are distributed through the whole breathing apparatus in two seconds.

Like a miracle—that's how Catarrhozone works in bronchitis, catarrh, colds, and irritable throat. You simply breath its oily fragrant vapor and every trace of congestion and disease flees as before fire.

So safe infants can use it, so sure to cure doctors prescribe it, so beneficial in preventing winter ills no person can afford to do without Catarrhozone. Used in thousands of cases without failure. Try it yourself! 25c, 50c, $1.00 sizes. Sold by all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Making a Bridal Gown.

By LITTELL M'CLUNG.

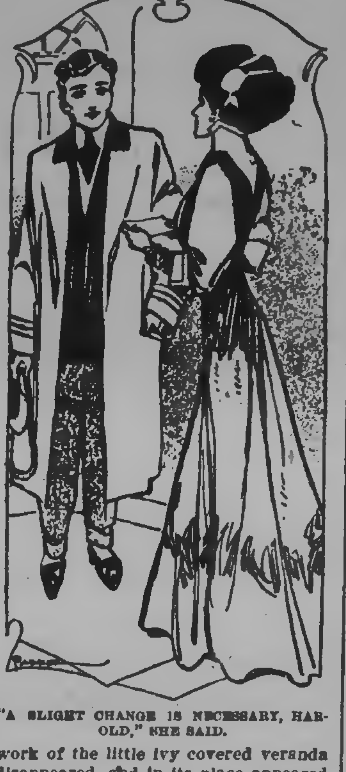
Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

When Mamie Wilson's aunt, the seamstress, passed away to happier realms, leaving Mamie and her ten-year-old sister well nigh penniless, everybody in Christiansburg was sympathetic.

Dry eyed, a sigh of distress buried deep in her heart, Mamie left the seminary six months before diploma day and took up the urgent task of supporting herself and keeping her sister at school.

Acting against the advice of her friends, she wasted no time in trying to find a place as teacher, stenographer or governess. Such positions were scarce in Christiansburg, and delay meant the acceptance of charity.

So the weather worn sign that had swung for many years from the lattice-work of the little ivy covered veranda disappeared, and in its place appeared a fresh, new board on which was painted, "Miss Mamie Wilson, Dressmaker."



"A SLIGHT CHANGE IS NECESSARY, HAROLD," SHE SAID.

Mamie knew that she could sew as fine a seam as ever went into a gown, and she hoped that her more fortunate girl friends in Christiansburg would give her lots of work to do.

But she was doomed to disappointment. After the sympathetic stage had passed friends became politely critical. "What an ordinary vocation for such a bright girl!" commented one. "I doubt if she can sew, anyway," said another. Thus Mamie got only piecework to do, and this netted her hardly enough to pay expenses.

But there was at least one person in the town who took enough interest in the brave struggle of Mamie Wilson to express himself without restraint. Harold Randolph, the only son of the richest man in Christiansburg, had known and liked Mamie ever since they were boy and girl together.

"It's an outrage," he declared, "that every woman in this burg doesn't give Mamie something to do! Why, I bet she could make a Parisian gown if it came to it!"

"If that's the case, Harold, why don't you drum up some work for her among your fashionable friends?" queried one of his girl chums banteringly, a flash of jealousy in her eyes.

The young man didn't take the query in a joking mood. "You can wager your precious life that I will whenever I see the chance!" he responded.

His opportunity did come, but in a way he least expected. A few mornings later his father announced at the breakfast table that his sister Lelia was going to marry the leading lawyer and politician of the place, who was on the eve of being nominated for congress.

Lelia said nothing, but looked fixedly at her plate. Harold gasped several times and then entered a protest against such a sudden decision. But Randolph senior was a man of immense determination. He had decided, and that settled it. They began preparations for the wedding, which, he said, would take place within a month.

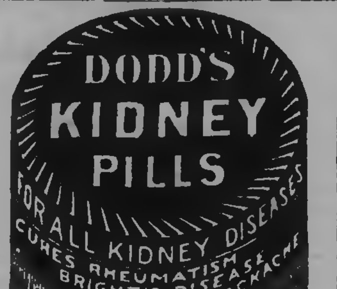
"Where do you expect to have your bridal robes constructed?" demanded Harold Randolph of his sister the moment the prematrimonial bustle began.

"Why, I shall telegraph to New York for my dressmaker to come at once," she answered without showing much interest.

"Well, as one final favor you'll do nothing of the kind, sis," he supplicated. "Lelia, for the sake of the family, don't go through the agony of having a New York tailor down here. Why not let Mamie Wilson make your costume?"

"Mamie Wilson!" exclaimed Lelia Randolph, a suspicious light in her eye. "The idea, Harold! You surely don't think Miss Wilson could fashion the kind of gown that I want?"

"I don't think anything about it," declared Harold, with emphasis. "I know she can make any sort of dress to a queen's satisfaction. She's an expert with the needle, and she has excellent taste. Besides, if I'm any judge, she's exactly your height, and she doesn't weigh five pounds more or less than you do. Why, she could model a dress over her own figure and give you a perfect fit! Then, Lelia, she is a brave, hardworking girl who is having an uphill time of it. We've got a dandy chance to help her, and it will be a downright shame if we don't do it."



Lelia Randolph put her arms about her handsome brother's neck. "All right, old fellow," she acquiesced, "there'll be no tailor from New York. Miss Wilson shall make my wedding gown!"

When she learned that she was to fashion Miss Randolph's bridal robes Mamie was the happiest girl in town. She knew this stroke of fortune meant for her other valuable orders, and she concentrated her efforts to produce the finest costume ever seen at a Christiansburg marriage.

Two weeks later a filmy glory of silk and lace was evolving rapidly from under the deft fingers. The bride to be was delighted, and her brother was as happy as the prospective bridegroom.

He stopped frequently to inquire as to the progress of the gown. Each time he was met by smiling eyes that held genuine gratitude in their dark depths, for the little dressmaker could not help suspecting that Harold had been directly instrumental in her being given the piece de resistance of the trousseau.

But all Mamie's bright hopes were doomed to sudden blight. One morning Christiansburg awoke to hear the startling news that Lelia Randolph had eloped with a penniless though talented young mining engineer who had been prospecting in the neighborhood. The town was aghast, and consternation stalked through the Randolph household. Harold was the only one who didn't look calamity stricken.

"Cheer up, all of you!" he said to his frightened mother and sisters. "This fellow sis has chosen is all right. I'm glad, I can tell you, that she had the good sense to favor him over the other chap and the courage to take him! Lelia will bring him back in a few days, and father will deed them a house; you'll see! Dad will roar for awhile, but in the end he will give him a good job with a good salary attached, and everything will work out O. K. Don't you see it will?"

This optimism finally cleared the atmosphere of some of its gloom. When calm reigned once more Harold got down to business. He made out a check payable to Miss Mamie Wilson for the full amount that was to be paid for his sister's wedding outfit. His mother signed it without a word.

Then the young man made a bee-line for the dressmaker's. Mamie answered his ring and smiled as she invited him in, but there was a suspicious mist in her eyes.

"Oh, I'm dreadfully sorry it's happened," she ventured sympathetically.

"Don't let it worry you, Mamie," replied Harold lightly. "It'll turn out all right. I came down to pay for the dress; here's mamma's check."

She took the slip of paper, glanced at it and then handed it back.

"A slight change is necessary, Harold," she said. "I couldn't take the full amount, for the gown isn't finished, you know."

"Yes, but you're going to finish it," he protested kindly.

"Certainly, if you wish it," she answered. "Then your sister will have use for it in some other way, after all?"

"Lelia have use for it?" he repeated. "Certainly not. It's for another girl now!"

"Another girl!" she echoed, her eyes sparkling. "Why, it wouldn't fit just any girl, I fear."

"Yes, there is one girl it will fit," said Harold slowly, "for she's just Lelia's size. I do hope she would like to wear it for me. Do you think she would?"

He was looking steadily into Mamie's eyes now, and his lips were compressed. She returned his gaze, and as she divined that he was in earnest her heart beat joyously.

"I'm afraid she would, very much," she whispered weakly as she nestled in his arms.

Thomas' Discouragement.

Financially music rarely pays for itself, and its producers often do their work even at a sacrifice. In a book entitled "Musical Memories" G. P. Upton tells an anecdote of Theodore Thomas, the German American orchestra leader. It was during the Sunday night concerts in Chicago, while the city was in a disturbed state, owing to the great railroad strike.

The concerts were thinly attended. At one end of the huge exposition building was the concert hall. The other end was occupied by military companies, waiting for an emergency call. I reached the building one evening some time before the hour of opening and saw Mr. Thomas sitting at a table with his head upon his hands.

He beckoned to me to come to him. I inquired if he was ill.

"I'm a bit blue tonight, old friend," he replied. "I have been thinking as I sat here that I have been swinging a baton fifteen years, and I do not see that the people are any further ahead from where I began, and as far as my pockets are concerned I am not so well off."

He paused a minute and then added, "But I am going on if it takes another fifteen years."

THE BACHELOR GIRL.

Many Types of This Popular and Interesting Personage.

In a discussion on the evolution of the bachelor girl Julia Ward Gibson remarks: There are just four classes of women—matrons, spinsters, old maids and bachelor girls—and it is one of the practical jokes of fate that frequently the spinster has been joined to some man in the bonds of wedlock and the man's woman who would be happiest married has not realized her destiny for some reason.

Now, the title "old maid" is often misapplied. Some are called old maids who are really spinsters, for that is the word which expresses the unpleasant disposition the indiscriminating would apply to all unmarried women. Spinster is the title which should be applied to those women, married or single, whose entire horizon is bounded by the limitations of self interest. What a miserable thing egotism is, that it destroys our ability to enjoy the pleasures and interests of others! It is one of those faults the germ of which is bred in us all, though the soil of personality induces different degrees of development.

Now, an old maid is an entirely different creature. She is kind hearted, self sacrificing, gentle, lovable and usually kissable. You all know her type, my friends, and rare, indeed, is the family whose connection is not blessed by an old maid aunty usually an old maid because her family "butted in" when the man she preferred was courting her. However, her relatives couldn't do without her to sew, cook, mend and take care of them through attack of all the ills man is heir to, from grip to gout. As for her, she finally puts away her dreams of natural happiness and achieves a certain kind of contentment in fussing over, caressing and taking care of the babies among the connection.

The bachelor girl is an entirely different creature. Nervous, ambitious, an idealist and a worker, she is a combination of the virtues and failings of the other three divisions of womankind.

Regret is suffering, but it is a sensation that all bachelor girls have experienced, even in the midst of success. But continued progress in one's work and a constantly broadening horizon of life soothe away the pain of past experiences by a realization of the pleasures of the present, and memories which once opened the floodgates of tears become the occasion of a quiet, retrospective happiness or perhaps just a little amusement that one could have been so easily satisfied.

And she may rightly be termed a "bachelor." Happy and contented, life holds much for her. At peace with the past, she builds ambitious plans for the future with eager interest, and if she marries now it is not for a home or because of the impulse of sudden passion, but because she has found a man whom she can love and respect and who knows how to be a jolly good chum.

But for the majority of girls matrimony is the safest harbor and the reason for their existence.

The genealogical tree of the new Lord Hardwicke furnishes a story of remarkable triumph and tragedy. The first earl, whose wife belonged to the same family as the historian Gibbon, was a distinguished lawyer and Lord High Chancellor. He became Solicitor-General when he was only twenty-nine. His second son, Charles, was also a famous lawyer, and in due course he, too, became Lord Chancellor, the only instance on record, we believe, where both father and son have reached that high office. At first the son declined the Great Seal, on account of the pledge he had given to his political friends not to accept it. But ambition triumphed. Three days later, however, in an agony of remorse, he destroyed himself.

A Huge Dam.

Tenders have been received at the New South Wales Public Works Department for the construction of the wall of the Barren Jack dam. The dam itself will be a straight wall of masonry, built on granite foundation. The length of crest will be 784 feet, maximum height from foundation 240 feet, thickness at crest 18 feet, and maximum thickness at base 169 1-4 feet. The depth of the water at the face of the dam will be approximately 224 feet. When full the reservoir will hold 33,613,000,000 cubic feet, or about 209,500,000,000 gallons. Not every day does one come across a piece of masonry of these dimensions.

Palpitation of the Heart.

One of the first danger signals that announce something wrong with the heart is the irregular beat or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all gone" sinking feeling; or again, there may be a most violent beating, with flushings of the skin and visable pulsations of the arteries. The person may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die. In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond all question, marvellous. They give such prompt relief that no one need suffer.

Mr. Sylvester Smith, Hampton, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and tried doctor's medicines, but they only gave me temporary relief. I heard of your Heart and Nerve Pills and bought two boxes and before I had used them I was completely cured and would recommend them to all similarly affected."

WONDERFUL VOICES.

Which Receive Every Possible Care and Attention.

To be a success on the grand opera stage a woman must of course have a voice — a powerful, golden voice whose tones reach to the very hearts of men and women—but beauty and grace of action and a splendid stage presence, while charming in themselves, are not necessary to her success. In fact the grand opera stars of the present day who are beautiful are very few and far between. Most of them are quite, quite plain, several are homely and few of them can be said to really act. It was the same with the favorites of other days. Patti never had histrionic power, and her only idea of expressing all kinds of emotion was by raising or lowering her eyebrows. Sontag was really ugly. Yet with the voice alone these artists charmed their audiences and compelled the favor of the public, willing or unwilling.

It is but natural, therefore, that the care of the voice should be the principal anxiety of every stage vocalist, that all the solicitude which a valetudinarian bestows upon his health should be given by the opera singer to her voice, for the voice gone, all capital and stock-in-trade, all hopes of a brilliant future vanish, and there remain only the prospect of a life of hard work at teaching.

Jenny Lind once said: "If I fail to practice one day, I notice the difference; if two days, the critics find it out; if three, everybody observes the change." Care of the voice means care of the health. Day in, day out, that precious voice must be watched; every safeguard must be thrown around it.

The hour of public appearance in the evening is, to the prima donna, the focal point of the day; everything leads up to it. All her plans for the day—indeed, of the week and year—have in view the hour when she shall stand upon the stage as queen of the boards. Her whole life is subordinated to the stage appearance in the evening. As a rule, grand opera singers are not required to appear more than two or three times a week. A grand opera star is on a strain from the moment she appears before the footlights to the moment when she dies on the stage or vanishes behind the scenes. She has rarely an instant's rest. Work so arduous can not be done every night, no voice could stand the strain, hence her limited appearances, and hence, too, her exaggerated care for the voice, which is her principal asset.

The Long Polar Night.

The polar Eskimos, the most northerly dwelling people in the world, are said to exist only by the exercise of great ingenuity and the practice of social virtues. The cheeriness, kindliness and practical socialism of the Eskimos from eastern Greenland to Alaska may be regarded as much due to their environment as is the necessity for eating large quantities of fat. The Eskimos hail the first dark evening with the same glee as the first daylight after the polar night.

When a whole summer through the eyes have been bathed in light day and night they long to see the land vanish into darkness again. And with the idea of a change they associate all the good things the winter will bring—the frozen sea and the hunting on the ice, the swift sledge drives far from the sweltering houses after bears. "Ha, now the dark nights are coming; soon the ice will close in the sea!" the men cry as they meet toward evening, or "Be glad, for soon the blubber lamps shall light those who go out to fetch meat from the flesh pots!" Others call out, "And windows and fires shall light far into the night and hasten the lagging pace of late returning sledges."

Steam Protects Safe From Robbers.

The great vault of the National City bank in Wall street, New York, made of 400 tons of steel and 75 tons of fireproofing cement, is protected against invasion by a unique system of steam pipes, as well as the more ordinary methods. All around the safe, within and without, are brass pipes so arranged that at a moment's notice the interior and its approaches can be converted into a scalding, suffocating death pit. The purpose of the steam pipes is not so much to protect the vault from burglars as from riots, should such ever occur, and even though all the employes of the bank should be compelled to flee before the doors of the safe could be closed the steam could be turned on by any one initiated. The result would be that no one could withstand for an instant the death dealing blast.

NOVEL CARD PARTY.

A Masquerade Affair That Can Be Made Very Amusing.

For the hostess whose house is not large enough for her to give a masquerade ball there is the masquerade card party, which many people consider to be even more fun. The guests may wear fancy costumes or they may wear dominos, but all should be required to wear masks. When the guests have all arrived they should be given placards with numbers on them, which they should wear around their necks much after the fashion of the "Pity the Blind" signs. Part of the evening should be spent in playing cards, and instead of writing their names on the score cards the guests should write their numbers. No end of fun will be provided in trying to guess who the different ones are, and it increases the excitement if the guests do not know who their partners are even.

Just before supper the guests should be given cards on which there are numbers to correspond with those that are on the cards that are hung around the necks. The guests mingle together and talk to those whom they have not met during the evening, and when one person thinks he knows another he should write down that person's name opposite the number which corresponds with that on the owner's placard.

The guests then unmask, and the cards are collected after they have been corrected. To the person guessing the greatest number of people correctly a prize should be given.

A party of this kind is always successful, for it provides a vast amount of excitement and amusement to talk to one's intimate friends for five minutes before discovering his identity.

The Pyrophore.

A living light, called the pyrophore, makes illumination cheap and convenient in Brazil. The pyrophore is a monster firefly, an inch and a half long. With one it is possible to read fine print, and three will light a room. The Brazilian peasant, when he traverses by night the perilous forest paths of his country, fastens to each shoe a pyrophore. Thus illuminated, he has no difficulty in avoiding poisonous snakes, pitfalls and wild beasts. The Brazilian coquette fastens in her hair or her corsage a pyrophore incased in white tulle. The effect is as of a great luminous pearl or opal. When a pyrophore's light goes out it is not necessary to fill him up with oil, to drop a coin in him or to throw him away, but a moment's ducking in cold water suffices. Thereafter his three little lanterns, one on the breast and two on the back, emit again as bright a radiance as ever. The pyrophore, as all nature students know, is called vulgarly cuengo, but scientifically the name is Coleopter serricorn stermose elaterides.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

In the Presence of Death.

Some years ago a Swansea vessel was caught in a terrible gale, says an English paper. The captain had his wife on board, and when the wind was still rising he told her to go down below and sleep, for all was well. He remained on the bridge till the mate came up and said: "We've done all we can. Hadn't you better tell the chaps to get out the boats?"

"Yes, yes, my lad, if you think so," said the captain, who knew the only choice left was whether to go down with the ship or in a small boat, which couldn't live ten seconds in that sea. The engineers came up with the news that the fires were all out.

"Very well, my lads," said the captain quietly. "Save yourselves if you can."

"Won't you fetch the wife on deck, sir?" asked one of the men.

"No," was the calm reply. "Let her sleep, poor girl! I am going down to have a smoke." And, smoking by the bedside of his sleeping wife, he went down with the ship.

A Man of Resources.

A young man genial of face and correct in attire arose from his seat in a well patronized cafe an evening or two ago, raised high a dollar bill and addressed those present.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I have here a dollar bill. It is a good bill, open to inspection by all. I want to raffle it off, and I will esteem it a favor if fifteen gentlemen will come in. Ten cents a chance—10 cents for a dollar bill. It's dirt cheap. Who will come in, please? I'll esteem it a favor, as I said, and there's the chance for a real bargain."

Fifteen men good naturedly chipped in 10 cents each, drew small squares of paper from a hat, and the winner pocketed the bill, with a laugh.

"Thank you, gentlemen," said the raffler, with a Chesterfieldian bow. "That dollar was of no use to me. But now that I've sold it for a dollar and a half I have my car fare home. Thank you. Good night."—New York Globe.

Witchcraft.

"The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries," said John Fiske, "were the flourishing ages of the witchcraft delusion. Witchcraft in the early ages was considered one of the greatest of crimes, as much so as murder, robbery or any other serious offense against the law, and the belief in it was shared by the whole human race until the latter part of the seventeenth century.

"In England in 1664 two women were tried before Sir Matthew Hale, charged with bewitching several girls and a baby, and they were put to death, for at that time the evidence seemed perfectly rational. In 1615 in Genoa 500 people were burned to death on the charge of witchcraft. It was the proud boast of a noted executioner in northern Italy at this time that in fifteen years he had assisted in burning 900 persons charged with sorcery. In Scotland between 1560 and 1600 8,000 people were put to death, an average of 200 a year. The last execution for witchcraft in England took place in 1712, in Scotland in 1722, in Germany in 1749 and in Spain in 1781."

Crime and the Telephone.

From the beginning to the end of a transaction in crime the telephone comes into use, serving both sides with equal fidelity, says a writer in Appleton's Magazine. The thief uses it to determine which house he may safely rob. The man next door sees the burglar and calls up the police. The police arrive, catch the burglar and telephone for the Black Maria to take him to jail. The thief telephones a lawyer to defend him. The lawyer telephones for the bondsman to bail out his client, and the banker telephones the sheriff that the bondsman's check is good. When the day of trial comes the clerk of the court, being a kind gentleman, telephones to the burglar's lawyer; the sheriff telephones witnesses to be present. When the burglar is convicted and sentenced the sheriff uses long distance to tell the warden of the penitentiary when his prisoner will be delivered. After that the telephone line is kept hot by influential politicians petitioning the governor for a pardon.

An Embarrassing Moment.

The author of "Collections and Recollections" relates a personal experience of having said a "thing one would rather have left unsaid." Even after the lapse of twenty years, he adds, the recollection of the sensations of the moment turns him hot with chagrin.

A remarkably pompous clergyman, a diocesan inspector of schools, once showed me a theme on a Scriptural subject written by a girl who was trying to pass from the rank of a pupil teacher to the rank of schoolmistress. The theme was full of absurd mistakes, over which the inspector laughed uproariously.

"Well, what do you think of that?" he inquired when I handed back the paper.

"Oh," said I in perfectly good faith, "the mistakes are bad enough, but the writing is far worse. It really is a disgrace."

"The writing? What, my writing?" said the inspector. "I copied the theme out myself."

The Bread and Pipe Baker.

The lecturer at the cooking school sometimes enlivened her remarks with an anecdote.

"The eighteenth century baker," she said, "was a pipe cleaner as well, just as the barber a little earlier was a surgeon. Everybody in those days smoked clay pipes, provided, the same as cups or spoons, by the coffee houses. Well, each morning a waiter carried his master's stock of pipes—some hundred perhaps—to the nearest bakery. The baker would boil them out, then dip them in liquid lime, then bake them dry. They came out of the oven as sweet and white as new."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Remarkable Journalistic Feat.

Amongst his other attainments, Sir Rowland Blennerhassett, who died the other day, established a reputation not only as a leading authority on European politics, but also as a prolific and skilful writer on men and topics of the day. He was a regular contributor to The Times, and it was for that paper that he accomplished a most remarkable feat in journalism. One day Sir Rowland received a telegram from The Times asking him to forward with all dispatch a biography of the late Lord Acton. He telephoned to a local newspaper office for a reporter, and as he walked up and down a room in his club he dictated several columns of "copy," full of dates and facts, without ever referring to a note.

Knows All Branches.

Lord Burnham, the principal proprietor of The Daily Telegraph, has a practical knowledge of all the departments connected with that important newspaper. He began as a compositor, and mastered the "case" before he took up journalistic work.

A Veteran Journalist.

Mr. Hewley W. Stafford, after seventy years' continuous journalistic work, has just severed his connection with an Eastbourne (Eng.) paper. Mr. Stafford began work when he was 12 years old, obtaining employment in the office of a civil service paper published in Fleet street.

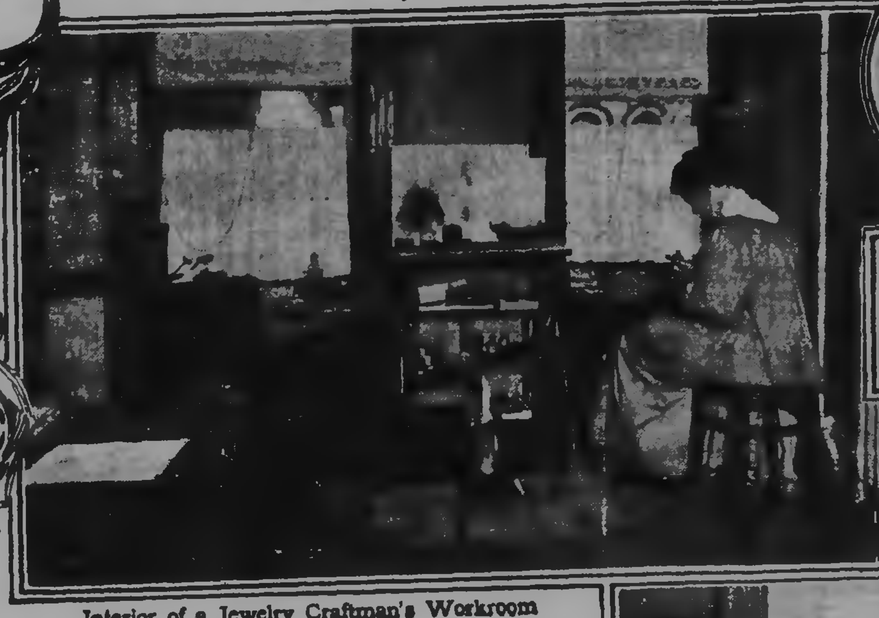
A KNOWLEDGE of the ARTS and CRAFTS A FASHIONABLE ACCOMPLISHMENT

Jewelry Making



Interior of a Jewelry Craftman's Workroom

Gold and Silver Bracelets

Hammering Out a Belt Buckle

WHILE it is scarcely fair to call the craze for anything so essentially an art as jewelry making a fad, yet as such it appeals to New York girls most surprisingly. Girls who have never done anything more laborious with their hands than embroider table centres and lingerie underwear are now using the blowpipe and bellows, the hammer and file with dexterity and skill, and some of the jewelry they turn out shows not only exquisite workmanship but great originality of design as well.

In fact, so clever have women experts become in the handicraft that the situation gives the dealers some concern. They find they must look to their laurels, for originality, which aims to suit the setting to the stone rather than make the setting an excuse for an extravagant display of jewels, is a feature of the new handicraft.

A branch of the work which is attracting special attention just now is the reconstruction of old jewelry into artistic pendants, brooches, combs and buckles. This has started girls rummaging for old heirlooms, and as a result of the ransacking many quaint and curious pieces set with carbuncles, cameos, carnelians, brilliants and coral have been brought to light and turned over to the girl who is learning the goldsmith's art, to be wrought into decorative ornaments for personal wear.

Handsome jewelry is by far the most popular present for Easter brides this year. A favorite gift is a pair of slipper buckles, not only for the bride herself but for her bridesmaids. Always pretty and effective, when done by hand they are perfectly stunning. One of these sets is composed of dull silver set with Montana sapphires; another, a copper pair, is set with topaz to wear with bronze slippers, and a third is in oxidized silver with white topaz to go with a black Empire gown, a trousseau robe.

Baby pins, veil pins and rings are among the popular smaller articles made by hand, and filets of metal set with topaz, sapphires, turquoise matrix and the like are liked by those who adopt the Grecian style of hair dressing. Watch fobs are a favorite gift for the girl's men friends, and those of copper set with variscites, a pretty green stone, and mounted on tan suède of a heavy quality are very smart.

AS the number of women experts in the craft is still small the personal experiences of one of them hold enough of interest and example to relate.

"When I took it into my head to become an expert in jewelry making," said she, "I thought the only way to do it was to begin at the foundation. To do this I made a bee line to the Mint to see the process of refining gold and silver from start to finish.

"To make the experiment more realistic I took along with me all the old jewelry and family 'plate' I could lay my two hands on. All my relatives contributed generously to the pot, and I started in with nearly $100 worth of odds and ends of old metal. One relative gave me forks which had been in the family for years; another several rings; others old watch cases, and a maiden aunt a watch chain of antique pattern, but supposedly of great value.

"With this bundle of heirlooms I made my way to the Mint, where I turned the precious package over to the official in charge. I discovered that a good many revelations were in store for me. One thing I discovered was that gold when it comes from the refiner's kettle looks like brass. Also that all gold has more or less of copper, silver or other metal in its composition. Worse of all, the truth was forced upon me that some of my most revered and cherished possessions, old family heirlooms that had been looked upon with deep respect for years, were nothing but plate, and copper plate at that.

"After the jewels were knocked out and the metal broken up and cast into the furnace I was escorted back to an anteroom to await the final process. It reminded me of nothing so much as waiting at a crematory to receive the ashes of some dear, departed friend, for truly to cast those precious heirlooms into the furnace seemed precisely like incinerating one's nearest and dearest.

"However, there was quite a profitable return from the 'ashes' when after the course of half an hour I was invited to the office to see my gold weighed and get my money. Instead of $100 I got $87. However, that was better than nothing, though it was not all clear gain, for my greedy relatives made it clear to me that I was expected to return the compliment in presenting them with modern ornaments the moment I became a skilled worker. This money paid for my lessons, though, and I never regretted the experience, for it familiarized me with the composition of metals, their possibilities and limitations."

MISS HARRIET KEITH FORBES, who has only recently returned from an extensive European trip in search of odd and curious stones for her work, tells of the difficulties in store for the novice in the jeweller's art, but she is most encouraging over the possibilities of the craft as an occupation or business for girls.

"To design jewelry," she says, "requires the same good taste and decorative sense that go to make up a successful dressmaker or modiste. You must know, as she does, what is suitable. You must not put a heavy, elaborate necklace on a tiny woman or a slender chain and small pendant on a woman of embonpoint. In other words you must know what is suitable not only as regards size but coloring and the kind of stone used.

"The decorative sense of knowing what is suitable is quite as essential as to know the constructive process. Women themselves, I am happy to say, are beginning to understand they cannot all wear the same kind of a necklace any more than they can all wear the same sort of clothes. Even the shops realize this and do not dare to have too many gowns of one style for their exclusive trade.

"You must also learn that each metal has its own personality, its own individuality. Each sings its own song under the hammer, and you learn to know the metal, its possibilities and its limitations by the sound it gives as you work.

"Contrary to the general impression, it is not an expensive or an extravagant pastime, for now that women have learned how beautiful are the semi-precious stones they are used almost exclusively. You can get your stones of a lapidary already cut and polished if you wish, or do the work yourself. It scarcely pays, though—the extra labor—as you can get stones very cheap. For example, an amazonite, which is a most beautiful green stone and suitable for a pendant would be about $1.50. An abalone blister, not unlike mother-of-pearl, of an inch or more in length and proportionately wide, would not be more than $1.

"TURQUOISE matrix can be bought for almost any price, say from fifty cents upward. One suitable for a good sized ring would be about $4. A chrysoprase for a ring would not be more than fifty cents and an opal matrix from $1 up. Then there are no end of stones of this class which are exquisitely beautiful when daintily set and are not costly. On the other hand, there are stones which I picked up in Europe which, though not in the list of precious stones, could not be bought for any such sum as that. For example, there is this pin of pink baroque pearls from Cairo. You will see each pearl is in the shape of a petal and all turn the same way, forming a perfect orchid. Then there is this lapis that I picked up at Hadrian villa, in Egypt; this turquoise from Sicily and these amethysts from Ireland. They all have a special value and do not come in the other class.

"Silver is about sixty cents an ounce and gold comes at about seventy cents a pennyweight, though, of course, these prices vary according to the market. Silver for a medium sized buckle would probably cost in the neighborhood of $1 and an outfit could be purchased for about $12. Lessons are invariably $2 a lesson or eight for $15. I do not teach myself, as I prefer devoting my time to originating new designs for orders, though there are plenty who do.

"The outfit would include the various sorts of files, hammers, saw frames, borax stone for mixing the silver, drills, solder, a draw plate to draw down your wire, a gauge to get the proper width of the metal and a bunch of rings to get the size of the finger of the person for whom the ring is meant. Yellow ochre for keeping the solder cool while working is also essential, and a bench, which can be constructed for $2.50, is practical. In lieu of that a table will do.

"If, for example, a girl was about to start making a belt buckle she would get the gauge and prepare the silver by reducing it to the requisite width. Once the pattern had been traced on its surface the open portions are cut out with the saw, which closely resembles a jig saw. Then comes the real exhibition of the goldsmith's art, for it is in the hammering, the filing and the drilling that one's ability is tested and the amount of artistic feeling wrought into the metal that illustrates the worker's talent for the handicraft.

"SETTING stones is the most difficult of all. Some have this done by jewellers, though personally I think it one of the most interesting steps in the process. I am frequently asked how long it takes for an amateur to make a piece of jewelry. I know of one girl who took a week to make a belt, spending three lessons and considerable home work on it. I know another who did the same in three days. A pendant, I believe, would take between three and four lessons.

"Just now the craze is to have lucky stones made up into talismans, and some curious relics are brought to me for the purpose. Frequently a woman wants to preserve a bit of jewelry as a matter of sentiment, as did one who brought me three wedding rings to be wrought into one that she could keep 'for memory's sake.' Undoubtedly a jeweller would have melted them all up together, for they were all of different carats, but by using three different kinds of solder I combined them without fusing them. I finished the ring with a big oval seal, and it was stunning.

"It is a fashion, too, to have belt buckles made out of watch cases. I have made many of them that way, and belt buckles from old picture frames, not to mention charming girdles from old fashioned chased and fretwork napkin rings. The ring is cut into perpendicular strips, the strips being fastened together with silver chains in ornamental design.

"Old coins are often joined together for dog collars and quaint buttons are set in metal bands for filets. I am just now making a pendant of a carnelian, an heirloom in the owner's family, to be set in copper. The rich red of the carnelian and the peculiar tone of the metal will make a most unusual and pleasing combination.

"IN fact, there is no end to the possibilities in this work, and, given originality in addition to dexterity with the hands, there is practically no limit set on what the hand worker in metals may do. From the start something can be made to wear. There is no experimenting, for the girl working under an instructor should have no occasion to spoil her work irredeemably. It is a lucrative profession, too, if one cares to take it up seriously.

"Though the outfit seems a bit expensive in the beginning, the outlay is no more than is called for in any similar occupation, and, best of all, there is a growing demand for the product all over the country. This, to be sure, has led some manufacturers to copy the hand made articles even to the tool marks, but this cannot lessen the value of the hand worked product, for individual work can never be perfectly duplicated. To show the demand for hand made jewelry, the last craftsman's exhibit at the National Arts Club sold more than $5,000 worth of stuff, for the most part jewelry. Pratt Institute students, too, who are said to be especially well versed in the craft, have no difficulty in disposing of their work, and many of them during their course make jewelry to order."

Desk Sets for Country Bedrooms

WITH just a little trouble a girl can make a most attractive desk set for her country bedroom from an old leather pad, letter case, &c., that are now faded or worn and no longer fresh enough for her pretty writing table.

It takes patience perhaps to cover the old pad and paper case neatly with cretonne or perhaps even a pretty crepe paper, but the result will more than repay for the trouble. Chintz and cretonne of some design that harmonizes well with the hangings of her room will give more satisfactory wear than paper, although it might be a good plan to experiment first with the paper. Cretonne or chintz can be attached with dextrine, the only kind of glue or paste that will not mar the texture, but if the article is to be in use at the seashore it had best be sewed together.

With the original pad or letter holder or whatever articles there may be to cover right at hand it is not at all difficult to make covers for them. For the blotting pad, of course, the corners are first detached and covered, then when the back has been covered these corners are glued on once more. If the old corner pieces are torn or broken new ones are easily copied in a piece of cardboard and then covered with the chintz. If desired they may then be bound with a fancy braid which tones in with the colors of the material.

From the calendar to the pen tray and the inkstand all the pieces can be recovered in this way, and while at first difficulty may be encountered with the corners, practice will soon make the fingers marvellously efficient, and by the time the paper holder is to be done the work will have become really easy.

Some girls have been so delighted with the way in which they have transformed their old leather desk sets into wonderfully pretty and dainty articles of cretonne that they have gone so far as to make cases even for the penholders. These are made by fashioning a perfectly fitting case for the handle of the favorite penholder and fasten in [illegible] at the end with glue, or, if the [illegible] of cork, with tiny brass tacks.

All this sort of [illegible] becomes delightfully interesting, and often the girl who dislikes intensely any kind of sewing will really enjoy this kind of work, which is of such a different order. Should she meet with success in remaking her old desk things she will perhaps be inspired to start some work from the beginning, and instead of using cretonne or crepe paper coverings finish her work in silk or brocade, making a desk set appropriate for the parlor. The heaviest cardboard must be used, and it is best to have it cut to measurement at the store where it is purchased, as any cardboard sufficiently heavy for this use is almost impossible to cut and shape without special implements.

Attractive Birthday Gifts.

WHAT to give the very small sister or brother when the birthday anniversary comes round need no longer be a problem for the schoolgirl to worry about, for any of the mechanical toys of French or American manufacture are certain to delight the recipient. One of the most original types of toys is a fully jointed girl doll, monkey or dog equipped with a clock mechanism which permits it to go through a series of gymnastics on hanging rings.

A novel contortionist, consisting of a nine inch high jointed doll of tin, is costumed as a harlequin. The figure's inner mechanism is wound up by giving its arms several forward revolutions and then placing it on some flat surface whereon it will methodically perform a series of somersaults and other contortions.

A mechanical hoop toy in the form of a nine and a half inch clown will, when wound up, revolve upon an irregularly shaped hoop. A tin and celluloid boy doll, dressed in a knitted Tam o' Shanter, sash muffler, sweater, trousers and leggings, is seated on a ten inch long white pine sled whose top surmounts a clock mechanism which will cause it to glide along as swiftly as though moving over ice.

Among several kinds of fascinating music boxes is one having imbedded in its top a large disk representing figures of people and animals standing on a metallic base. Beneath the disk is a magnet which traverses the under surface so that when the crank which governs the musical apparatus is turned, the magnet, passing beneath the miniature figures, attracts their metal footpieces and causes them to skate about the pond.

A novel toy bank, five inches high, in the form of a sphere, consists of two halves bolted together and footed. It is heavily nickel plated, equipped with a lock set in a circular door and has a coin slot so protected on the inner side that it is impossible to extract coins.

SOCIAL AMENITIES FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL

IN the forming of good manners it is extremely helpful to have frequent visitors in the house, for there is no question that in the presence of guests we are on our best behavior.

The hospitable desire to make the visitor happy, coupled with the natural impulse to produce a good impression, causes us to take great pains in regard to all the little amenities which oil the machinery of social intercourse, and this effort during the stay of the guest should have lasting effect on our manners, helping us instinctively and unconsciously to be on our best behavior at all times.

When one has the true spirit of hospitality one thinks only of the pleasure of one's guest, whose preferences and wishes are constantly consulted and catered to. Her inclination may not always be your own, but this does not affect your compliance with them, and the laws of hospitality which require you to adapt yourself to her are salutary, for they teach valuable lessons in unselfishness and restraint.

If older persons are guests in your house you have endless opportunities of showing little attentions which charm and which endear you to those of the older generation. For instance, when one of them enters the room you always rise and offer a chair. If some one part of the room is more attractive than another you guide her to it, find the most comfortable seat, offer a cushion for the back and a stool for the feet. Some women care for these latter things and some do not, but they should always be offered. When they are declined do not urge them. It is mistaken hospitality to urge anything. It is the guest's privilege to accept or decline whatever is offered, and her preference should not be questioned. If you urge in any direction you create an awkward situation, forcing her to comply, perhaps out of [illegible] ss, because you seem to wish it, when it is not her wish at all.

It is most attractive to see a younger person ready to fetch and carry for an older one. If your mother's guest wishes something from her room offer to get it for her and take her instructions as to its locality carefully, for it is very stupid not to be able to find a thing when you go for it. Many of us have a careless way of only half listening when we are told where a thing is, and in consequence sometimes have to make two trips for it instead of one, which, besides being a great waste of time and energy, puts us down as quite heedless and silly.

You show your girl guest all sorts of little attentions, also, for your desire is to make her comfortable in every way as well as give her a good time. If any little differences of opinion arise between you during her stay, gracefully give way to her, remembering that this courtesy is required of you in your rôle of hostess. If any of your plans for her enjoyment go awry, as sometimes even the best laid plans do, do not fret and fuss about it, for this only adds to the general disappointment and makes every one in the house uncomfortable.

In inviting guests, whether old or young, it is now the fashion to state definitely the length of the visit. They are asked from such a day to such a day, and in replying to the invitation should in the note of acceptance repeat the dates given by the hostess, so that there is no misunderstanding. It is etiquette for the guest to prepare to leave on the day assigned, but if asked to remain longer and it is her inclination, it is quite proper for her to do so. She should not, however, be urged, for here again, as is usual when urging comes into play, one is treading on delicate ground.

If your girl friend thinks she must go when her time is up do not try to keep her, but look forward to her coming again. It is immensely tactful to "speed the parting guest," but if you urge her to stay when she shows a disposition to go you make her extremely uncomfortable, particularly when perhaps you pout and say you know she cannot have been enjoying herself or she would remain longer. This is a most embarrassing accusation which no well bred hostess should allow herself to make.

Colored Hosiery.

IT is not at all smart now to have your hosiery match your pumps or low shoes. Except for rainy day use black has quite gone out of fashion, and colors of every hue are abroad in the land. The pastel shades are the favorites, and when worn with black leather, green or wistaria are most popular, though dull blue rivals them, particularly for town wear. With gray suède, rose red stockings form a pretty contrast, while quite the prettiest thing with bronzed kid are the delicate pastel blues.

Nails Must Not Glitter.

A GLITTERING polish on the nails is no longer approved by Madame Grundy, who requires at the moment a glaze acquired in a most natural and simple manner. Nails to be pretty should always be pink and bright, a condition obtained by rubbing them vigorously against the side of the hand. It has been discovered that the warmth and moisture of the flesh makes an ideal polisher, while the briskness of the rubbing gives the desired pink glow.

How to Make Newest Motor Veils

NO longer can one wear a simple length of chiffon for an automobile veil. To-day every detail of a motor dress must be just as perfect as is required in any other style of costume, and, after all, why should one not be becomingly and attractively gowned for this sport as well as for golf, tennis, riding, swimming or any other pastime or form of exercise?

The new motor veils are extremely large, both wide and long, as this has been found the most serviceable style of veil for general use. Some are of heavy chiffon, others of comparatively fine chiffon cloth, while others again are of coarse fish net lined with a thin mousseline de soie or perhaps chiffon of a soft gray or ecru, bordered all around with a two to four inch band of lace dyed the exact shade of the chiffon. These veils are necessarily costly and perhaps beyond the limitations of the purse of the average school girl. Fortunately, however, there is nothing much simpler to copy than one of these new veils, and the price will be found to be surprisingly less than that which is demanded for the imported original. They are about two and a half yards long by one and a half wide, these newest motor veils, but the dimensions may be varied in accordance with the size of the hat with which they are worn. A small, round toque, for example, requires but a comparatively narrow short veil, while if it is desired to protect one of the large mushroom hats of the moment the measures given above will be found even too conservative. With double width material a yard and a half length will prove ample and it is, of course, easier to border one of these veils along a selvage edge.

The lace that is used may be, of course, as costly as desired, but a fairly good imitation Valenciennes will be quite fine enough for ordinary use. For an ecru or coffee colored veil the lace can easily be dyed to the desired shade with a solution of strong tea or coffee, experiments being tried first with a small piece of the lace until the exact hue is obtained. In gray it will probably be possible to find the right shade in the shops, for gray, in all its tones, from palest silver to deepest steel color, is one of the most fashionable and popular shades just now. It is really not difficult to dye lace, however, and the girl with a small amount of ingenuity can make herself fascinatingly pretty motor veils of pink, blue, mauve and palest green to match the ribbons on her dainty summer frocks.

White veils, while perhaps not so good protection against sunburn and glare, are too pretty with summer gowns not to be worn. This same style of veil in all white or in cream color is extremely pretty, but this veil is really exceptionally smart in every shade, light or dark.

The lace is put on quite flat, not gathered as formerly, and a thin inch width is perhaps the best. Instead of lace, a flat band of ribbon or a bias band of silk may be employed, and if the chiffon is of an unusual shade, which cannot be obtained in lace, ribbon will answer the requirements almost if not quite as well.

The long, wide motor veils are worn over the entire face and hat, the ends being crossed at the back and brought around to be fastened under the chin, thus protecting the collar of the gown as well. Scarcely practicable for touring, these veils are simply intended for short country runs, when a comparatively large hat is worn and only a linen dust coat thrown over the delicate lingerie gown.

Hints for Care of Furs.

THE girl who has rejoiced in pretty white furs this last winter must not fail to give instruction to her maid as to their correct care during the summer months. Of all things camphor balls must not be used as a preventive of moths, as nothing so quickly turns the soft white fur to an ugly yellow. The boa and muff should first be wrapped loosely in blue tissue paper to preserve their color, and then turpentine may be sprinkled on the wrappings of the box in which they are placed, never the deadly camphor balls.

With sable also and mink this should be remembered, for sable once placed near camphor can never be worn again—at least the rich, brown tone is so changed to an ugly yellow that will never again look smart.

Furs should always be placed in a box full large, for if cramped into a small space the skins will often be so matted that it will take several months before they will look quite right again. With costly furs it is by far the best economy to send them during the hot months to some reliable furrier's, where they will be safely kept in cold storage until the following winter.

A Scarf Summer.

IT is going to be a scarf summer, and girls who have not a variety of these fascinating accessories to their toilet should acquire them as rapidly as possible. A satisfactory feature of them is that if one's purse is not long enough to indulge in the costly kind they can be beautifully made at home in infinite variety. Any material is suitable, though for evening wear the smartest thing is to have the scarf of the same fabric as the frock. When a hat is worn the scarf may be of any material, but in color it must precisely match the chapeau. Great originality and cleverness can be displayed in fashioning these scarfs, which are either heavily bordered with trimming or shot all over with a delicate design. Much broader and longer than those of last season, these scarfs are immensely becoming to all types of girls.

TO MAKE DIVORCE MORE DIFFICULT

Members Say Inadequate Evidence Is Taken.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES

Mr. Fielding Brings Down Additional List — In Discussion of Divorce Members Agree That Evidence Before the Senate Committee Is Often Insufficient — Estimates Are Lower This Session.

Ottawa, May 11.—In the House yesterday morning, referring to several divorce bills, R. L. Borden expressed the view that the evidence admitted in the Senate committee should be limited to such evidence as would be admitted in a court of law. In England there was a King's protector, whose special duty it was to see that there was no collusion between parties. He did not know to what extent, if any, such a safeguard had been adopted by the Senate. W. F. Maclean favored a divorce court, but F. D. Monk did not think there were sufficient cases to justify this. Mr. Carvell favored a court, and said there were cases in which divorce had been granted by the Senate committee on evidence that would simply have been laughed at in a court. All sorts of hearsay evidence was taken. Mr. Miller deprecated the tendency to use the services of American detectives to get up evidence for divorce cases.

The Commons spent a quiet day and more was accomplished than probably any day of the session. The evening sitting was occupied with the immigration bill, which will be considered further before the session closes.

Hon. W. S. Fielding will move to-morrow a resolution that it is expedient to authorize the governor-in-council to raise $50,000,000 loan for the purpose of paying maturing loans and obligations of the Dominion and for the carrying on of public works.

The supplementary estimates were brought down yesterday. They amount to $1,016,680, of which $83,589 is chargeable to capital account. The supplementaries are the smallest for a number of years.

Along with the main estimates brought down earlier in the session they total $111,506,460 for the current fiscal year, of which $81,011,721 is chargeable to consolidated fund, and $30,494,739 to capital account.

Further supplementary estimates for the past fiscal year were also tabled, including $100,000 for the Italian earthquake fund; $100,000 for the cost of the cattle quarantine along the international boundary and $10,000 for the expenses of Canadian representatives to the agricultural conference at Rome.

In the Department of Agriculture there are items of $7,000 to provide for an experimental cold storage station for fruit, and $10,000 to provide for the expenses of a commission to investigate the swine industry of Great Britain and Denmark.

The expenditure which Parliament has been asked to authorize this year shows a total decrease of $21,774,772, as compared with last year. Of this decrease $8,611,846 is on consolidated fund account and $13,163,626 on capital account.

Claude Macdonell asked the Government "whether or not the proposed waterways and boundaries treaty will prevent the construction of the proposed enlargement of the Welland and St. Lawrence River Canals, or the construction of the proposed Georgian Bay Canal, without the consent of the commissioners under the treaty, because of the fact that these works, or either of them, may reasonably be expected to affect the height of the water on Lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario?" Hon. A. B. Aylesworth said that the matter was under consideration.

Manila Trust Is "Busted."

New York, May 11.—A permanent injunction restraining from operating the Fibre and Manila Association under which it was charged twenty-five manufacturing concerns had formed a combine in restraint of trade, was ordered by Justice Hough in a decree handed down in the U. S. Circuit Court in this city yesterday. The companies composing this association were fined $2,000 each in June, 1908.

Kinrades Are Said to Be Staying For the Time In Montreal.

Toronto, May 11.—Miss Florence Kinrade, her mother and C. Montrose Wright, who passed through Toronto on Sunday night, went through to Montreal and will, it is expected, find a quiet retreat near that city.

The Attorney-General's Department did not evince any surprise yesterday when informed that the Kinrades were in Montreal, and in some quarters the removal of the central figures connected with the tragedy is looked upon with relief. What further action is to be taken by the crown will be decided upon at the Cabinet meeting to-day. Meanwhile the Kinrades will be under surveillance.

Party at Queens.

Montreal, May 11.—It is presumed here that Mrs. Isabel and Norman Lackland of Washington, D.C., registered at the Queen's Hotel here, are the Kinrades of Hamilton.

They do not appear to be concealing their movements, and so far there is no indication of their going abroad, although there will be no steamer leaving before Friday.

The young lady was at the piano most of the evening, and the trio dined in the public dining-room. So far they have refused to be interviewed.

MONTREAL GRAFT.

Investigation Reveals More Understandings With Officials.

Montreal, May 11.—Several more of the saloonkeepers who had charges against them of selling on Sundays, dismissed on payment of costs, appeared before the civic commission yesterday and testified that they were subscribers to the election fund of Ald. Proulx. Some admitted that they had sent cabs on election day to work for other aldermen.

One had been told that if Proulx was not elected another man would take his place on the police committee and Sunday selling would no longer be tolerated.

Evidence was also given that there was a conspiracy to compromise policemen specially charged by the chief with watching places for Sunday selling by bribing them not to report, and then placing the evidence before the chief.

Capt. Beignet, who retired on pension a year ago, testified that he was in charge of No. 11 police district, he had the C.P.R. Stockyards Hotel reported for selling on Sunday on three occasions, and one day Inspector Lamouche notified him that the hotel had been taken out of his district.

New Zealand has accepted the invitation to the Imperial defence conference, but says it is difficult for a representative to attend before the end of July at the earliest.

While playing hookey Norman and Danville Valiquette, aged 11 and 9 years, were drowned yesterday by the collapse of the sand embankment of the river at Ottawa. Oscar Najor, aged 14, clung to an overhanging tree for half an hour until rescued.

SAVES TWO CHILDREN.

Morrisburg Man Rescues Girl and Boy From Drowning.

Morrisburg, May 11.—While Eleanor Moorhouse, aged 10 years, daughter of Mrs. Moorhouse, was attempting on Saturday evening to get into a punt in charge of Harold Murphy, 15 years old, son of Mr. E. L. Murphy, editor of The Leader, in order to cross to her home on the other side of the canal, she slipped into the water, pulling young Murphy in with her. The lad seized the girl, and managing to grasp a projecting stone in the canal wall, called for help.

Mr. Fred H. Broder of the Molson's Bank, who was on the opposite side, 200 feet away, heard the cries, and, without stopping to remove his coat, leaped into the water and swam across. He was nearly exhausted when he reached the drifting punt, but succeeded in clambering in, and then he rescued the two children from their dangerous position.

Kept Their Hats On.

Guelph, May 11.—In spite of the resolution passed by the Guelph Ministerial Association condemning the wearing of big hats in church, only in one church, Norfolk street Methodist, was there any sign of obedience on the part of the ladies present, and here the little company of four hatless women in the morning dwindled down to two at the evening service.

Smoking-Room for Ladies.

I am perfectly cured of Kidney complaint after using Gin Pills. Six hours after taking the first Pill I obtained relief, and now after three months I feel as well as ever.

I suffered ten months and the Physician attending me advised me to go to the Victoria hospital at Halifax, as he could do nothing more for me. I may add that I used a great deal of medicine, and strictly followed my physician's directions regarding diet, etc., but without avail, until providentially I learned of your most excellent remedy. I am recommending Gin Pills.

Fire at Haileybury.

Haileybury, May 11.—An early morning blaze on Browning street did $40,000 damage to the Stahl and Cook blocks yesterday.

The losers are: S. Stahl, business block and living rooms, $8,500; insurance, $2,500. A. J. Carson, grocer, loss $7,000; insurance, $2,000. Adam Keddle, $10,000. Ringrose Bros., theatorium, $1,500. M. Cook, block and shoe store, $5,000. D. Johns, assay offices, $1,500. Besides these several people living upstairs lost everything.

License Is Renewed.

Albany, N.Y., May 11—Having complied with the provisions of the insurance law limiting the amount of money which an insurance company may expend annually for new business, the Columbian National Life Insurance Co. of Boston, Mass., has been granted a license, which was refused when the returns of 1907 showed this section violated. In the meantime an injunction has restrained the state from excluding the company.

Will Stand For Rights.

Toronto, May 11.—Notwithstanding the passage of the Ontario & Michigan Power Bill in an amended form at Ottawa last week, Sir James Whitney will not relinquish the fight for provincial rights.

The Ontario Government is not content that its protests have been unheeded, and an immediate consideration will be given to such further steps as may be necessary to put the protest into practical effect.

Victim of Prairie Fire.

Moosejaw, May 11.—The havoc wrought by fires in the country northwest of Moosejaw last week is becoming evident.

John Howe, aged 50, who had a farm near Darldon, was erecting fireguards about his place when the flames rushed on him. He has succumbed to his injuries. He was born in Ontario. The feeling here is that outside aid should be asked.

He Feared Reciprocation.

Mr. Sam Barker, the member of Parliament for Hamilton, told a good story recently to a small group of friends at the Rideau Club, Ottawa. Some years ago Mr. Barker was connected with the Great Western Railway, and one day he received a letter from a Canadian then living in the United States. The Canadian was employed in one of the large casket factories of Pittsburg, and the letter paper on which he proffered his request was adorned with realistic cuts of coffins and hearses. The letter set forth that the man wished to return to Canada — and would Mr. Barker kindly send him the necessary transportation?

"That was all right," added the genial member for Hamilton in telling the story, "but the maker of coffins wound up by saying that he would be very pleased at any time to reciprocate."

"And so far," added Mr. Barker, "I am pleased to say he had no opportunity of reciprocating."

The Grand Banks.

For four hundred years fishing has been pursued in these waters off Newfoundland by the fishing flotillas of England, France, Spain, Portugal, America and Canada.

The Grand Banks cover an area of forty thousand square miles—almost as much as Newfoundland itself—and the flotillas cruise over the different parts of these at different seasons of the year. The fishing is by hooks and lines, known as trawls, and not nets; and the hooks have to be baited with small fishes—herring, caplin, and squid—which was found in great abundance in the inshore waters of Newfoundland.

What Shall Canada Give?

Mr. Phil Bowyer, M.P.P., and Mr. Joseph Downey, M.P.P., were dining together.

"This question of contributing to the navy is a serious affair," remarked Mr. Downey.

"It is," said Mr. Bowyer, as he closely scanned the bill-of-fare. "It is a serious question. Here is this country trembling in its indecision as to whether it should contribute a Dreadnought or a doughnut."

The Oldest Mason.

The late Sir James Robert Gowan, Senator, was the oldest Canadian initiated Mason in Canada, he having joined St. Andrew's Lodge, Toronto, on July 3, 1840, so that at the time of his death he had been a member of the lodge for nearly 69 years. A memorial has been published by St. Andrew's Lodge, giving a portrait of the late Senator and an appreciation of his life and character.

SEEDING HAS BEGUN.

Ontario's Crop Promises to Be Larger Than Ever This Year.

The spring seeding in Ontario is general over a large area. It looks as if all the cereals will receive due attention. In spite of the fact that peas are troubled with June bugs and pea bugs, the acreage will be as large if not larger than usual. The distribution of fancy seed by the large houses free of charge until the new crop comes in, is a big factor in increasing the acreage.

Wheat will be sown as far as is possible to procure seed. Wild Goose and Red Fyle are the leading varieties, but as the crop has been so precarious in many sections, that it is not likely the acreage in spring wheat will be influenced appreciatively by the prices now prevailing.

Oats are a big crop with the Ontario farmer, and it is a good sign to note that many farmers are taking greater pains with their soil and seed this spring in order to insure a per acre yield ahead of the low one that has been ruling.

Barley is used largely as a feed, and the occasional chance to get a bumper price on a boom market influences many to sow this cereal, but there is no apparent run on this variety and it is expected that the acreage will be normal. Mixed grain is a favorite in many sections and barley and oats are the leading mixture.

Seedsmen in Toronto report that there is a bigger demand for alfalfa seed this spring than there has been for the past three years altogether. This augurs well for Ontario land fertility. It carries also the necessity for care in the preparation of the seed bed and the subsequent protection of the "catch" from pasturing this fall. Many soils will not respond to this the first crop, and the farmer must not be discouraged, for on high and rolling well-drained land there is no reason why alfalfa cannot increase the farm riches.

The raising of clover, corn, and forage crops, is a good sign of the times, and the little leaven of higher agriculture that is being spread throughout the land will no doubt do much to redeem our Ontario farms from abandonment by the rising youth.

A Historian of Canada.

Arthur Granville Bradley, whose new book, "The Making of Canada," is one of the important works of the year relating to this country, has visited the Dominion many times, and is one of the best informed of Englishmen relating to its history. Born in 1850, he followed his graduation at Cambridge by considerable traveling, spending the year 1873 in Canada. For several succeeding years he was a wanderer conducting a plantation in Virginia for a dozen years, making many visits to Canada.

Mr. Bradley settled permanently again in England in 1886, but was engaged in interests concerned with America and Canada, coming over occasionally, and till about 1895 his literary work was entirely fugitive and incidental. Having the historical temperament, he had absorbed a considerable knowledge of the earlier history of Canada and the United States, and had read largely along those lines as a recreation, stimulated by contact with the scenes themselves, and has written a good deal in this direction. Besides travel and historical sketches dealing with Wales, the Lake County of England, and Virginia, Mr. Bradley has written several books on Canada. They include "Canada in the Twentieth Century," "The Fight With France for North America," "The Making of Canada, 1763-1815," "Lord Dorchester in the Makers of Canada Series," and "The History of Canada" for Harmsworth's History of the World. Mr. Bradley lives at Rye, in Sussex, England.

To Become Sylphlike.

If that part of the feminine world which is striving to attain sylphlike proportions would adopt the Japanese method of gaining them they would surely be assured of success. The mothers of the mikado's realm consider a fat bride a disgrace, and so for weeks before the wedding they deal out daily to their obedient daughters three teaspoonfuls of rice and one glass of hot water, and on the bridal day the maidens are led forth as willowy and slender as heart could desire.

RHEUMATISM

Is caused by the evil influence of poisoned blood, Uric Acid, and other impurities. Nothing so completely dispels these poisons as Ferrozone. It makes new blood, imparts vitality and vigor, enabling the system to throw off every trace of Rheumatism. For a Sure Cure try

FERROZONE

A case showing how Ferrozone acts is illustrated by the following from Mrs. H. Wright, of Enfield, N.S.:—

"Six months ago I experienced a serious illness. It commenced with splitting headaches, dull pains through my chest and shoulders. I found it hard to get satisfying sleep—would roll and toss, and in the morning felt tired all over. Then I grew nervous, lost flesh, got pale and had heavy dark circles under my eyes. My strength got so low I couldn't do housework. I was worried and unable to eat, and feared I would not get well. Ferrozone braced me up in a few weeks. It seemed to supply wonderful strength. I gained in flesh, looked better, and was able to sleep. In all I took twelve boxes of Ferrozone, and my cure was complete."

If Ferrozone doesn't help you and cure you—then nothing ever will; your druggist sells it in 50c boxes. Better try Ferrozone.

Kidnappers Are Sentenced Perhaps Never To Meet Again

Boyle Accuses Harry Forker of Planning the Kidnapping—He Pleads for His Wife in Order to Save Her From Penitentiary—Razor Found in His Clothing.

SENTENCE CRUSHES BOTH

Mercer, Pa., May 11.—James Boyle was sentenced yesterday to life imprisonment in the Western Penitentiary at Pittsburg for the kidnapping of "Willie" Whitla.

Mrs. Boyle, indicted as Mary Doe, received a sentence of 25 years with a fine of $5,000 and costs of the prosecution.

Both prisoners utterly collapsed.

Judge Williams, in imposing sentence, pointed to Boyle's bad record for larceny, assault and jail-breaking.

Last night Boyle issued a sensational statement, implicating Harry Forker of Charon, Pa., in the kidnapping, and asserting that be had turned over incriminating letters to Mr. Whitla under promise of immunity from prosecution. Both men last night said: "The statement is a wilful and malicious lie." Yesterday afternoon District Attorney Lininger said that the kidnapping was still under investigation and that if any third party was found implicated he would be prosecuted without fear or favor.

MRS. JAMES BOYLE.

She Will Serve 25 Years for Part In Kidnapping.

It is said a razor was found concealed in Boyle's clothing and that his wife last night took a large quantity of morphine.

In the penitentiary last night they bade each other an affectionate farewell. They cannot meet again.

The confession winds up with a plea for Mrs. Boyle.

"I had informed my wife the boy was brought in order to escape being quarantined in the pest-house and we were to be handsomely rewarded for taking care of him. This unfortunate woman was duped from start to finish in regard to the boy."

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 10.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 8 were 2800 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 2000 calves, while the supply offered for local consumption this morning consisted of 1100 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 200 calves.

In sympathy with the steady upward tendency of prices for cattle in the western markets of late and the fact that $6.70 was paid for choice export stock in Toronto at the latter end of last week, the strong undertone to the local market has been fully maintained, and prices today showed another advance of ¼c per lb. This in the face of increased supplies and unfavorable weather for keeping stock, coupled with weaker cable advices from Liverpool, which noted a decline in prices of ¼c to ½c per pound as compared with a week ago, shows that the local situation is healthy. There was some demand from exporters, and they paid 6c per pound, less $1 per head, for steers weighing 1250 to 1300 pounds. There were some prize thorobred stock on the market, which consisted of three bulls and two heifers. The bulls weighed about 2500 pounds each, for which the seller was asking 6½c per pound. The demand from local butchers and wholesale dealers was not as keen as it was a week ago, but on the whole a fair trade was done, and the market was moderately active. A few fancy steers sold at 6¼c; choice at 6c, good at 5½c to 5¾c; fair at 5c to 5¼c; medium at 4½c to 4¾c; common at 3½c to 4c, and inferior at 3c to 3¼c per pound.

Altho the supply of small meats was very light, yet an easier feeling prevailed in the market and prices ruled lower than a week ago. The demand was fairly good and sales of yearling lambs were made at 6c to 6½c, and old sheep at 5c per pound, showing a decline of ½c per pound. Spring lambs met with a fair sale at prices ranging from $3 to $5 each, and calves sold at from $1.50 to $5 each, as to size and quality. There was no important change in the live hog situation, prices being fairly maintained under a good demand and sales of selected lots were made at $8.25 to $8.35 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

CANOE UPSETS ON RICE LAKE BY WIND VEERING WITH WATER RUNNING HIGH AND ROUGHLY

George Paudash Was Running Merrily Along Before a Stiff Breeze—Lake Was Very Choppy—Canoe Overturned and Paudash Had to Swim Ashore.

AN EXCITING EXPERIENCE.

Examiner Special.

Hiawatha, May 11.—A canoe accident occurred yesterday on the lake, which might have brought Mr. Geo. Paudash more serious results than the mere necessity of swimming to shore. He was sailing down the lake with the wind blowing strong, when suddenly it unexpectedly veered of a sudden and the canoe was overturned. Young Paudash was thrown into the water, but struck out bravely and made for the shore. The accident might easily have resulted seriously as the lake was running heavily.

FARMERS ASK $1.15 PER

Potatoes on Saturday Took a Sudden Sweep Upwards.

The farmers took the notion on Saturday to boost the price of potatoes and, in consequence, some of the purchasers paid $1.15. One woman asked a farmer what was the price of his potatoes. One dollar was his limit, but farther down the line, a man with somewhat more nerve than his fellowmen, had boosted the price to $1.15, and the woman told him so. The next purchaser approached the latter farmer a few minutes later and his potatoes were $1.15 also. It was not long until this was the common price and with the grocers offering them at the former prices it is needless to say that the $1.15 varieties went begging for the most part.

ᴉHE HAINS CASE GOES TO JURY

Examiner Special (2:45 p.m.)

Flushing, N. Y., May 11.—The Haines case went to the jury at noon to-day.

DELIGHTED WITH THE FIRE HORSES

Two Winnipeg firefighters called on Chief Howard this morning with a letter of introduction to him from the Winnipeg Fire Chief and inspected thoroughly the local fire station, particularly the horses. They were shown the new team recently purchased by the department, and were astonished to hear the price that had been paid for them, which was, in their estimation, remarkably low. "They would easily bring $800 in Winnipeg," said one of the visitors, who were respectively engineer and foreman of one of the halls in the Western Metropolis.

The late Mr. Beach, father of Mr. Robt. Beach, Charlotte street, who passed away in Hamilton last week, was an old friend of P. C. McGinty, and before he died expressed a wish that his knife should be given to Mr. McGinty, as a remembrance of him. Mr. Robt. Beach brought it from Hamilton when he returned from the funeral and gave it to P. C. McGinty. The late Mr. Beach was an old resident of Peterborough, but removed from here about 28 years ago.

IS DEAD AT KINCARDINE

Examiner Special (2.45 p. m.)

Kincardine, May 11.—W. C. Loscombe, K.C., died here to-day. Many years ago his family lived in Toronto, removing from there to Bowmanville. Mr. Loscombe was a partner of Hon. James Cockburn, in Cobourg, and married Miss Fanny Barber, daughter of the then President of the Peterborough and Marmora Railway. Four daughters survive.

Dog Finds Its Way Back From Gowganda After Long Absence

Is it possible for a dog to find its way from Gowganda home to Peterborough? It seems strange that such should be the case, but there is every reason to believe that Mr W. Kennedy's hound, "Don," has found its way back from New Ontario. Yesterday it sauntered into the yard after an absence of months, looked around in the same old way and made himself at home, as if he had never ben missed.

During the winter Mr. Kennedy, whose blacksmith shop is near George sreet on Charlotte street, missed the hound and could not find him. A few days later he learned that the dog had been taken to Gowganda. He had practically given up all hope of ever seeing it again, and its return yesterday was a decided surprise. It seems strange that the dog would be able to find its way back over that long trail, but that is the only explanation of its presence in the city for it had been learned as a fact that Don had been taken to Gowganda.

Congregation Of St. Luke's Church Favours Surplicing The Choir

The vote of the congregation of St. Luke's Church on the advisability of surplicing the choir, resulted in an overwhelming majority in favour of it. The voting was closed last evening at seven o'clock, when the ballots were counted.

The number against the proposal was very small, the idea being almost unanimously favoured by the people of St Luke's Church. The matter was left entirely in their hands, the officials stating that they would take no part in it, but would leave it entirely to the congregation to decide.

Since it has met with their hearty approval the new surplices will be secured at once.

Campbellford Ratepayers To Assist Woollen Company

Examiner Special (2:45 p.m.)

Campbellford, May 10.—The ratepayers of Campbellford to-day substantially endorsed the by-law to assist the Trent Valley Woollen Manufacturing Company. Of a total vote of 435 votes polled, 388 were cast for the by-law, giving the measure a majority of 341. The by-law gives the company fixed assesment for 20 years of $50,000 on the property now standing, and also on the buildings to be erected.

In return the company is to immediately erect a new building to cost $25,000 and are to employ 70 more hands. At present the company gives employment to 160 and the concern is a great factor in the life of Campbellford.

CONGREGATIONAL RE-UNION HELD

At St. Andrew's Church Last Evening—An Address by Rev. A. McGillivray.

As befitting the twentieth anniversary of Rev. J. G. Potter's pastorate at St. Andrew's Church, a congregational reunion was held last evening in the Guild Hall, at which a large number were present. A very pleasant time was spent in social intercourse, and the entertaining features of the re-union were a musical programme of much excellence, and an address by Rev. Alexander McGillivray of Bonar Presbyterian Church, Toronto, on "A Trip Through the Holy Land," illustrated by limelight views.

The chairman of the evening was Dr. McKinnon, who, in a few brief remarks, referred to the early history of St. Andrew's Church and the progress it had made during the years of existence.

Rev. Mr. Gillivray, upon being introduced, was loudly applauded. He had the pleasure of visiting the Holy Land three years ago, and last evening spoke of several places which he was in that are prominent in Bible history. Limelight views illustrating them were shown.

During the evening vocal solos were contributed by Messrs. G. Wright and James Browne and several musical selections were given by the George St. Orchestra. At the conclusion refreshments were served by the young ladies.

The thanks of the congregation is due Mr. H. O. Fiske, who so capably handled the lantern.

THE PETERBOROUGH ALDERMEN LOYAL

Niagara Falls Review Pays Them a Tribute in an Editorial Comment.

The Niagara Falls Review says:—

A few weeks ago the Canadian Press Association took a trip from Toronto to Peterborough, and there looked over some of the really large industrial plants that have helped so much to make Peterborough what it is to-day. One of the things that impressed the writer favourably was the very definite interest that the municipal authorities took in the party. The Reception Committee was not content to await the arrival of the party, but met us a few stations from Peterborough. They were thus given an opportunity to meet every one before the sight-seeing began. They were mightily loyal to their home city, too. They took every opportunity to impress upon their guests the greatness and charm of their own town. That is the spirit that has made Peterborough one of the snappiest little cities in Ontario, and that same spirit will make Niagara Falls one of the very first industrial centres in Canada. Now, all together!

FRED SIMPSON BACK FROM RACE

States That the New York Grind Was a Terrific Struggle—St. Yves a Grand Runner.

Fred Simpson arrived home from New York on the 11.45 train this morning on his way to Hiawatha, and does not look any the worse for his long grind on Saturday. Speaking of the race he stated it was a terrific struggle, man after man collapsing and then going on again to battle for a place. Simpson thinks St. Yves, the winner, is a grand runner. Fred's next race will be in the Marathon at Montreal on May 24th.

BOY HAS A GREAT INVENTION SETS OFF EXPLOSIVES BY WIRELESS

Evansville, Ind., May 11, 09.—A lanky, sweatered school boy has achieved what Tesla, Marconi and other wizards of the wireless have been months vainly labouring for—the invention which scientists long ago agreed would be the greatest blessing to mankind.

He is Charlie Williams, 18-year-old Evansville lad.

By presing the key of a wireless instrument rigged up in his mother's woodshed, the other night, he caused an explosion to occur three miles away. It shook eevry building in the city.

That's what this boy has accomplished. His is an engnie of war that will kill war. The United States government is negotiating for it. If Uncle Sam gets it, he will be supreme among the powers of the earth.

Charley Williams hasn't stopped at inventing the apparatus which sets off the explosive. He has discovered the explosive itself. He calls it "Williamsite," and declares it to be forty times as powerful as dynamite.

Three ounces of it was enough to scare the city out of a year's growth. A pound, experts say, would have raised every building within a mile of the tree top in which he set up the three-ounce bottle for his test.

And the boy has this terrible invention of his perfected. He can direct his brobingnagian blast wherever he wants its force to go. "If a man had been standing under that tree the other night, not a hair on his head would have been displaced," young Williams said. "I had the charge fixed so that all its force was upward."

They examined the tree for proof. Its tops had been sliced off with a knife, but beneath not a leaf was disturbed. Below not a living thing was harmed, but the ground for a radius of half a mile was strewn with dead sparrows.

Williams, a youth of quiet, retiring manners, robust, large for his age, with light hair and blue eyes that regard one in a mildly enquiring way, didn't seem to think that he had done anything extraordinary when a correspondent for The Examiner visited him in his woodshed laboratory.

"Why, yes, the experiment was successful," he said carelessly. "I knew it would be. You see I've been studying it a long time and I knew just how it would act.

Young Williams had been studying high explosives and electricity for four years. In his flimsy wooden shed laboratory he had been working with the most dangerous substances known to science.

"I wouldn't make it a life work," he decla[illegible] "I'd kill myself in a year's time. He was thoughtful for a time. "But I like it," he went on enthusiastically. "Think of it," he said ,earnestly, "to be able to take a piece of stuff no biger than that," and he held up his clenched fist, "and wreck a mountainside with it.

"No. I'm going to be a railroad man," he went on. "That's my ambition.

"I've been making tests here at home for some time," he continued. "But I have only been using minute quantities. One of the first I made was right in our parlour. I set off a little explosion by wireless across the room. When I wor kwith large quantities of the stuff I always do it out in the country, far away from anybody."

The Examiner correspondent wanted to know what would have happened if a farmer had wandered into the charge of "Williamsite" in that tree top.

"Wouldn't have hurt him if he'd been standing under the tree when it went off," young Williams replied. "Might have scared him to death, but it wouldn't have hurt him. You see, its easy to direct a blast—make it go any way you want—if you know a little about it." It seemed extremely simple to this remarkable boy.

LORD AND LADY MINTO UNDER CARE OF PASTEUR EXPERTS

Examiner Special.

Simla, May 11.—The Viceroy, Lord Minto, and his wife, Lady Minto, are under treatment of Pasteur specialists, as the result of an experience with a mad dog. Their condition is in no way serious, they not having been bitten, but the treatment is precautionary as they handled their own dog after it had been attacked by another that had a well-defined case of rabies. The viceroy and his wife were driving when their pet dog, which had jumped from the carriage, got into a fight with another dog. The coachman and footman tried to save the dog, but were bitten, and the pet was badly mangled before the viceroy and his wife came to the rescue, and the four managed to kill the street dog. The Minto dog subsequently had to be killed.

THE HAND OF DEATH AVERTED A MURDER

Examiner Special.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 11.—The hand of death was all that prevented Willis White from killing Joseph Thomas here yesterday afternoon. White, armed with a revolver and a razor, went to a barn where Thomas was employed, and demanded money. Meeting with a refusal he drew the revolver. For several minutes Thomas managed to elude him by dodging in and out among the vehicles. He was finally driven into a corner, but just as White lifted the revolver and fired he was attacked with hemorrhage of the lungs. The shot went wild. With blood pouring from his mouth White staggered forward several steps and fell dead.

Promoters State That They Will Also Go Ahead With the Rolling Mills—Ratepayers Should Understand Nature of By-law They Will Vote On.

POLLING DAY IS JUNE 1st.

Alderman Gillespie, chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, has been in communication with the promoters of Purity Ware, Limited, the new company which is proposed for Peterborough. He states that according to the news he received, all the stock of the new company has been subscribed for. This is one of the first obstacles easily surmounted and an organization meeting has also been held and the officers and directors have been elected and everything is progressing most satisfactorily.

The electors of Peterborough will be asked to vote on a by-law which if passed will bring the company to this city. The terms of the by-law have been made public and it should be the duty of every ratepayer to acquaint himself with the clauses of the by-law in order that he may be able to do his duty and to cast a sane vote. The Manufacturers' Committee have given the matter their closest attention, the Council has considered it and the conditions of the by-law have been so far commended and are considered very favourable. The general feeling is one of satisfaction and every person should know concisely the full import of the clauses of the by-law.

Rolling Mills Too

Alderman Gillespie states that the promoters of Purity Ware, Limited, are also behind the rolling mills which have been previously mentioned. The promoters have stated they are going ahead with this latter project. The mills will be located on the property south of the G. T. R. line to Belleville, just across the tracks from the Purity Ware buildings. The city will be asked for no assistance for the mills excepting a reasonable assessment. The company will purchase its own buildings, and will employ a large number of skilled mechanics, many of whom will demand high wages. The buildings will be substantially built and will cover a large area. The capital for this industry is reported to be nearly all subscribed for. With these companies in Peterborough this year the building extensions should be greatly increased and the Council intends to take steps to place the terms of the by-law before the public.

Sir,—On Thursday last the Montreal Star reported the arrival in Canada of "Sir R. W. Perks, who, with the late T. A. Walker, built the Manchester Ship Canal." I don't dispute that Mr. Perks is in Canada, but I do know T. A. Walker & Co. left the Canal half finished.

Another Name To Be Added To The Already Long List Of "Posted" Men

John McDonald was placed on the blacklist at the police court this morning and he did not approve of the step taken in his behalf. McDonald was arrested yesterday afternoon by P. C. Newhall and when he appeared before the magistrate to-day, he pleaded guilty to having been found drunk in a public place and was fined two dollars and costs to be paid in fifteen days.

P. C. Newhall went in the witness box and gave evidence to the effect that McDonald was addicted to the excessive use of liquor, to the extent that he neglected his work. He believed that it would be a kindness to him to post him.

When asked by the magistrate if he was willing to be blacklisted, he replied that he was not.

Another young man was fined two dollars for being drunk.

THE LOAN JUSTIFIED.

The Conservative Government not only gave the Canadian Pacific Railway 25 million dollars in cash, 25 milion acres of and (worth 75 million dollars) and twenty-five million dollars worth of constructed railway line, but in time of stress gave a loan of 30 millions of dollars, which was duly repaid. This was done in the interests of the people, the course pursued has been amply justified by results and the country has been amply recouped for the assistance it extended our first transcontinental railway. It is now equally important in the interests of the people to make a loan of 10 million dollars to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The loan is fully secured, and will hasten the completion of the railway, which will, in turn, hasten the development of the West and the reflected benefit the East will derive. The loan is in the interests of the country, and the country is safe in giving it.

Those opposed to the loan—or at least to the Government, which proposes it in the national interests—affect to believe or try to create the impression that the construction of this line is not necessary. What are the facts? Thirty years ago not one bushel of wheat came from a district in Western Canada, which is now, thanks to the Canadian Pacific Railway, producing 100 million bushels. Since the inception of the Grand Trunk Pacific and due solely to its proposed construction 15,389 homesteads have been taken in a stretch of new and unserved country, only 24 miles wide—12 miles on either side if the railway line—equivalent to 2,461,926 acres, or 150,000 farms of 160 acres each, with a production capacity, at 20 bushels per acre of nearly 60 million bushels of wheat—six times the value of the loan proposed, and all this before the line is even completed. What will the development be when the line is in full operation from ocean to ocean?

This loan is a plain business proposal. The Government loans the Company the money and takes in security of repayment the Company's bonds, which are guaranteed by the old Grand Trunk Railway Company. The Dominion cannot permit the Grand Trunk Pacific to fail, any more than the Conservative Government of the day could permit the Canadian Pacific to fail. The Grand Trunk Pacific needs assistance, as the pioneer railway needed it, so that an important and greatly-needed link, or rather, chain, in our national transportation scheme may be provided as speedily as possible. So much was this recognized that in spite of all the diatribes of the Conservative press, in spite of the fact that the Conservative Opposition in the House criticized the railway and the loan proposition, they realized that the loan as well as the railway was in the public interest and the House, Liberals and Conservatives, voted solidly for the resolution making the loan of $10,000,000.

Eighteen years ago the United Stat
Eighteen years ago the United States produced 12 bushels of wheat to Canada's one bushel. Now the United States only produces six bushels to one and the disproportion will rapidly disappear.

THE REAL NATIONAL SENTIMENT

The Toronto News is sane and reasonable when dealing with ordinary matters but it loses its head when it touches on Dominion politics like an insane man who has a monomania; he will talk rationally on every other subject, but touch his sore spot and he is "up in the air." The News discourses in the following pleasing strain upon Canada's position as "A Maritime Nation":

> If Canada was a land-locked country in the heart of a continent like Switzerland or Thibet we should have no naval responsibilities. But the fact is that, from a geographical standpoint few nations are more maritime than the Dominion. It is bounded on three sides by three oceans, and for two-thirds of the fourth side by five inland seas and a mighty river. Our sea coast is far and away the longest of any country in the world. Halifax, St. John, Sydney and Quebec look out across the Atlantic, which to-day is the chief highway of the country's commerce. Vancouver, Victoria and Prince Rupert front the Pacific, which to-morrow will supplant the Atlantic as the scene of the greatest commercial activity.
> By way of the St. Lawrence ocean-going vessels pierce 1,000 and even 2,000 miles into the heart of the continent. Only six or seven other nations boast a greater aggregate shipping tonnage. Our mercantile marine traverses every sea, and trades to most of the world's chief ports. Our foreign commerce approximates to the $700,000,000 mark. Our fisheries are extensive and profitable. The coast industries of British Columbia and the Atlantic Provinces support a large sea-faring population.

This is all very true and very fine. But when the News strikes its monomaniac subject—hostility to the Dominion Government, it "flies off the handle"—"the House of Commons does not worthily represent the great daughter of the sea-grit isles"; and what is just in its vein—"The leader of the Government"—aye there's the rub—"the leader of the Government fails to voice or interpret the real sentiment of the nation." The News then goes on to practically insist upon Canada going headlong and wholesale into Dreadnought building. It quotes to our shame what Australia and New Zealand are doing in this direction, asserting rather gratuitously, that "New Zealand gives a Dreadnought and Australia builds twenty-one war vessels." This may be true but the facts seem to be that Australia is, as yet, merely considering the question of the form of assistance it shall or may take, while there is no certainty that New Zealand will build a Dreadnought. The Government of New Zealand in a moment of efflorescent jingoism may have offered a Dreadnought ,but later the people rose in revolt against the proposal.

Besides it is not clear that Dreadnoughts will fill the bill. The British Admiralty are now considering the whole question of naval construction and it may be possible that the Dreadnought type of warship may be beached and some other form of offensive and defensive craft designed and built. So that it would seem to be wise to hasten gently with the building of warships that may soon be of an obsolete type and which cost anywhere from ten to fifteen million dollars. Investing ten or fifteen million dollars each in floating scrap iron heaps, doesn't seem to be a wise risk to take.

Besides, again, the panic, the war scare, is subsiding. Lord Charles Beresford, the most severe and most capable critic of the navy and naval policy and administration, on Saturday last, deprecated the panic of a few weeks ago. He used these words:

> "If the Cabinet Committee, now considering the lack of naval readiness found things unsatisfactory as he had no doubt they would do, there would be no necessity of panic and recrimination, but the nation would have to reassert the old British spirit, see where things are wrong and calmly put them right."

There spoke the man of sense, true patriotism and conscious responsibility. What a contrast to the shrieking irresponsible jingoists who flippantly talk of unlimited expenditure for unnecessary defence preparation, and flippantly prostitute their spurious patriotism to the promotion of party purposes—by attempting to injure their political opponents, who act from a sense of responsibility and duty to the public, whose affairs they are charged with the duty of administrating. The News charges Sir Wilfrid Laurier with failing "to voice the real sentiment of the country." The little group of strident jingoists and the few rabid partizan sheets that serve as their mouthpieces, are not the people of Canada, any more than the three Tooley street tailors were "the people of England." The Premier and the Canadian Parliament, acting in unanimity with him, took the right stand in regard to imperial defence. They showed the "old British spirit," spoken of by Lord Charles Beresford, and calmly put themselves right in resolving to consider the question of establishing a scheme of naval defence such as the conditions call for. The Premier and Parliament refused to be stampeded into hysterical tenders of paper Dreadnoughts and wordy warships. They will do their duty calmly without panic and in a way to reflect "the real sentiment of the nation."

Rome was not built in a day. the British navy and the British constitution were not the work of a day or of a century.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Toronto World has a way of talking in its sleep. On Saturday it had a wild story to the effect that Sir William Van Horne was to be made the leader of the Conservative party and that Lord Strathcona would endorse the deal. Surely the great party of loyalty which clamours for the building of a Dreadnought by every Canadian incorporated village would not consent to have any but a native Canadian as leader and, somewhere in the millennial period premier. On Monday the World dreamed the dream that Lieutenant-Governor Tweedie of New Brunswick, is to dismiss Premier Hazen, and the "Ottawa crowd" is good for manipulating the advancement of Ex-Premier Thompson to the premiership. The next ghost story is awaited with interest.

MARKED CARDS?

(Cobalt Citizen.)

Unless I mistake the signs of the times, there are fortunes in the brewing.

The Gillies Limit has gone to the revenue Pot, and a feast of fortune is timed for the fifteenth of June. It is a love feast, as befits the amorous month, and neither age nor sex is barred—providing it has the price. It's a general feed and the goose hangs high. This is to be no ordinary swilling. It is to be run on the open your mouth and shut yours eyes plan, and the Department of Lands and Mines will give you something to make you wise. The one qualification necessary to the ordinary feeder, besides his wad, is a broad faith in the cook and an ability to masticate in the dark.

The Cobalt Camp's great riddle is to be read. The old time query as to what would become of the Gillies Limit is answered—or partially answered, but the balance is obvious. Wheresoever the carcase is there will the eagles be gathered together. Eight hundred acres of that supposedly bonanza silver district is offered for sale by sealed tender and the public is celled to the bidding.

The Gillies Limit was originally granted to the Booths and Lumsdens, but was sold by these noted lumbermen to the Gillies Bros., of Braeside, near Ottawa, one of the wealthiest timber firms in the Dominion.

The Limit first came into notice as a mining field when in the early Cobalt days, the directors of the Temiskaming and Hudson Bay Mining Company went picnicing in Coleman. They dropped stakes wherever they went and some wandered into the Gillies' hunting grounds. The then Minister of Lands and Mines held the Company's application in abeyance, however, as the Gillies objected to mining operations which might endanger their standing timber. The present Coleman Township fortunately lay in the territory still controlled by the Booths, and, as the shanty men had worked the Cobalt Lake district for two or three seasons, the owners of the timber had little to fear and allowed the Government to grant mining rights to prospectors. Numbers of claims were staked, however, in the Gillies Limit, and the stock of one company, which could now be bought for a smile soared to four dollars per share. Granting of applications was deferred, however, pending negotiations with the Gillies, and in the meantime the Governments changed.

The new administration withdrew the Limit from prospecting and, though the Province is said to have been offered as much as ten million dollars for the mining rights of this timber reserve, the Government decided to work the property itself. The natural result followed. Prospectors who had made real discoveries covered up their finds, and according to the Department's report, it was with great difficulty that a silver vein was at last uncovered under five or six feet of earth. The Provincial Mine has languished under Government control, and is not even now more than paying expenses.

In the meantime, however, independent prospectors have been warned off the Government's preserves. An era of secrecy set in. If anything has been found beyond this one vein, it has been kept dark. The precaution has been taken even of employing foreigners as prospectors so that information as to what was going on could not spread among English speaking people. An occasional jibe at the Government's mining and prospecting methods is all that has been heard for many moons gone by of the once notorious Gillies Limit.

Not a whisper has stolen to the outside public of the Department's purpose to throw the Limit on the market. Not a word was spoken in the House during the session just closed regarding the Government's important change of policy and even now, when the cat is out of the bag, the advertisement announcing the sale is an insignificant six inch paragraph inserted in by no means all of the newspapers of the Province. The advertisement gives absolutely no information regarding the property, nor does it indicate where facts may be obtained. There was a report made by Professor Miller at one time, which might possibly be dug up, but the advertisement merely states that the conditions of sale and map of the property may be obtained from the Department.

There has been a marked absence of that blast of trumpets which attended the jollification at the Cochrane townsite sale and which we would expect to precede the sale of the choice portions of a ten million dollar property.

Another significant circumstance is the fact that the sale is to take place before the general public can have any opportunity whatever to examine the various twenty-acre lots. Whether or not prospectors are even now permitted access to the Limit no one seems to know; the advertisement does not hint at so trivial a detail, but, even were the property thrown open, the snow is still in the bush, and it will remain there until with fifteen or twenty days of the opening of the tenders.

What does it all mean?

A ten million dollar property, upon which discoveries are claimed to have been made by every Tom, Dick and Harry—lumbermen, surveyors, and trespassers—with the single exception of the official prospectors paid for that purpose, is bottled up from the public and precautions for secrecy maintained. A property for which the Government is said to have refused ten million dollars is knocked in the Government reports. For years it lies dormant until only insiders know what is there. Not a word is heard of the Government's purposed change of policy, all unannounced, the property is slipped onto the market under conditions and at a season of the year when those not in the know must necessarily remain in the dark. What does it all mean?

In the words of a famous Irish master of mixed metaphor, I smell a rat.

ADDUAL SPRIG SOG.

'Tis dow the thig to sig of sprig
With all its gladsobedess,
With all its birds upod the wig,
With baids id airy dress.
Therefore I twag upod by lyre
And try with all by bight
To bravely strike poetic fire
Ad voice by soul's delight.

As Browdig says, the hill's dew pearled,
The sdall is od the thord,
Ad thigs are all right with the world—
At least they are this bord.
Toborrow it bay sdow sobe bore
Or blow bed's whiskers loose,
But let us dot put up a roar,
For what would be the use?

By dose if clogged, by eyes are red,
By throat is sore ad raw,
By joits all ache, so does by head,
By breath is hard to draw,
But sprig is here with all its cheer,
So let us cease to fret
Ad sig ad sbile ad clig awhile
To widter flannels yet.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

HOW THE NEW YORK TELEGRAPH MAN SAW SATURDAY'S RACE

Karl Decker Tells of the Funny Incidents of the Marathon ---Carvajal Was the Real Comedy Feature of the Contest---Svanberg Wanted to go Calling.

This is how Karl Decker, of the New York Telegraph, saw Saturday's Marathon:

Little sparrow bird St. Yves, the French kid with the plippety-plippety gait, copped another Marathon Saturday and did it with such ease that they almost had to chloroform him in order to force him to take his prize money. He won it so easily he was ashamed to take the money in the presence of any witness, so they had to place it in a plain envelope and leave it in his desk, just as if he had been a desk sergeant in the old ante-Lexow days.

When he went plippety-plipping past the finish line he was five laps or nearly a mile ahead of Svanberg.

This is the second time Marathon St. Yves has won in this country and the seventh he has won since he started marathoning. He has made all the old favourites look as out of date as a high-wheel bicycle.

It was the big $10,000 Marathon Derby pulled off at the Polo Grounds Saturday that Henri St. Yves captured, and while there was never anything of a race for first place, there were several interesting battles for the secondary positions.

That young Swede person, John Svanberg, with the hair that looks like blanched celery, finished second, five laps behind St. Yves. Svanberg would have been nearer the head of the line if it hadn't been for several blowouts that caused him to leave the track and wander off toward his training camp as though he intended to stay there. Every time he tried to quit his trainers smacked him over the occipital bone rudely and vigorously and jolted the idea into his Swedish thought tank that he was at the Polo Grounds to run a Marathon and not to go visiting the folk in his station. He always smiled a pleasant sort of Swedish smile and went back to the ground.

Ted Crook, the flip-flapping, stoop-shouldered, ungainly-looking Fall River entrant, copped third place easily and without having shown any particular interest at any time in what was being done.

Simpson, the Indian, stuck through to the end and got fourth place. Appleby, the holder of the world's record for fifteen miles, finished fifth, and the little pastry baker from Capri plugged around amiably and earned sixth place.

Cuban Cheroot Gets Booby Prize

Carvajal, the Cuban cheroot, won the booby prize. Senor Carvajal was still running when they closed the grounds Saturday night and may finish some time about the breakfast hour to-day. Carvajal would be a hot favourite in a slow Marathon.

There were thirteen entries and the affair was not made any the more attractive because of the large field. The two Frenchmen, Cibot and Orphee, kept getting in everybody's way and Mat. Maloney and Pat. White also cluttered up the track a whole lot without adding to the general entertainment. Tom Morrissey kept running long after there was any run to him and finally collapsed and was carried away. These entries didn't help out in any fashion as they caused nothing of enthusiasm or interest. Senor Felix Carvajal, the manana Marathoner, furnished a comedy element, however, that was really refreshing. Several times Felix wanted to stop, but his trainer, in a coat that looked as though it had been furnished by one of those firms that advertise in the back page of the magazines, kept swearing at him in Spanish and forcing him to stick by telling him that he was only a lap behind the leader. Felix couldn't read the score board as he is near-sighted, and not being clever at mathematics, couldn't keep track of the scores of times he had been lapped by everybody on the track.

FRED MEADOWS TOYED WITH HANS HOMER IN 15 MILE RACE

Guelph Galloper Gave the Halifax Runner a Terrible Walloping on Saturday---Beat Him Over a Mile After Holding Back for Five Miles---Hans Had to Walk.

The Toronto Star says: Hans Holmer, the Maritime Province champion, got his down in old Quebec Saturday, and the little lad who handed it to him was Freddie Meadows, the Guelph surprise package.

Fred and his manager, A. C. Lawrence of Rockwood, came to town today. They hide their faces in shame when they tell what they did to Holmer. Holmer, down around Quebec, where they run like crippled crabs, got the idea that he was in Longboat-Shrubb and St. Yves class. He refused to come into the Canadian Derby without a guarantee, and his manager, Edgar A. Shee, wrote Alf Shrubb a letter tearing him up the back and alleging that he got his tame running dubs on short tracks. It was awful the side on the Holmer-Shee combination -or, at least, it was until Saturday, when Meadows wallopped him a mile and a quarter in fifteen miles.

Incidentally Meadows cleaned up a whole lot of bets, and did the distance in 1.24.56. Now, 1.24.56 compares very favourably with Alf. Shrubb's 1.23.57 at Montreal, when you consider that Meadows ran on a track like an ash heap and Shrubb ran on the best track in America. In addition, Meadows went back at five miles and lost half a lap to enable his backers to get down their wagers. Once the Guelph lad commenced to show his real form he ran Holmer into the woods in a hurry. He had a lap's lead in the thirteenth, two in the fourteenth, and Holmer finished walking.

In spite of the big-headed conduct of Holmer and his manager, Holmer is a good runner, and will be heard of prominently. The lesson will be a valuable one. Meadows' great time makes him a Shrubb possibility.

Tommy Daly, Who Fights Kelly To-morrow Night, Has A Record

The ten-round bout between Tommy Daly and Jimmy Kelly at the Brock St Rink on Wednesday night promises to be a hummer, for both boys are in good shape and well able to go the distance. This ought to be the cleverest and fastest boxing contest that the fans of the city have had the opportunity of witnessing, for both are fast with their hands and on their feet.

Since Daly got into the professional class he has won six bouts and lost the decision in two, and several of them with high class men. As an amateur he won six City Championships in Toronto and two Dominion Championships and was the runner up in the 125-pound class in the American Championship bouts in 1907. Daly has been seen in action here in a couple of exhibition bouts with Corney Burns, and always put up a very fast bout. Kelly has been training hard since his last match here and promises to clean up before the end of the tenth is reached.

The preliminaries have been arranged, and two good hard bouts between local men will be put on and some tall mixing is expected.

Mr. George Graham will referee the bouts and will see that there are no dull moments during the time the men have the mits on their hands.

The rink is in good shape and well dried out. A stage has been erected and ready for the hardest kind of a go.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

Rain played havoc with the Eastern League [illegible] yesterday and there was [illegible] around the [illegible] circuit. The National and American, however, managed to pull off a few contests. Brooklyn turned the tables on Philadelphia in the N[illegible] [illegible] out of the [illegible] during the present series [illegible] pitched for the Dodgers, [illegible] two straight from Philadelphia, Brooklyn winning 4 to 2, with nine hits to seven.

New York beat Boston 2 to 1, making the fourth time in succession during the series that this score has been made. Bowerman's team could not hit Raymond with men on bases, and fielded loosely. White for Boston was wild, but kept the hits scattered.

In the American Chicago and Washington had an eleven innings' battle, the Senators finally losing out 1 to 0. White and Johnston were the opposing pitchers, and they had a merry battle, the Sox twirler allowing four and the Senators' pitcher six hits. The Sox, however, landed on Johnson in the eleventh for three safeties in a row and won out.

Rube Waddell, pitching for St. Louis against Philadelphia, was beaten by the Athletics 5 to 1. Waddell was unsteady and was hit effectively while the fielding behind him was poor. Plank pitched nice ball for Philadelphia.

BOB MACEWAN GIVES A CUP

Former Manager of the Peterborough Ball Club is Now a Patron Of The Game.

Robt. McEwan, who managed the Peterborough Ball Club for one disastrous season has been making a little Andrew Carnegie of himself. The Toronto Star says:

"Bob" McEwan is a well-known name in the baseball circles. Now Robert McEwan—to be precise—also loves to encourage the game of baseball amongst the amateurs. That this is a worthy object doubtless they are many who will agree. Well "Bob" with his customary genial benevolence, has handed over, to be competed for by the teams of the Inter-City League, a magnificent silver cup. It's a peach of a cup, too, and well worth the winning. Said "Bob": "In giving this cup I attach no conditions other than that it shall be called the 'McEwan' Cup. The team which wins the league pennant for the season 1909 gets the cup outright." As the cup is a really splendid specimen of the silversmith's art, there is sure to be some desperate struggles between the various teams to annex it."

Lever Brothers, Toronto, will send you free a cake of their famous Plantol toilet soap, if you mention this paper.

BOTH MEN FIT FOR THEIR SCRAP

Kelly and Daly Each Confident of Winning To-morrow Night's Go.

To-morrow night's bill at Brock St. Rink will commence at 8.30 o'clock, and promises to be about the biggest night's fun that has ever been pulled off in Peterborough. Both Daly and Kelly are fit and well, and will mix things from the first tap of the gong, with the result that there will be heavy doings before the tenth round. There promises to be a big crowd present as the fight fans are interested in Kelly since his clever showing here, while Daly always has been popular in Peterborough. It is pretty hard to pick a winner, as both men are good, clever boxers, with a punch hid away that makes them decidedly dangerous.

SPORTING SPARKLETS

It is to be feared that in this country our sports are far too much tainted with the pot-hunting spirit. There is too much competition for prizes rather than for recreation or honour. Hockey, baseball, football, etc., are organized into leagues, for prize competitions. Even curling clubs devote their entire winter to tournaments, matches, schedule contests, always at all times struggling for pots and prizes. This perpetual playing for blood is not in the best interests of our sports, or of our young men. Its tendency is to develop selfishness, a black-rot of evil, that will inevitably destroy any club in which it once gets an existence. Playing for blood is not sport, it is not recreation; it is business to all intents professionalism, and is bound to develop the most undesirable elements in human nature.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

Why Tailors Sit Crosslegged.

A tailor making a dress coat sat crosslegged on a table, like a Turk. "Why do tailors always work in that uncomfortable position?" asked a visitor.

"Women's tailors don't. Only men's do," was the reply. "And for men's tailors it is the most comfortable and the most convenient position possible. You see, the sewing on men's clothes is very fine. The work must be held up close to the eyes. Well, in this position I lean the work on my elevated knees, and thus it is nearer my eyes, while at the same time my back remains straight. Analyzed, the position is a fine one. It keeps the back straight and the chest out, the knees make a table close up to the face, and eye strain is avoided.

"Tailors for women sit on chairs. For one thing, the sewing on women's clothes is less fine than on men's. For another, the woman's tailor has to get up every few minutes to go to the manikin, and all that rising, if he sat crosslegged on the floor, would tire him too much in the day's run."—New York Press.

GUARDING THE SULTAN.

Canadian Is One of Abdul Hamid's Closest Protectors.

The Sultan depends upon a Canadian to save his life. His hopes in his extremity are pinned upon Admiral Ransford D. Bucknam, who now commands the imperial navy, has charge of naval construction and of the imperial yacht, and is the naval adviser and aide-de-camp of Abdul Hamid II.

Bucknam Pasha has been in Turkey only six years. He was born in Nova Scotia thirty-eight years ago. His father was lost at sea and when his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bucknam, of Worcester, Mass., gave him the choice of farm life or going to sea at fourteen he chose the sea as cabin boy in a merchant ships.

Twice, it is said, he has saved the life of the Sultan, and he is prepared to fight for it again if necessary.

More than once has Bucknam Pasha himself, as he is known in Turkey, been the object of attack by would-be assassins.

Guarded as he is in Constantinople, his enemies have found little chance to slay him, but once in Kiel, while returning from a banquet, his foes nearly succeeded. Five of them attacked him with daggers, and only his expert knowledge of boxing saved his life. He floored three of them, and was repelling the attacks of the others single-handed when help arrived.

Despite the honors that have been heaped upon him, Bucknam Pasha remains at heart a Canadian. He laughs at the thought of danger to himself.

His coolness under danger was displayed four years ago when an attempt was made to kill the Sultan with a bomb as he was about to leave the Hamidieh Mosque, a thousand yards from the palace. The bomb exploded prematurely and killed eighty mounted men and their horses and wounded many more.

Bucknam Pasha was uninjured and he walked beside the Sultan's carriage with drawn sword as it threaded its way among the dead, back to the palace, threatening in a loud voice to decapitate any unauthorized person who approached.

Bucknam has entire charge of the building of the Turkish navy. Every dollar of $20,000,000 set aside for this purpose which has thus far been expended has been paid out under his direction.

Upon the breast of his gold-embroidered uniform gleams the star of the Order of Osmanieh conferred upon him by the Sultan. The same imperial hands have conferred a distinguished service medal, which Bucknam Pasha wears upon his left breast. Massive gold epaulets adorn his shoulders. A gold-braided fez and a jewel-studded sword completes the dress of the man upon whose naval wisdom and astuteness the Sultan now leans. At court the Nova Scotian ranks with the nobles and he is more often consulted.

He was twice shipwrecked. Afterward he met John D. Rockefeller on a lake passenger steamer and the latter made him captain of a Standard Oil whaleback, where he was known as the "Kid Captain."

In 1902 he accepted a position with the Cramps of Philadelphia, and when the Turkish warship Medjidia was completed in 1903 he was commissioned to sail her to the Bosphorus. There he met the Sultan, who was so impressed with his ability that he offered him the vice-admiralty of the empire.

The Plodder, Loafer, Croaker, Classified In An Address

Rev. G. W. Henderson Gives His Address at Charlotte Street—An Interesting Portrayal of Three Kinds of Men—Which Do You Belong To?

HAD GOOD ATTENDANCE.

The lecture last evening in Charlotte Street Church by Rev. G. W. Henderson was well attended and merited the hearty applause and the many complimentary opinions expressed since. Like the small boy who said he liked a sermon with "plenty of windows in it," the audience appreciated the "windows" of the lecture, the many illustrations of pointed and humorous character.

The title "Plodders, Loafers, and Croakers" was well chosen for the Plodder occupied the centre of the stage, and the Loafer and the Croaker were shown in all their many disagreeable colours.

Work is the law of life, the speaker declared, and showed how this law appeared in every form of the animal kingdom. There is no room for the shirker. He once knew a family by the name of Dolittle. The name carried weight with the two sons, for they were notoriously lazy. To distinguish them the neighbours called the one Jim Dolittle and the other Bill Do-less. But there are a lot of people who might well be called Do Nothing-At-All.

And these Do-Nothing-At-All's put up a lot of pretty lame excueses for not working, such as "Others can do it much better than I can," and "I have no talent for this." To illustrate this the speaker told a very amusing experience he had with a man whom he desired as a teacher for a class of boys. By meeting his excuses with an expression of regret at overestimating the man's ability, and that he now saw that the man was apparently devoid of ordinary ability and knowledge of the Bible it so nettled the man that he realized his position and the day was won.

The British army was said to be over-officered. So are many churches. The result is a lot of people who stand around and boss. They do little but talk. They loaf and croak. Sambo was fishing in a mudhole in the brickyard not far from home. The stranger plied him with questions as to the reason. He was promptly assured that no fish were expected. No, it was just to impress the woman over at the house that he had no time to handle the hoe.

Bluster and fuss does not go for much. Lincoln once quite completely annihilated an opponent on the platform, whose speech was mainly gestures, by comparing him to a certain steam tug on the Mississippi, fitted with an eight-foot boiler, and a twelve-foot whistle. When she blew she stopped. "When she blows she doesn't go, and when she goes she doesn't blow."

The Croaker.

The Croaker, the fault-finder, the critic, was well set forth in a delightful story of a certain gentleman and his wife, who went fishing. The husband considered himself an adept, anid consequently took the major portion of the boat for his operations, which consisted largely of criticisms of his wife's methods of handling her outfit. But, after all the croaking, the result of the fishing expedition was so much in favour of the wife that the husband resolved thereafter to cease criticism. The man that catches the fish is the man. His methods should not cause opposition.

The speaker showed how the true Plodder was the man or the boy who worked faithfully believeing that whatever he did deserved his best efforts, and that God was pleased accordingly. He was doing it for Jesus' sake, just as much as the preacher in his pulpit. A number of extremely laughable stories were told to illustrate this point.

The work of the child should not be lightly considered. The results of their work was at times simply wonderful. They were able to accomplish frequently what men and women failed utterly to do.

On conclusion of the lecture the appreciation of the audience was placed in the form of a vote of thanks on motion of Mr. A. B. Cunningham, seconded by Mr. Goodwin.

During the evening two very excellent solos were sung by Mr. Lee and Miss Howell, and were so appreciated as to call for a special vote of thanks by Mr. H. B. Collier as mover and Mr. Cox as seconder.

Mr. I. Downey, Principal of Central School, performed the duties of Chairman most acceptably.

Congregational Concert And Tea At New Park Street Church

Over One Hundred Dollars the Receipts of Last Night's Affair—Many Clergymen Were Present and Expressions of Good Will and Congratulations Were Expressed.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

The first gathering of the members of the Park St. Baptist congregation and their friends for a social proved entirely enjoyable last night. Tea was served to hundreds in the basement from 5.30 to eight o'clock and the after meeting in the church proper attracted an additional large number who were unable to attend earlier. The result was a very delightful evening and a splendid record following the opening of the new edifice. The tables were set in the basement and the ladies of Park St. Church provided an array of delectables which in anticipation were good but in realization were surpassingly so.

The arrangements for the affair were complete and the equipment of the kitchen on its first use gave every satisfaction.

As on Sunday evening the church was crowded and pleased expressions were found everywhere as the newness and brightness of the church exerted its influence.

Mr T. F. Matthews was chairman of the evening, taking care of the programme in an efficient manner and proving himself equal to every occasion. The choirs of the Murray St and Park St. Baptist Church were heard several times and the Orpheus quartette gave a good account of themselves in their selections.

The pastor of the church, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, at this stage, then made a few remarks. He thanked all who had in any way helped to make the opening a success.

He referred in a tender way to the faithful members of the building committee, who had, from start to finish, stood by him so nobly and well, and said whatever had been accomplished was the result of co-operation and harmony in the great desire of bringing glory to God, and good-will to all men.

He also wished to thank Mr. C. B. Routley for the exquisite individual communion set he had so kindly presented to the Church; it certainly showed that gentleman's practical interest in the progress of Park Street. Regrets were received from Rev. Potter, of St. Andrew's, and Hon. J. R. Stratton, both wishing the new cause every success.

Financial Statement.

The financial statement was in brief as follows:

Total worth of property, $12,000

Amount raised by cash and pledge, $6,000

Total indebtedness, not quite $6,000.00

Among those who spoke durin gthe evening were Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. H. M. Manning, T. G. Gillespie, Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, Rev. Mr. Jones, of Lakefield, Rev. G. W. Henderson, Rev. H. J. Keith, and Rev. W. C. Riddiford. All the remarks were of a most felicitous nature and the best of regards were expressed to the congregation and congratulations upon the erection of the splendid new church.

About $100.00 was realized from the tea.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, May 11.—Stocks generally were disposed to react during the first two hours with some issues selling a point under last night, but great strength in Reading after the first hour sustained the market and caused some of the bears to cover up. B. R. T. was in good demand and there were some large buying orders in the Eries, which carried them up to the high level of yesterday. Del. & Hudson jumped up two with Reading. In fact, the coalers were all strong. Dealings were on a reduced scale to-day, and this was regarded as a good sign, and traders thought the market might easily rally again, particularly as the absorption on the decline had been so good.

Grain News.

Chicago, May 11.—Wheat opened a fraction higher, but there was very little offering and the bull leaders took advantage of this and bid up price nearly two cents over last night. Looked as though yesterday's selling had been a little overdone. Liverpol did not fully reflect the decline here and this gave the bulls a little more courage. Looks like a scalping market for a while.

Liverpool close: Wheat ⅜ to ½d. lower; corn, ¼d. lower.

EVERY DAY BRINGS A FRESH PROOF

That Dodd's Kidney Pills are a Boon to Suffering Women.

Mrs. Rousseau Tells How They Cured Her After Three Years of Almost Ceaseless Pain.

Hintonburg, Ont., May 10.—Special.—Every day furnishes fresh proof that the women of Canada can be cured of ailments which have hitherto seemed to be a part of the inheritance of the sex by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. And this place has a living proof in the person of Mrs. William Rousseau, of 37 Merton street.

"For over three years," Mrs. Rousseau states, "I was very ill. My troubles were painful. I suffered very much with my back. My head ached almost continuously and I scarcely knew what it was to be free from pain. I was very weak and run down. Occasionally my hands would swell up, and this, too, gave me a great deal of annoyance and discomfort. I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and very soon commenced to improve. Three boxes cured me completely."

Nine-tenths of suffering women's troubles start from diseased kidneys. The natural way to cure them is to take away the cause, that is, to cure the kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased kidneys.

A GAME MANAGER

Away out in the city of Medford, Ore., there has been found a manager who is entitled to a medal for honesty and gameness. Lillian Russell and "Wildfire" were booked to appear in Medford about a week ago. The management of the company, after studying the itinerary carefully, endeavoured to cancel the date because of an almost impossible "jump" out of the city to the next "stand."

When Charles Hazelrigg, the Medford manager, heard of the company's dilemma, he promptly agreed to pay one-half the cost of the special train which would be required to make the desired connection.

The contract demanded that the "Wildfire" company should have the first $800 that came into the box office. As a matter of fact, the gross receipts amounted to only $743, all of which went to the company. Nevertheless Hazelrigg added to this amount the sum of $65 which was one-half of the cost of the special train. And he did it without so much as a word of complaint.—The Telegraph.

LAWN DECORATIONS.

From Farm and Dairy.

Rustic stands are one of the most effective and easily obtained features of lawn decoration. A rustic stand can be made of the crudest and commonest materials, if a little artistic and original taste is made use of in connection with their make up. A tub part of a barrel or a box of suitable strength and size can be transformed into a really pretty and effective rustic adornment with a few pieces of common lichen or moss covered pieces of bark from our native trees nailed around them; or can be covered with cork bark, if something more uncommon or elaborate is required. Small pieces of cedar saplings split in two with the tops pointed so as to represent a rustic picket fence, and nailed on the tubs also makes a pleasing and effective stand for the lawn.

A few of these rustic tubs or boxes placed on a piece of round timber of pine or any native tree, with the bark left on so as to look as natural as possible, will make an effective and pleasing object placed about the lawn or grass plot, when filled with flowers and trailing plants. The pieces of timber used should be sunk into the ground a little, if not large enough to stand firmly of themselves. The boxes or tubs also would be better if fastened down to the stands with pieces of wire in two or three places to prevent them being blown or pushed over.

For [illegible] stones [illegible] for [illegible]. An [illegible] trunk of [illegible] other tree about two feet six inches in height also makes [illegible] adornment when filled with good soil and plants. One of these last named filled with cacti and trailing plants makes a most conspicuous and pleasing object on the lawn in summer time.

Rustic stands can be purchased at most of our large feed stores in several designs. The ordinary wire stands are not very ornamental, and not suited for pot plants out of doors especially in an exposed sunny position, as the plants dry out too rapidly in them. If these stands were constructed so that moss could be packed around the pots, they would at least have the merit of being useful, if not ornamental.

RUSTIC STAND FOR PLANTS AND FLOWERS

IRON VASES OR STANDS

Many of the iron urns or stands one sees on lawns are of themselves quite ornamental, but are expensive and not at all adapted to grow plants in successfully. The basin or urn is usually too shallow to allow of sufficient soil to grow plants in. Iron also being a conductor of heat, the soil dries out very rapidly. A deeper basin, eight to ten inches in depth, according to size of urn and the sides made perpendicular instead of [illegible] and more [illegible] desirable [illegible] to make [illegible] vases [illegible] for growing plants in. The [illegible] would prevent to a great extent the rapid drying out of the soil and [illegible] very beneficial to the plants.

CEMENT VASES

Lawn vases [illegible] of cement [illegible] pieces of stone or fancy pebbles [illegible] ed all over the surface also make very effective lawn decoration filled with plants.

Why It Costs So Much To Build A Dreadnought

Details of the Construction of the Biggest War Vessels Afloat—Eight Dreadnoughts Mean Employment for 48,000 Men, Representing Nearly Every Trade.

London Daily Mail

Long before a Dreadnought is actually laid down at least 100 great firms in all parts of the country have been spurred into unusual activity. Thirty of forty distinct trades are engaged in the work; five or perhaps six thousand men are employed.

Eight Dreadnoughts if under construction simultaneously, would mean employment for about 48,000 men. counting the families of the workers on a low estimate, it is fairly safe to say that a community of nearly 200,000 persons—about the population of Bradford—could be supported by the wages paid to Dreadnought builders during the period of construction.

If we could imagine all the workers gathered together into one large town, we should find among them men of nearly every trade. Besides the steel workers, the builders of enormously powerful machinery, and of apparatus put togther with the refined delicacy of the watchmaker, there would be carpenters, cabinet makers, polishers, leather workers, electricians, chemical workers, optical workers, painters, plumbers, glaziers, upholsterers, gilders, ropemakers, workers who deal with cork, indiarubber, and almost every substance known to man. They would all find work in Dreadnought town.

Now let us see how all these workers actually build one of these great ships.

The first step is the construction of a small model. This model is made of paraffin wax, and is subjected to a series of tests in an experimental tank.

It is drawn through the water at various speeds, and by the most minute calculation of the resistance it offers the designers discover data which enable them to determine the speed the completed vessel will be able to attain, as well as many other matters. So much importance is attached to these trials, which take place in the experimental tanks at Haslar, that only experts actually engaged in the work are allowed to enter the building.

After these experiments the drawings are made which are equivalent to an architect's plans. The preparation of these drawings alone is an enormous task.

The next scene is laid in an immense building known as the "mold loft." Here wooden models of various portions of the ship are put together.

Laying the Keel

If you could get a glimpse into one of the great "mold lofts" of a royal dockyard you would see the floor of the building marked out with sections of the new ship for the guidance of the shipwrights who will actually put the ship together.

Officially the building a ship commences from the time the keel is laid, and the time occupied in construction is always calculated from this point—when she is "laid down." There is generally a picturesque little ceremony connected with this official start.

Nowadays every naval leviathan is constructed on a slip—that is a sloping way that leads down to the water.

Right from the water to the head of the slip runs a row of huge blocks. On one side of the slip is placed the keel plate of the new leviathan. A lady—usually the wife of an admiral—touches an electric button and the keel slides slowly into its place on the blocks amid the cheers of the assembled workmen. The keel is "laid" and the building of the ship is begun.

From this time until the day of launching the place is the scene of incessant activity. Hundreds of workmen swarm all over the slowly growing monster, and the noise of the boltedtogether, the task of affixing the pneumatic riveting and the drilling machines is deafening.

Every part is marked for position before it is fixed, and every pound of material built into the ship is carefully weighed, an official termed "Recorder of Weights" being appointed for this purpose.

Wthin a few days of the keel being ribs begins, and at this period of her growth, the battleship looks strikingly like a huge whale, for the bare ribs arch over just beneath the protecting deck.

The ribs, however, do not long remain exposed. By means of derricks, plates are swung up one after the other and fixed to the vessel's side. Roughly boltd into position at first, they are quickly sewn together by thousands of steel rivets punched in by a pneumatic machine.

Watertight compartments, coalbunkers, magazine flats, and the many other apartments into which the interior of a warship is divided, come quickly into being, and within about six months the hull is completed as far as the upper deck.

By the time about 6,000 tons of material have been built into the ship, she is ready for launching, but when that ceremony is completed, the new ship is far from being completed.

Her armour plating is now to be put on, and this is an immense task, as the plates weigh many tons each, and are by the way, so hard that ordinary tools will make no impression on them.

Born Amid Thunder

They are put on in strakes, (i.e., tiers) by one set of men, while others are busy fitting the engines and boilers.

The eternal clang, clang, clang, of hammers, the roar of forges, and the rumble of moving machinery goes on month after month.

A warship is born amid thunder.

To place the boilers and engine into position a huge pair of "sheer-legs" is used, and truck-load after truck-load of engine parts, tubes and steel shafts are swung high up into the air and lowered into the engine rooms and stoke holds.

Anyone who has not seen it would scarcely credit the enormous quantity of material that goes into the propelling and other machinery of a warship. Besides all this there are the miles and miles of wires to be installed for electric lights and telephones. Then the huge funnels, through which a coach and four might easily drive, are hoisted aboard, the masts are stepped, and the guns are put in and the new Dreadnought is ready to go to sea for her gun and machinery trials.

What a Dreadnought Costs

(In the concluding paragraphs pounds have been reduced to dollars for the sake of convenience).

There are many who cannot conceive how a Dreadnought can cost as much as $10,000,000, but when one figures out the cost of the component parts of the leviathan, the mystery fades away.

The cost of the hull proper amounts to approximately $4,080,000, and the armour used to protect the hull costs in the neighborhood of $2,500,000. The 18 boilers, producing 23,000 horsepower, and machinery developing a speed of between 18 and 19 knots an hour, cost $1,517,000. Four twelve-inch guns and barbettes, for the forward and aft decks, costs $1,000,000. The cost of 13 searchlights and the necessary electrical fittings totals $250,000. The numerous small twelve-pound guns cost $1,800 each while the cost of the small motor and steam boats is $40,000. Five submerged torpedo tubes cost $15,000 each.

Cost of Operation

But it is not only the cost of construction which is stupendous. The cost of maintaining this floating fortress is almost appalling. Each torpedo costs $3,000. The cost of firing one shell from the 12-inch guns is $7.50. The prodigious furnaces consume every hour 17½ tons of coal. The cost of every shell fired from the 12-pound guns is $30.

Truly, a Dreadnought is a very considerable bill of expense, for the very wealthiest of nations.

SAMPSON'S STRENGTH

Will Not Resist the Pulling Down Influence of a Kidney Aching Back

The strongest man or woman with a back constantly aching finds daily existence a struggle. Its the same way with urinary troubles. Booth's Kidney Pills cure these ailments. Peterborough people prove this statement.

W. Wormington, No. 121 Brock street, Peterborough, Ont., says: "I had suffered with rheumatism for over three years. I had found little or no relief in any of the remedies I had tried. I became so stiff and sore that I could scarcely turn in my bed and had to lay off from my work. The urine was highly coloured and filled with a heavy sand-like sediment which plainly told the disordered state of the kidneys. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at McDermid & Jury's Pharmacy. I was surprised to see how quickly the urine cleared. The kidneys were soon active, and the uric acid went from my system. The rheumatism gradually became less severe nad finally left me. I am better than in years previous, and could not hesitate to recommend Booth's Kidney Pills." Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Limited, Fort Erie, Ont., Sole Canadian Agents.

"Old Ben Bolt"

By MYRA NORTHCLIFF.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

His name wasn't "Old Ben Bolt," but everybody called him that, and strangers accepted it on the spot as singularly appropriate, for Captain Jim Saybolt's honest, kind blue eyes, his brown face and closely curling hair and his masterful yet good natured mouth made him indeed seem the embodiment of the famous "Ben Bolt of the salt sea gale."

He wasn't old at all, though he thought himself aged and beyond all the dreams of youth because he had just turned thirty-five. But then he had always had an abnormal modesty about his own masculine charms.

His head, albeit of pepper and salt, was filled with practical good sense that had brought him up from fisherman to superintendent and part owner of the Grantson company's big fleet of smacks.

He had his office in the cubby of a water stilted shanty at the end of the pier, and its window looked directly across at a certain young woman named Kate, dealing out candy, oranges and cheap cigars to the rolling crews of the boats.

There was a standing joke among the boys how the smoking habit took hold of everybody after he saw Kate.

It never got to her ears, though, for, notwithstanding the candy and cigars, there was a fine little line of reticence about the girl over which no one ever stepped, not even Hank Raynor, the vainest and most impudent fellow that ever trod a schooner's deck. But her pretty blushes and shining eyes gave the clew to her preference, and Raynor, who frequently consumed his entire wait buying a cigar, could not have been said to discourage the impression.

It is true the boys joked, but the majority of them swore as well, for the handsome Raynor bore no immaculate reputation among them.

"Cuss it!" said Dick Pearsall, mate of the Osprey schooner, savagely one night. "Why is it a woman can never see an inch from her nose when she's daffy on a man?"

"Marryin' takes that out of 'em, though," laughed old Captain Brown, who was on honorable drydock after fifty years of cod and halibut.

"Marryin'!" sneered the mate of the dandy Burgess built smack Lucinda V. "Marryin'! Raynor looks like a marryin' man, don't he? I ain't no masher myself, but I tell you that smarty is just tryin' to show off before us fellows. Marry her! Even if he wanted to he ain't fit to wipe her old shoes on!"

Nobody dissented. There were tongues in the fishing port that did not hesitate to declare that Raynor's skill as a fisherman was far inferior to the art with which he could wreck coasters for a living when the owners got tired of paying insurance and decided that it was time to collect some instead.

"All the same, he told me it was fixed up between 'em," insisted Captain Brown. "That's tellin', I s'pose, but he didn't say as there was anything private about it."

Unnoticed by the men, Captain Jim Saybolt had come up in time to catch the last words. He stopped a moment in the shadow of a column. When he moved on his face looked gray and drawn in the uncertain light.

"Get ready to take the Osprey and the Lucinda out next tide," he said evenly. "We'll have 'em unloaded in three hours more and ready for sea again."

He went back, and the group broke up. Pearsall, as he turned, caught a glimpse of his superior's face and wondered vaguely if "the boss" were ill.

With a fine sense of honor, Captain Jim himself had refrained from a look or word that might compromise Kate, but the memory of a chance touch of her fingers once when she passed back his change still sent a thrill over him. Since that day she had grown under his eyes to be the one desirable thing of his life.

He knew enough of Raynor to despise the man. Time and again he had all but prayed he might get actual cause for interference. Now the shattering of the dream seemed less his blunder than a crime.

A week afterward Kate's old father was struck by a falling block and laid on his bed, helpless for life. Her mother fell ill of typhoid. The superintendent saw the bloom fade from the girl's cheeks, to return only when Raynor appeared, and that in a nervous flush. He grew hot and cold alternately at the air of careless proprietorship the latter had lately assumed. Then suddenly the man announced that he was going away.

"Hank has got a ship," Captain Jim heard Kate confide to another girl. "It's a schooner running out of South Amboy for Norfolk, and the owners have promised him a raise in a few months, and then, if father and mother are able to be moved"—

Captain Jim lost the rest, but a sharp thrust went through him, whether of anguish or relief he could not have told. A month later came news of a shipwreck on the New Jersey coast.

The dispatches said openly that there were suspicious circumstances about the wreck, but as the captain, Hank Raynor, was announced as among those drowned it was impossible to do much investigating.

On that very day Kate failed to appear at the pier.

Day by day for a blank, wretched week Captain Jim faced the empty stand opposite his window. Then he went down to the waterside street and found there destitution, at once pitiful and reassuring.

"It isn't your love I am asking for, dear," he said to her gently as at the end of a half hour he found himself holding her trembling fingers and smoothing her hair. "I couldn't expect that. But if you will give me what is left, the right to take care of you and yours, God knows it will be a precious trust."

He felt himself more than ever before to be "Old Ben Bolt" as he said this.

Captain Jim had no fine phrases, but months of effort had made him a marvel of self control. He stood quite still, though every nerve was tense with longing to clasp the slim little figure to his breast. In fact, he hardly dared breathe when at last Kate dropped her head against his arm for acquiescence and broke into soft sobbing. A guess at what was in his heart, he told himself, would have frightened her out of his reach forever.

The six weeks that followed were a mixture of paradise and purgatory to him. It was hard, indeed, to play the decorous, fatherly lover when his whole soul cried out for the touch of her lips on his and every swish of her dress against him set his pulses throbbing. But he did it, and well.

His paradise proved a fool's, however. Walking along the main street one evening, with Kate on his arm, Hank Raynor's unmistakable self passed the two almost at elbow touch. There was a livid scar along the apparition's cheek. Kate did not see him, but a pang like death went through "Old Ben Bolt." The sight of that handsome, devil-may-care face seemed to sound his doom.

During the next four and twenty hours Captain Jim worked out his bitter problem. Cost what it might to his own self respect, he would tell Kate the truth as he knew it concerning Hank Raynor. He could do that if she had been his young sister, but in honor he must free her from her promise to himself.

He had thought of a way out of her financial difficulties, but it was not necessary she should know that yet or, indeed, the cost to his own heart of these last few months.

"I have come to give you back what I asked that first night, Kate, but I must tell you something it will be hard for you to bear," he said to her hoarsely as he stood in the little parlor, whose very plainness had grown dear to him.

A flush ran into Kate's cheek, but it died there, leaving a white line around her lips. "Old Ben Bolt" gripped the back of the chair in front of him.

"I suppose you have seen Raynor?" he went on.

Kate's color rushed back in a rosy flood. Her eyes drooped for an instant; then, shy, but brave, they looked straight into Captain Jim's own.

"Yes, I have seen him and—his wife," she answered, with a little laugh. "He brought her from Philadelphia. It—it was a good thing I had found out before that—that I didn't care most for him, after all, wasn't it, you dear 'Old Ben Bolt'?"

The room reeled round Captain Jim. Out of its chaos Kate's face grew flushed and smiling still, but with suspiciously luminous eyes. Then did this "Ben Bolt" give a great gasp as the truth burst upon him. He took two long strides with outstretched arms, and a second later Kate was quite lost in the big, warm embrace her dark hour had taught her was her heart's true haven.

Queer Fish.

Which fish have the power of floating and swimming back downward?

This peculiar property is possessed only by the diodon and the tetrodon, two allied families of tropical fishes which are popularly known as globefish. The tetrodon is also found off the coasts of Cornwall and Ireland. The faculty is due to the fact that the skin on the abdomen of these fishes is much looser than it is on the back, and they have the power to inflate this loose skin by swallowing air through the gullet. This of course enables them to turn over at will, and, although the great French naturalist Cuvier did not believe that when in this position they could swim as they pleased, Darwin corrected him and proved that they could swim both forward and backward in this position.

It is of course well known that the shark and the dogfish, owing to the peculiar position of the underjaw, are obliged to turn on their backs before they can seize their prey, and while in this position they are able to swim for a very considerable distance. This, however, is done by the muscular force of the fins and tail and not through any special apparatus, such as the globefish possesses.—St. James' Gazette.

Diplomatic Rewards.

The rewards for conspicuous service rendered by our ambassadors and ministers are in no sense commensurate with those received by the representatives of other governments. With the other great powers, if a diplomat renders some notably valuable service, such as preventing a destructive war or securing a treaty of vast political or commercial importance, he may be given a better post, be promoted in rank, have bestowed upon him some coveted decoration or even be made a peer of the realm. An American who performs a similar service receives official congratulations and gratifying expressions of appreciation from his government, but there the reward ceases. But there remains, of course, the best incentive to superior exertion—the satisfaction of doing one's duty.—General Horace Porter in Century.

THE GARDENING HOBO.

His Experience With a Red Visaged, Flaming Haired Virago.

As he walked along the country lane and sniffed in the keen air of the early morning the wandering hobo felt within him the stirrings of an appetite that would not be appeased by anything short of real food, and a good deal of it at that. Devouring scenery and drinking in the salubrious morning air were all well enough in their way, but it was upon more substantial things that his hunger was now set. So, perceiving a farmhouse with a smoking chimney not far along the highway, he approached it and rapped briskly on the kitchen door.

The door opened immediately, and a huge, red visaged, flaming haired virago confronted him just as he was about to make a pleasant remark on the subject of the early bird.

"Well," she said, "what is it?"

"I don't know, ma'am," said he, beginning his retreat, "but it looks like a cross between a Sunday supplement and a war cloud."

"What are you looking for," she demanded, seizing a mop that stood just inside the door—"trouble?"

"No, madam," said the tramp, hurrying a little until he was safely on the other side of the fence; "I'm lookin' for a way out. If I'd been lookin' for trouble I'd ha' stayed inside there where you are."

And he made blithely up the road.—John Kendrick Bangs in Lippincott's Magazine.

Simplicity Itself.

"You are not going to make garden again this spring, are you?" asks the fond wife of the brutal husband.

"I certainly am," declares the brutal husband, a look of stern determination settling upon his countenance.

"But last year your radishes came up turnips and your onions came up spinach and your sweet peas came up corn. I should think that would discourage you."

"That's the woman of it! This year I will simply plant turnips and spinach and corn and get the radishes and onions and sweet peas I want."—Chicago Post.

Insinuating.

"Lady," said Meandering Mike, "you don't want to listen to no hard luck story, do you?"

"Not a bit of it."

"You relieve my mind. If you want to hear somethin' worth while you jes' gimme a chance to show what I kin do as an after dinner speaker."—Washington Star.

Hardened.

"I'm afraid you'll find the atmosphere a little stifling," the landlord of the lower region apologetically remarked to the newcomer.

"Oh, don't worry about me," said the stranger. "It can't be any worse than a crowded street car."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Composite Product.

Mrs. Boggs—Mr. Meekman is a splendid example of what a man ought to be.

Mr. Boggs—Not on your life! He's a splendid example of what a wife, two sisters, a grownup daughter and a mother-in-law think a man ought to be.—Puck.

He'd Noticed It.

"Fine weather," remarked the passenger.

"So I've learned to my sorrow," replied the chauffeur as he gave the steering wheel a quick turn to avoid running over a policeman. "I've paid three in the last week."—Judge.

Cause and Effect.

"So you parted never to meet again?"

"Yes."

"And what happened then?"

"He kissed me goodby."

"Ah! When are you to be married?"—Minneapolis Journal.

The Terrible Infant Again.

"Yes, sister 'll be down in just a minute, maybe. Don't you think she's awfully funny?"

"Why, no."

"Don't you? Well, anyway, you know she's a big story teller, don't you?"

"No."

"Well, she is, just the same. She said she had a string to you, but I don't see any."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Vain Hope.

"But," we say to our friend, "won't it pretty nearly bankrupt you if you keep on encouraging your wife to go shopping for dresses and hats and things?"

"Yes," he acknowledged, "but it will be worth all it costs. I think she may become so interested that she will forget about spring housecleaning."—Chicago Post.

Newer Than Post Cards.

The sadly overworked picture postal has blossomed out in a new guise which is really worth while.

It is made of fine white card of excellent quality, and instead of the usual picture on the back there is a selected quotation or motto beautifully printed and hand illuminated.

The postals are attractive enough to be given the dignity of a frame and would often solve the problem of a valentine gift, which represents small money value.

The conventional flower borders on some of the cards are exquisitely tinted, and the quotations chosen cover a large variety of subjects.

MAKING CLOSET ROOM.

Shelves and Cupboards May Be Simply Constructed by Housewives.

A clever woman who at the expense of two or three dollars converted an objectionable doorway in her apartment into a most convenient desk and bookcase has set an example that many housewives could follow with profit.

Fortunately for the purpose of the one woman, the casing was in the sitting room, the door proper opening into the next room. The door was removed from its hinges and sent to the storeroom, but it might quite as well have been closed and left in place, for the casing became the secretary frame, as it were, and twelve inches from the top a shelf was fitted and nailed into place. A similar shelf was then placed a foot below the first one, this second being an inch shallower than the casing. Four inches under was nailed a third, this being of very thin wood, for at that point the desk began. Dividing the lower section at intervals of six inches with very thin wood, two pigeonholes were formed at each end, leaving a space in the center, in which one partition was placed horizontally for writing paper. At either end, just below the shelf, two small drawers were made and attached by a carpenter.

Two feet lower another shelf, also an inch narrower than the casing, was joined, and to this was added a flap, which formed the writing section when down and when up fitted in flush with the second shelf, entirely closing the desk proper. Little shelves or drawers and a cupboard may finish the bottom, the latter being a trifle more expensive than the former. A girl who has the slightest cleverness with tools can make this herself except when drawers are desired.

The whole was painted to correspond with the woodwork of the room.

For the girl who must contrive to make her bedroom into a sitting room without conveying the idea of its real use such a convenience is invaluable.

The best way of arranging shelves is to have the top serve as a place for ornaments and another below for books. From this one curtains placed on a small brass rod may hang to conceal underclothes and even toilet articles arranged on the lower shelves. Incidentally it is the part of wisdom so to arrange the draperies that they will not fly apart unexpectedly, thus revealing domestic secrets. For such a purpose invisible hooks and eyes answer admirably.

CLASSES OF RUGS.

Oriental Carpets Are of Five Distinct Kinds—Many Subdivisions.

Oriental rugs are divided ordinarily into five classes—Turkish, Persian, Turkestan and Indian. These classes are still further subdivided, according to the locality in which the rug is produced.

In weaving oriental rugs threads of crool are attached to a warp of cotton or wool by running knots, then inserting a weft of cotton or wool for the back, pressing the knots home with a wooden or iron comb and finally leveling the pile with a pair of scissors. The loom is a simple vertical frame, carrying on its upper part a beam containing a warp, which is kept stretched by a rod or pole passing through it.

Persian rugs are of close weave. They contain more knots to the inch than any kind of oriental rugs. While the factory system of manufacture has been introduced to some extent, still most of the oriental rugs that reach the United States are the product of home labor, in some cases entire families being engaged in the work. It is frequently the case that only one pattern is worked in a family, and it is said to be a custom sometimes for a pattern to be handed down from parent weaver to the children, thus constituting a sort of heirloom.

In the matter of dyes, sharp, well defined colors are not desired by orientals, and it is a custom to leave remains of dyes in the kettles, as the constant mixing and blending of colors assist in obtaining the soft, broken tints so highly prized in oriental fabrics. Indigo, porcelain blue, green, yellow, orange, crimson and rose are the colors most used. Blues, reds and yellows wear best, as they improve with age. The others are likely to deteriorate.

Aniline dyes are employed in some rugs, but they are not regarded as desirable. The best dyes used are derived from plants and insects, and the production of dyes has been followed for centuries as a distinct trade.

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

In stitching a pocket on the outside of the garment run the stitching half an inch above the edge of the pocket. This prevents the body of the garment from tearing, as is so often the case when the pocket is put on in the old way. When stitching around a cuff or wristband on the machine always turn the sleeve the wrong side out, then set the presser foot inside the wristband.

A nice little embroidery bag is made of cretonne covered with two embroidery hoops and finished at the end with a cardboard covered with cretonne just the size of the hoops. In other words, the bag is built like a barrel, with an opening at the side. This opening is held together by lacing with ribbon or by two buttons. The bag is carried by ribbon loops, which are fastened at each end to the embroidery hoops. It is pretty, and the sewing materials do not get lost when thus protected.

It is a good plan to bend steels or whalebone at the waist line when making a bodice before putting them into the casings, as the bodice will then fit closer to the figure.

Indians Are Starving.

Reports received in Edmonton from Fort Chippewyan state that the past winter has been the most severe experienced in the far north for many years, and in some sections of the country starvation was only averted by the fact that the deer were unusually numerous. Fish on which the inhabitants depend largely for subsistence, have been very scarce. The fur crop failed almost entirely, and the Indians have been in dire straits. Reports say that the traders have shut down on giving them credit, and as they cannot get fur they have no ammunition to hunt with and are slowly starving to death. Their condition is described as being truly pitiable. Many are mere skeletons and too weak even to get wood, and are lying huddled together in their tepees.

At Chippewyan and the vicinity even, where food has been obtainable, the mortality among the Indians has been very high, sixty having died within twelve months. Farther north the death rate is still higher. The principal cause is their filthy mode of living.

The Volunteer Vocalist.

Rev. Dr. Peer, of New Liskeard, has returned home after a visit to California, and tells of an interesting experience while on the train near Omaha. It was Sunday, and Mr. Peer offered to conduct a religious service in the Pullman, and the passengers readily agreed.

"Mr. Peer stationed himself against the wall of the car, with a lady seated on either side of him," says The New Liskeard Hearld, "and before proceeding with the service he asked if one of the ladies would lead the singing, when the lady to his right volunteered if she knew the hymns he was going to sing. The first selection was 'Nearer My God to Thee,' and before the first verse was half completed the only singer was the volunteer soloist.

"'She completed the hymn alone," said Mr. Peer, 'and there was not a dry eye in all that crowd of people when she finished, for the singer was no less a personage than Madame Melba, one of the world's greatest soprano singers, who was traveling with her husband to Omaha.'"

School Lunches.

A young woman, a public schoolteacher in a New York suburb, has formed a lunch club for the mothers of her pupils to assist them in putting up suitable school lunches for their children. She noticed that the majority of her pupils brought a few cents to school each day and with the money bought their lunch at a shop near by. As a rule, they bought the very things they should not have.

WALTER BLYTHE HAS GIVEN UP ALL HOPE THINKS ONLY OF THE WELFARE OF HIS FAMILY

The Man Who Murdered His Wife With a Poker on January 3rd Last Pays the Penalty of His Crime To-morrow Morning in Toronto Jail.

IS VERY DEVOUT NOW.

Toronto, May 11.—Penitent and philosophical, and filled with solicitude for the future welfare of his worse-than-orphaned children—this is the attitude in which Walter Blythe is awaiting death "by process of law" in Toronto Jail, at dawn on Thursday mornig. Blythe is the man who with a poker beat the life out of his wife at Agincourt on Jan. 3 last.

This morning's despatches from Ottawa indicated that all hope for executive clemency, all hope that the death sentence would be commuted to imprisonment for life had vanished. The Minister of Justice, and the Dominion Cabinet, having carefully considered the case, had decided not to interfere with the sentences pronounced by Mr. Justice Riddell.

Had Given Up Hope

Rev. Canon Farncomb, who has been Blythe's spiritual adviser since the trial, said this morning that for several days the condemned man had entertained little or no hope of escape from the judicial death. When Canon Farncomb broke the news to Blythe some time ago, that the authorities at Ottawa had not looked favourably on the application of Mr. T. C. Robinette, K.C., his counsel, for a change in the sentence to life imprisonment, the prisoner received the information quietly.

"Walter Blythe has been in a very devout frame of mind," said Canon Farncomb to-day. "And he takes his terrible situation in a very Christian spirit. He of course fully realizes the enormity of his crime. I believe he is fully penitent. While I do not wish to be understood as condoning the crime at all, I am convinced that up to a certain point this man's general character has been good. It was too much drink and a very violent temper that caused him to commit this terrible deed."

Rev. John Bushell, rector of St. Clement's, has also taken considerable interest in the spiritual welfare of the unfortunate man. There was a solemn hour in Blythe's jail quarters the other morning when the prisoner partook of Holy Communion.

Loves His Children

Ever since he was arrested Blythe has been very much interested in what was being done for his children. There were two of them, and shortly after the trial a relative arrived from England and took them back with him to the Old Land. According to reports and the letters that have arrived for the prisoner, the relatives of both Blythe and his murdered wife are in good circumstances, and the children will be well cared for.

"After they reached England," said Governor Chambers, of the jail, this morning, "Blythe semed to be quite satisfied that they would be well treated. The folks on both sides of the house seem to be doing their best for the children—and that seemed to satisfy Blythe. He reads every letter that comes from the Old Country—and there are many of them—with the greatest interest. As a prisoner, his conduct has been exemplary. He has not shown any unpleasantness of spirit, has been very agreeable, and has taken everything in the most philosophical way, although I think he has had some hope right up to date that the sentence would be commuted."

For His Mother's Sake

Blythe's hope for executive clemency, according to Governor Chambers, was not so much on his own account as that of his family. For the sake of his aged mother and sisters in the Old Country, as well as his children, he hoped that he would not go to eternity by way of the gallows. Since he was sentenced he frequently got letters from his mother, who gave him every encouragement to hope, as she did herself, that something would happen to stay the hand of the executioner. So far as Blythe was concerned for himself, he seemed to think that death was preferable to a life of bitter remorse in Kingston Penitentiary.

Blythe will not hear a hammer tap in connection with the preparations for his death on Thursday morning. On the upper floor of the jail there is a permanent "death-room" which is reserved for hangings. All that has to be done is to open a door or two and the room is ready. The work of J. R. Radcliffe, the official hangman, in making his preparations is simple. The death room is situated only a few steps from the room—a hospital ward—which the condemned man now occupies. He will know nothing about his place of death till he walks a few steps and into the room on the morning of the execution.

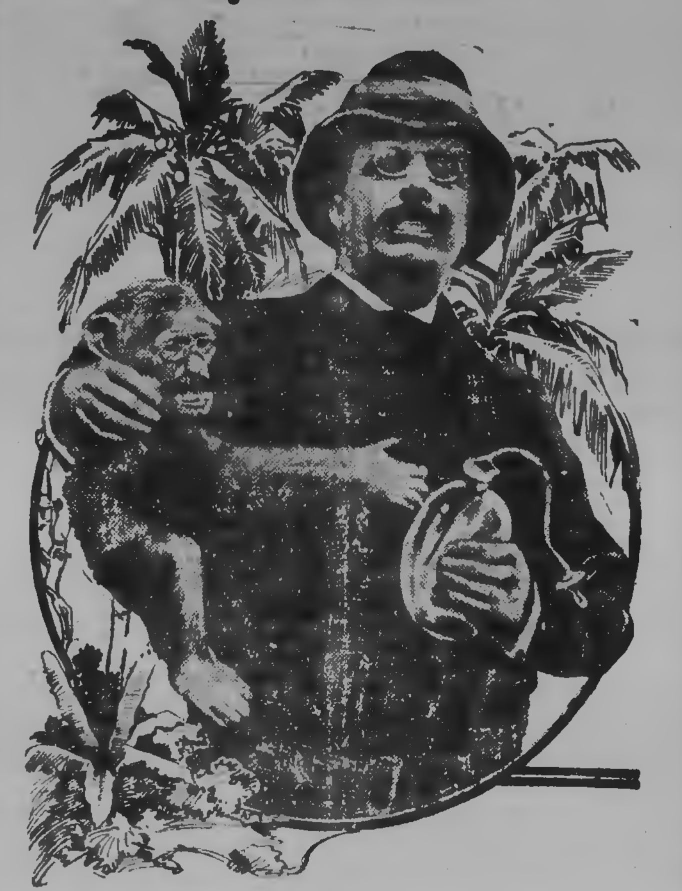
Talks to Death Watch

Guards Stegmans, Reed, and Rogers are the men who have comprised the death watch in Blythe's room since his sentence. The prisoner talks to them freely on the current events of the day. He sleeps and eats well. He has no visitors except his spiritual advisers and Governor Chambers.

Only the necessary officials will be present at the execution on Thursday.

TEDDY ROOSEVELT HAS NOW CAPTURED A FORBEAR OF MAN

Wonderful Anthropological Treasure Spared From the Game Bag Will be Brought Home Alive From Africa.



Col. Roosevelt and the Pithecanthropsis Alalus.
—Lenseless Photograph by Powwow, Nairobi.

Mombasa, May 12.—(Very Special.)—Again has a runner come breathlessly from Nairobi with a startling dispatch, announcing that now Colonel Roosevelt has secured what is evidently the only surviving specimen of the true ancestor of man, the Pithecanthropis Alalus. It was captured by Colonel Roosevelt himself.

The Pithecanthropis Alalus was flushed in the high grass of the Wallolah plateau. Just as one of his party was drawing a bead on it to shoot it as a species of dwarf anthropoid ape, it gave the high sign to Colonel Roosevelt, who quickly dismounted from his poncho and snatched it up in time to save its live. It is still in its infancy, age estimated at about 11 years. No trace of its parents was discovered, they evidently having fallen prey to lions, and it was living on cocoanut milk and cocoanut butter. Colonel Roosevelt immediately adopted it and is rearing it with giraffe's milk from a bottle, with the intention of taking it home alive to the Smithsonian Institution. The creature is very intelligent, and has a simplified language of its own which its captor is rapidly learning, and very likely he will soon be able to elicit from it something of its history. The natives have affectionately named it Bwana Gink or "Little Master."

Bwana Gink, needless to state, has become a general favourite in camp. Colonel Roosevelt promises to write $760,000 worth of books about it, and feels that this find alone amply repays him for braving the dangers of interior Africa.

Car Load Brought From Toronto for Local Demand.

A car load of cattle arrived in the city to-day, having been brought down from Toronto. They are for Messrs. A. Gordon, G. Thompson and Chas. Thompson. There were about thirty cattle in the car and will be divided among the three buyers to be prepared for retail sales.

BAD LEG FOR 60 YEARS

Zam-Buk Works a Complete Cure.

Mrs. J. Minett, of 192 Thurbers Avenue, Providence, Rhode Island, has been cured by Zam-Buk of a bad leg, which had defied all remedies for sixty long years. She says: "When a child of eight I was bitten on the leg by a dog. A doctor cauterised the place, but it never healed up soundly, and I have suffered from an ulcerated leg for over sixty years. This occurred in England, and many English doctors tried in vain to heal the sore. At one time I was an in-patient at the East Suffolk Hospital for a long period, and for three years I was in and out of hospitals. I was continually in pain, and the sore would not heal, but continued to discharge. Twelve months ago I came out here to my daughter, and during the voyage I had to keep my bed. The ship's doctor examined my leg, and gave me a plaster, which I had to take off again, as it made the pain so intense. When I reached my daughter's house, she sent for a medical man, who said nothing could do it any good, and although I tried other American doctors, they did me no good. They said my leg would never be well.

"One day my youngest daughter brought home a box of Zam-Buk, and induced me to try it. With the first application I seemed to find ease, and further treatment with Zam-Buk did me so much good that I sent for a proper supply. I kept on with the Zam-Buk treatment, and soon saw that the wound was getting better. The discharge was reduced, and the pain was eased. I persevered with the Zam-Buk, and, to cut a long story short, it effected a cure. It is marvellous to think that after suffering for sixty years Zam-Buk has been able to make my leg perfectly sound."

Zam-Buk is a combination of power and purity. Purely herbal, it is superior to all known remedies for chronic sores and wounds, eczema, salt-rheum, ringworm, eruptions, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, skin diseases. It also cures piles. All Druggists and stores sell at 50c a box, or post-free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Three boxes for $1.25.

SOME PRIVATE INQUIRIES.

By MARIE DELOGOFF.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

There were compliments, congratulations and showers of rice and slippers when Livingston Perry and Marjory Manners were wed. Some people actually said it was a love match and that the honeymoon would last for years. Only some people said that, however. Others knew it to be simply a fashionable wedding.

Not that the turtledoves do not coo when a fashionable wedding takes place, but they must coo very gently and cut it as short as possible. It is not good form for Cupid to frolic in high society.

In this case the skeptical ones soon had reason to say, "I told you so!" There were various little things that brought it about, but the principal one was that after three months of extremely conventional politeness Mr. and Mrs. Perry discovered that they were not suited to each other.

Both were full of opinion, and both were stubborn. Both were extravagant. Both felt the loss of personal freedom. Feeling thus, it was easy to find fault, and fault finding soon led to more serious things.

They declared an armed truce for another three months, and then each decided that separation was inevitable. Still, husbands and wives cannot very well separate without some reasonable excuse to give to their friends.

Marjory couldn't think of one, and Livingston was in the same predicament. Both bent their minds to the problem, and, as they had plenty of time, they did it faithfully.

On the same day and almost at the same hour a bright thought struck this unhappy couple simultaneously. It was to hire somebody to investigate and find the valid excuses that were needed.

They had known each other for a year and a half previous to marriage, but, after all, that was nothing. Formality had prevented each one from even knowing what relatives the other had, outside of Marjory's matchmaking mamma and Livingston's rather indifferent father. Her hand had been kissed, a declaration of love made, the engagement announced, and that was the whole story of their lovemaking.

There must have been something in the life of each to give the other the advantage sought for. The way to discover it was through a private inquiry agency. "Inquiries made, the past investigated; secret, honorable, experienced agents, terms reasonable."

"Why, of course," thought Marjory.

"Easiest thing in the world," thought Livingston. It didn't so happen that both husband and wife called for the services of the same agency, but the investigators began to work at about the same time. And while they were investigating there was a continuation of the truce between husband and wife.

It was the calm before the storm. They were so placid and pliable that at times, many times during each day, they seemed to have reached the point where they appreciated each other.

Some of their dearest friends almost feared that the couple wouldn't separate after all, and thus another choice subject for brilliant conversation would be lost to society.

After about four weeks an official looking letter was delivered to the husband at his club. He had been waiting for just such a letter, and he was so anxious to see its contents that he glanced only carelessly at the superscription.

His first surprise came a moment later, when he saw the words "Dear Madam" swimming before his eyes. Now, he was not a "dear madam." Yet he went right on and read that private inquiry report to the end. He couldn't help it, though he felt that he was base.

"We find that your husband was known to have a very bad temper as far back as twenty years ago," wrote the investigator. "People who know him best are a unit in agreeing that he is very selfish by nature and hopelessly tenacious of his opinions.

"His overbearing disposition," continued the report, "has alienated many friends and several relatives. In one instance, during his bachelorhood days, he nearly threw a dish at his cook and would have inflicted serious injury had he made good his threat, as there is every reason to believe he might have done.

"We have not been able to prove, but still strongly suspect, that you are not the first nor even the second nor third woman he has loved or pretended to love.

"We have it from his ex-valet that he arose several times at midnight to wander around his room or smoke cigarettes, as if greatly worried. This should be a strong point for a good lawyer to work up."

Livingston Perry felt rather flat when he had read so far. It struck him that, as seen by others, he was hardly what could be called an exciting character.

"Smokes fifteen cent cigars, drinks the most expensive wines, pays his club dues, owes no cab hire and unfortunately has not even a tailor bill over six months old. Still, this might be shown to prove extravagance," was the next thrilling remark. Then he whistled. He had at last struck an exciting paragraph. It was: "A few weeks ago he was seen in his club poring earnestly over a work on toxicology. We are sure that in this discovery we have furnished you with a terribly strong point. Your lawyer will know at once what to do with this."

Livingston Perry did not know whether to laugh or swear when he remembered that he had tried to read the book to oblige the author, his college friend Dr. Grayson.

"We have, dear madam," ended the report, "made our investigation in the most thorough manner and have not a doubt that a court can be found that will give you a divorce on the grounds we have furnished if they are properly elaborated. Your check for $300 will greatly oblige."

Livingston Perry thrust the precious document into his pocket and decided that he was indignant and justly incensed. But as he walked slowly homeward he felt an emotion that, curiously enough, was much more sorrow than anger—sorrow that Marjory should wish to get rid of him. He quite forgot for the moment that he wished to get rid of her.

The official envelope that was left at the house the very same day was plainly directed to Mr. Livingston Perry. Now, Marjory Perry had no excuse whatever to open it, for she saw plainly how it was addressed. But she opened it nevertheless, and to her surprise she felt a jealous pang.

She hesitated over it for half an hour, but finally decided to inspect the contents. It began "Dear Sir." She caught her breath as she read on:

"We have made a faithful investigation of your wife's career for the last ten years and have got one of the finest cases we ever worked up. Nothing whatever is lacking to make it complete. We can furnish you with proofs of her flirtation at the age of fifteen with a schoolfellow.

"At sixteen she is said to have been infatuated with her music teacher. At seventeen she announced that she would marry a foreign title or never wed, as we can prove by witnesses.

"From her eighteenth year," continued the report, "she has been noted for extravagances. Some of her hats cost $100, and she bought one last week that cost $75.

"As early as her sixth year her terrible temper appeared. At that age she is known to have threatened to set fire to the house. It can be shown by three different servants that she once tried to send the butler to buy a gun, although she was barely seven then."

The investigator then leaped lightly from her childhood to her girlhood again and wrote: "She has repeatedly been heard to say that no husband could rule her and that she would have her way about things or make things red hot for a mile square. She has also been heard to say that all bullying husbands should be drowned.

"When you first came on the scene and began paying your addresses to her she pronounced you a ninny. The butler will make affidavit to this. It was her mother that brought about the match. She told the daughter that she could run away afterward if she didn't like your antics. Her maid will make two or more affidavits to this.

"We have also learned the important fact that she looked a long while into a gunsmith's window only a month ago, and there was a dangerous gleam in her eyes as she turned away. This point has a value that any keen lawyer will see at once. Any judge will charge the jury that this is a highly significant circumstance."

When Mrs. Perry had reached the end of this report she spread it out on the table without trying to conceal it, though it was not hers and had been feloniously opened by her. To her surprise and indignation one, two, three tears rolled down on her pretty little nose.

"Marjory, what does this mean?" demanded Livingston as he entered the room and placed the letter in her hands.

"And, Livingston, what does this mean?" she demanded as she pointed to the sheets on the table.

Five minutes were spent in exchanging and reading reports.

Then Livingston Perry said: "Marjory, I'm going out to horsewhip the scoundrel who slandered you this way! I owe it to myself as your husband!"

"I wish I were a man as big and strong as you," responded Marjory.

"Why?" demanded Mr. Perry, taken aback.

"Because—because," said she, "I'd like to do the same thing to the man who made the report about you."

And people are still commenting on how long that honeymoon has lasted and saying that neither could have done better by looking the whole world over.

Sore Chest
Croup

You often have pains in the muscles, in the side, the back, the neck, or chest. If the inflammation is severe the pain will be intense.

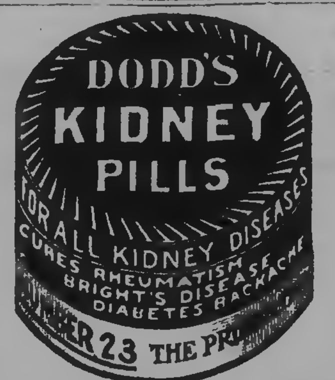
Nothing so quickly cures local inflammation, so thoroughly drives out pain, as "Nerviline," which is without an equal for penetrating, soothing, pain-relieving power.

Nerviline simply can't fail to cure, because it's a perfect antidote for all the pains and aches that invade the family.

Nerviline

"For ten years we have used Polson's Nerviline in our home," writes Mrs. M. E. Graves of Freeport. "For hard croupy colds there is nothing better. In case of a chill, sudden cold, or neuralgia, Nerviline cures before the trouble gets serious. I have used Nerviline for chronic rheumatism and lame back and find it a wonderful remedy."

All dealers sell Nerviline in large 25c bottles. Get it to-day.



Webster's Presence of Mind.

Once when Daniel Webster was addressing a political meeting in Faneuil hall the standing multitude within the hall, pressed by those who were endeavoring to enter from without, began to sway to and fro, a solid mass of human bodies, as helpless to counteract the movement as if Faneuil hall were being rocked by an earthquake. The orator was in the midst of a stirring appeal, urging the necessity of individual exertion and unflinching patriotism to avert the dangers that threatened the political party whose principles he espoused, when he perceived the terrible swaying of the packed assembly and the imminent danger that might ensue. Webster stopped short in the middle of a sentence, advanced to the edge of the platform, extended his arm in an authoritative attitude and, in a stentorian voice of command, cried out, "Let each man stand firm!" The effect was instantaneous. Each man stood firm, the great, heaving mass of humanity regained its equilibrium, and, save the long breath of relief that filled the air, perfect stillness ensued. "That," exclaimed the great orator, "is what we call self government!"

CUT OUT CARES.

Take Life Easy Is Pleasant Advice to the Tired.

Priscilla Prim says that it is by the process of elimination that sensible housekeepers manage to get their work done and have a little time for leisure and to do outside things. In the olden days, when a woman's life was entirely centered in her home, she could afford perhaps to spend undue time in nonessentials. Today she cannot.

She now has other interests besides home affairs, and, while the family and home should not be neglected in the least, yet neither should outside matters, which develop, broaden and give her an entire change of thought.

It may be the club or lectures or other things—it doesn't matter so much what, so long as she is getting relaxation and something worth while. The only normal way for a housekeeper to have leisure is by elimination.

Perhaps all your life you have felt it was necessary to have a dessert every night for dinner. Drop it occasionally and take the time you would have fussed with a pie or pudding and read or do something you like.

It isn't necessary, either, to dust behind every picture and on top of every high piece of furniture just at stated intervals in each week. Forget about it once in awhile.

If you are going to have a little luncheon, eliminate all unnecessary courses and change of dishes—things that would tire you out and keep you from enjoying it. Your guests will respect and admire you for your courage.

There are women so cut and dried in the habits of housecleaning that when the calendar points to such a date in the spring, no matter if it's below zero or excessively hot for the season, the house is ripped up from garret to cellar and the ordeal commences. It's a great thing to be elastic in these matters and be able to eliminate some cares.

Too Tough.

The Hobo—Lady, I didn't ask you for work. What I wanted was something to eat.—Cleveland Leader.

Still a Question.

"Did she marry for love?"

"That's what everybody is wondering. Her husband is charming in manner, wealthy, has no bad habits and moves in the best society."—Judge.

What Woman Forgets.

Woman sometimes forgets—

That there are two sides to every question.

That the "school for scandal" is not a recognized educational institution which fits her for the "school of life."

That there are two essentials to her success—tact and charm of manner.

That nerves are not conducive to a Vere de Vere manner.

That children are just as susceptible to "mothering" as dogs.

That the reason they are less contented than men is that women magnify their troubles and men pass over the small things. They are content to "let the little world pass by."

That the hope of every woman lies in one of two directions—to make or take a name for herself.

That her personality, her little airs and graces, her faults and foibles are all instrumental in shaping the manners of men and that she has only herself to blame or praise for their attitude toward her.

That it is good for her to close her eyes to all externals at least once every day and soar quite away into oblivion, then to come back and be happy for the rest of the hours.

Traveling Milk Bottles.

When traveling with an infant the question of warm milk is a serious one, as cold milk often causes colic. Place a flannel cloth in the bottom and around the sides of a satchel or covered basket. On this lay a hot water bag full of hot water. Fill the required number of nursing bottles with milk or prepared food. Cork the bottles and put a fresh nipple on each one over the cork. These corks must not be forgotten at feeding time. Lay the bottles on the bag and cover with another bag filled with hot water. Place a thick flannel over this, and the milk will keep warm all day. If too hot, a bottle may be cooled at the water cooler in the train or taken out of the satchel an hour before using. If this method is followed there will be no sour nipples and no disagreeable washing, as each bottle may be laid aside after being used.

Bathroom Fittings.

Among the improvements in bathroom fittings is a shaving brush holder so devised that the bristles may hang downward when the brush is in position. In this way the water drains away instead of remaining at the root of the bristles. It is in nickel, so is easily kept clean, and the price is 30 cents.

Another dainty furnishing for the bathroom is a pear shaped handle of white celluloid fitted with a snap hook for attaching to the chain. The usual handle is wooden. It is claimed that the celluloid is more sanitary. The price of it is 35 cents.

Wicker Sewing Table.

One of the prettiest sewing tables seen among the novelties this season is of green and white wicker, carried out exactly like a suit case.

Opened it reveals one-third of the basket fitted with cretonne, forming bags into which sewing may be dropped, and above are shelves, some of which have a row of tall pins or spikes for holding spools of cotton. It is most compact and so light that it can be easily carried if necessary. The price is $6.50.

A High Priced Cent.

Several silver dollars of comparatively recent date brought good prices at the recent coin sale held at the Elder auction rooms. One dated 1852 brought $72. Another silver dollar struck in 1851 brought $67, and still another of 1839 brought $61.

Quite a number of early cents sold for high prices, a cent dated 1811 bringing $22.50.

Of the gold coins a North Carolina five dollar piece brought $33.50, and a Mormon five dollar piece of 1849 sold for $25.—New York World.

Phonographs In China.

American phonograph companies do a big business in China. The most famous Chinese bands and palace singers are engaged to make records. They are brought from all parts of the empire to the three record making centers—Pekin, Shanghai and Hongkong. Here the apparatus for making the master records is set up and the recording done under the direction of an expert. A record popular in the north of China seldom is popular in the south.

T LAPLANDERS.

This Dy Race to Be Transplanted to Labrador.

A c nencement has just been made most remarkable and long talked enterprise. This is nothing less n the transplanting of the Lapp rom Lapland, where they are a dy race, to Labrador, where it is hop that they will flourish and in- cre ether these hopes will be justi- or not remains to be seen. Sim- experiments in the past have sel- been wholly successful, and some e resulted disastrously.

he Doukhobors, for instance, who 1899 were transported to the num- r of 8,000 or 9,000 from their homes southern Russia to the Canadian northwest, were for a time in dire straits. They also behaved erratically, marching naked through the snow and abandoning their flocks and herds to the wolves. They are now, however, reported to be settling down and doing better.

On the other hand, the attempt made some eighty years ago to transplant the Roskolnikis of the Don country to a new home that was supposed to have been found for them in eastern Turkestan resulted in one of the most ghastly tragedies recorded in the annals of history. The huge caravan lost its way in the terrible desert of Gobi and was never heard of again, the probability being that hunger and thirst, combined with the attacks of nomad robbers, were responsible for the deaths of the entire party.

Equally dreadful was the fate that befell the 10,000 Jutlanders transplanted to the east coast of Greenland by Queen Margaret of Sweden. At first they flourished exceedingly. Villages were founded, churches and schools were built, and a bishop was appointed.

Then one year the ice pack broke loose from the remote northern seas and came to a standstill along the coast opposite the settlements in a belt fifty miles broad.

All communication with the open sea was then cut off. The settlers were unable to obtain supplies, and in the end they perished down to the very last man.—Pearson's Weekly.

Money Hidden by Prisoners.

"I would venture it as a safe assertion that there is every cent of $2,500 in cash hidden within the walls of this prison," said Colonel E. F. Mudd, the warden.

He then explained that the convicts hide the money in all sorts of places, even to burying it in the yard. They will hide it in cracks in their cells and in the shops, frequently changing it so that the other convicts cannot get hold of it. A convict complained to the warden recently that he had $100 hidden under the window sill in one of the shops and that it had been stolen from him by another convict. This shows how much money gets into the prison from time to time and is not discovered when the general search is made. The convicts are not allowed to have money in their possession, although they may keep it with the prison clerk. When the search was made the other day an old negro was forced to cough up 85 cents, which he had in pennies and nickels concealed in his mouth.—Frankfort Cor. Louisville Courier-Journal.

Crazy Railway Methods.

How the Chinese are wasting British capital in building the Shanghai-Hankow-Ningpo railway is told by the Pekin correspondent of the London Times, who says: "The railway presents every possible defect. Bridges are unsafe. Rails are of native manufacture, of obsolete section, spiked into soft wood sleepers from Manchuria and Japan. Sleepers are wrongly laid. Wrongly ballasted, their life in this soil is little more than one year. Eight different patterns of rolling stock are in use. Where there was difficulty in bridging a stream the Chinese built the bridge on dry land and then dug a canal and diverted the waterway under the bridge, both the entrance to the diversion and the exit from it being literally at right angles to the natural direction of the stream."

COMPBELL'S CONTROVERSIES.

Canadian Author Has a Particular Fondness For Being In Hot Water.

That Mr. William Wilfred Campbell has started a purity hunt after the novelists of the day need surprise no one who knows the man. It is no ordinary small fry like the Canadian lady who wrote "Three Weeks" that he has sharpened his pen for. It is such robust personages as George Meredith and William de Morgan that he is after. What he thinks about Fielding, the first of great English novelists, he does not reveal, but his view would probably be too hot for publication. Mr. Campbell is nothing if not courageous, as he has proved on more than one occasion. He comes from the Lake Huron region, and at one time when he was a clergyman station at St. Stephen, N.B., he published a book of lyrics descriptive of the lake country of his boyhood that attracted general attention. Finding that he could not accept the orthodox view of Christianity he courageously resigned his charge and attempted to make a livelihood through literature. Friends in the late Conservative administration, recognizing his undoubted talent, obtained for him a post in the civil service at Ottawa, whither he went to join the rather numerous band of poets who reside at the capital.

Shortly afterward The Toronto Globe decided to run a weekly symposium on literary themes, by Mr. Campbell the late Archibald Lampman, and Duncan Campbell Scott. One Saturday Mr. Campbell gave expression to what some would deem harmless views on the position of the cross as a religious symbol, stating that it had been so regarded in the East long before the crucifixion. At once the fat was in the fire. The old Presbyterian subscribers took it to mean that The Globe was spreading heresy. The editor had not understood it that way but the letters kept pouring in and finally the journal was forced to editorially repudiate Mr. Campbell's statements. That was an end to the weekly symposium.

Perhaps, however, the most exciting controversy that Mr. Campbell ever precipitated was when he attempted to denounce Bliss Carman as a plagiarist. Carman was then, and is still, the doyen of the Canadian colony in New York. At great length Mr. Campbell went through Carman's work with a fine tooth comb and accused him of stealing most of his best lines, principally from Matthew Arnold. Some of his analogies were not very clear and it is probable that no poet who ever published a line could stand such a "gruelling" process and escape the charge of plagiarism. At once the New York colony fell upon William Wilfred and rent him hip and thigh, suggesting that he look to his own house. Campbell's reply was that the New York colony were a gang of log-rollers anyway. The controversy raged until the newspapers were obliged to close their columns to it because it was fatiguing the general public.

It will be seen that Mr. Campbell is a man of radical views. A few years ago he startled a few University professors in a lecture up at 'Varsity by asserting that the Roman civilization had done nothing for humanity. It is probable that Meredith and the others who have the honor to keep him company in Mr. Campbell's bad books will survive the assault for a little while. And the question that occurs to one is, "If Mr. Campbell does not like novels why does he read them?"

A Charivari.

Last week Joseph Thompson, weighmaster, a respected resident of Shelburne and a good citizen, got married, which he had a perfect right to do. It was his own business, and it was not necessary for him to consult any one in the matter. On Monday evening of this week a number of young men in town and a contingent from the country decided on giving Mr. and Mrs. Thompson an old-fashioned charivari. The crowd marched boldly to Mr. Thompson's residence, where they fired off guns and threw pieces of bricks and snowballs through the windows, and smashed eleven large panes of glass. It is said Mr Thompson gave the leaders of the gang $5. They then dispersed and fought among themselves as a windup. As the transgressors carried torches and lit a tar barrel in front of the house Mr. Thompson had no trouble in securing the names of over twenty-five of the lawbreakers. It is now up to them to get busy and pay for the damages done before an action is entered against them. Mr. Thompson would like to know where the constables engaged by the town were on that occasion, and why they allowed his property to be destroyed.—Shelburne Free Press.

Praised Miss Johnson.

In connection with the death of Algernon Charles Swinburne his lifelong friendship for the critic Theodore Watts-Dunton has been recorded. Watts-Dunton was the literary critic of The London Athenaeum and devoted a great deal of attention to poetry. It is pleasing to recall that to at least one Canadian writer he was very kind—to wit, Miss E. Pauline Johnson. Years ago a lyric, descriptive of our Canadian out-of-doors, which appeared in a fugitive publication came accidentally before his eye. Appended was a statement that the writer was of Indian lineage. He became intensely interested, and wrote in high praise of the lyrical beauty and warmth of the poem, adding that Miss Johnson was "the most interesting woman-poet now writing in the English tongue." Such praise coming from the friend and mentor of Swinburne was praise indeed.

EASTER CARD PARTY.

Decorations and Prizes Should Be Springlike and Pretty.

An Easter card party should be springlike and pretty. If you can afford it have the house decorated with spring flowers—daisies, jonquils and daffodils. The score cards should be ornamented with little bells suggestive of Easter bells, and have the partners find each other by matching the cards to see whose ribbons are alike. The bells may be fastened to the cards with ribbon bows. During the card playing have mineral water, salted nuts and candies passed and have the refreshments later. The prizes may be suggestive of Easter.

Give a pretty growing lily in an attractive jardiniere for one, a low dish filled with growing pansies for another, an Easter hare filled with candies for a third, and several little chicks for the gentleman's booby prize, or a live rabbit if you think it will be all right. It will cause much fun and laughter. Have the favors on the refreshment table at each corner or pass them after serving if you do not have a sit down supper. An amusing idea is to pass to the gentlemen a big Jack Horner pie—you can make it yourself by covering a bread pan with crape papers—and another to the ladies. In the pies have all kinds of Easter conceits—china and papier mache rabbits and hares, eggs filled with candies, etc.—and let them draw them with ribbons that tie the presents with long ends that come through slits in the paper. Serve for refreshment chicken consomme in cups, egg salad and creamed chicken breasts, ices in the forms of eggs and cakes and coffee in demitasses.

THE JAPANESE FERN.

For Successful Growing the Plant Needs Plenty of Moisture.

Many persons who admire the Japanese fern balls which do so well for some home gardeners and fail utterly for others know little of the character of the plant, thousands of which are imported each season.

The scientific name is Davallia bullata, but it is a species of the harefoot fern that is a native to Japan. It has a creeping root which runs along the surface of the ground, and from it small, fibrous roots are thrown out as feeders.

These creeping root stocks, or rhizomes, are gathered by the Japanese and closely fastened over frames filled with sphagnum moss, which retains moisture in abundance when the plants are growing.

The Japanese love to grow these ferns in all sorts of odd shapes, such as houses, animals, wreaths, pagodas, boats and figures, but few except the balls are imported.

The chief reason for failure to have the ferns green is that they are not given enough moisture and are kept in too hot rooms. It is well to immerse the baskets occasionally in a tub of tepid water and never let them dry out.

Canada and a National Anthem.

Every now and then some one tries to write a national anthem for Canada; but, in the opinion of the Victoria Colonist, every effort is a failure. The Colonist adds: "Canada is not old enough to have evolved a national anthem. The sentiment of the people has not clustered around any particular person, event or idea. When the average rhymester sits down to write a Canadian song he tries to include everything in it, from the herring fleet of Nova Scotia to the miners of the Klondike, and the result is a species of directory. By and by something may happen, or we may do something as a people, or some one may think of something that will catch the popular idea."

Chicago and Mail Orders.

Chicago claims the distinction of being the mail order center of the universe, and some recent figures from the postoffice there would seem to establish the right to the honor. One of the biggest mail order houses recently broke all postal records by mailing 6,000,000 catalogues, each weighing two ounces, the whole weighing 450 tons. The sacks holding the catalogues weighed sixty-five tons. If these pamphlets had been sent on one train thirty cars would have been filled.

"HEADACHE, WEAKNESS, HEART TROUBLE"

"I Suffered With for Years—Pe-ru-na Cured Me Entirely."

Miss Albina Chauvin, No. 50 Rue Agnes, St. Henri, Montreal, Can., writes:

"I consider Peruna better than any other remedy, as it cured me when nothing else could. I suffered for years and years with heart trouble, headache and weakness. I never expected to find anything to cure me. I saw one day, in "La Presse," that Peruna was excellent and I tried it. One bottle produced a change in me and if the price had been $100 a bottle I would have paid it gladly. I have taken six bottles and am entirely cured. Please accept my thanks and best wishes for your Peruna."

"Please Accept My Thanks and Best Wishes For Your PE-RU-NA."

ALBINA CHAUVIN

Many cases of heart trouble are caused by reflex disturbances.

Derangements of the stomach and liver produce symptoms of heart trouble.

Catarrh of the stomach is a very frequent cause of sympathetic heart disease.

Palpitation, shortness of breath and bloating after m s are the most prominent symptoms.

Such a condition of the stomach is also liable to produce headaches of the worst sort.

Medicines that palliate the symptoms will never lead to a cure.

It is the effect which Peruna has upon the stomach, healing the mucous membranes and restoring the natural function of the stomach, that causes Peruna to bring such prompt relief.

THE EGYPTIANS' SECRET.

The Egyptians of Pharoah's time were a wonderful people. The pyramids, for instance, put our modern buildings to shame. Where such huge blocks of stone were carved—how they were moved and put in place—are mysteries to modern minds.

The Egyptians were skilled physicians, too. We know that they used fruit juices in treating many diseases. Some years ago, a physician in Ottawa discovered a method of combining the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, by which the most remarkable results have been obtained.

Whether "Fruit-a-tives" (these combined fruit juices in tablet form) are a re-discovery of the prescriptions of the ancient Egyptians, will probably never be known.

Certainly, the ancients never had a more effective remedy than "Fruit-a-tives" for all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowel Troubles. "Fruit-a-tives" are sold by dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c—or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Her Beautiful Rival.

By LUCY MEDFORD.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

"You got awfully sunburned today, Jim," said Jim Lancaster's nice little wife as she handed him his cup.

"I guess I have. My hat blew off just before quitting time, and I wouldn't come down from the rocks for it." He leaned back in his chair contentedly. "Mrs. Holman has company," he announced.

"Has she? Who?" Nan looked eager.

"You can't guess." He was teasing her.

"No, I can't. I'm not good at guessing. Tell me, do!"

"Well, it's Mrs. Abner McClure."

Nan sank back in her chair.

"You mean Molly Stewart?" she asked.

Jim nodded.

"When did she come?" Her voice had changed.

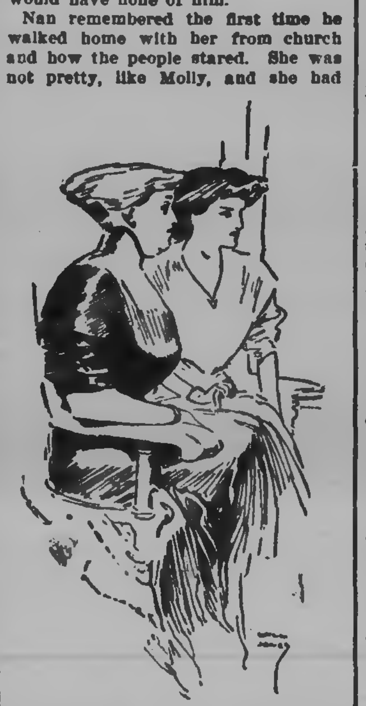
"This morning. She brought a trunk, so I judge she is going to stay quite a spell."

Nan caught her breath and looked at her husband, eating his supper and apparently all unconscious of the strife which he had suddenly renewed in her heart. Long ago, very long ago in the days when she had only loved Jim and never expected to be his wife, Molly Stewart had been his sweetheart.

She was a rare beauty, one of those to whom Nature has given and given until it seems she can add not one thing more. And she had ways. No other girl could charm as she could, or dance or sing or laugh.

She had never known what came between him and Molly. He said he had not asked Molly to marry him, and she had hinted that he had and that she would have none of him.

Nan remembered the first time he walked home with her from church and how the people stared. She was not pretty, like Molly, and she had not Molly's good clothes or Molly's way of wearing them. She was just a sweet, dainty looking girl, with a heart capable of love and happiness. Jim had always been her ideal, her hero. When he turned from Molly Stewart to her she could not understand it.



"JUST AS MUCH IN LOVE WITH YOU AS EVER, ISN'T HE?"

Molly had married Abner McClure soon afterward and had gone away with him. She had now been away seven years, and still people remembered and spoke of her young beauty, which had reached its transcendent point on her wedding day. Now of a sudden she had come back. The news oppressed Nan. She did not know why.

"I didn't tell you, did I, that Abner McClure's dead?" Jim asked later in the evening.

"No. Is he?" Nan returned in what she tried to make a careless tone. Then she rose and went into the next room for something.

A little while afterward he said: "You needn't put up any luncheon for me tomorrow. I'm going to eat at Holman's. There's some timber there that I promised to look at long ago, and I guess I'll do it tomorrow."

The hot day subdued itself into a hot night. Jim slept heavily, but Nan could not. She lay looking out of the window at a certain star which struggled wearily to free itself from a cobweb of cloud in which it had become entangled. Varied and very bitter were her thoughts.

Molly had come back a widow. Nan could see her in her black things, with her vivid face and coppery hair. It was said Abner McClure had money, and Molly always would dress well anyway.

Nan had heard of what a beautiful widow may do, and tomorrow Jim, her Jim, was going back to Holman's, straight into the old net that had enmeshed him. She clinched her hands in the darkness and prayed.

Toward morning she fell asleep. At 6 Jim aroused her. He had been up an hour.

"I let you sleep as long as I could," he said. "Don't fuss over the breakfast. Just make me a cup of coffee and give me some bread and butter. I'm in a hurry today, dear."

Nan got breakfast. She did not eat any herself. She kissed Jim passively at the door.

"What's the matter? Aren't you feeling well this morning, Nan?" he asked anxiously.

Nan watched him up the hill. Then she lay down on the lounge and had her cry out. Noon came. She made some tea and drank it. It braced her up wonderfully. Indeed, she felt almost feverish. It came to her that she would not endure it a moment longer. Jim was there, and he was her husband. She would go there too.

After noon a breeze sprang up which relieved the hot day. Nan dressed carefully in a white lawn with pinkish spots, a dress her husband admired. She loosened her hair about her face and let it drop a little lower toward the nape of her neck.

She felt that she was girding herself for battle, and she meant to have no weak spots in her armor. Then she locked the door, called Shep to follow her and, raising her umbrella above her bare head, set forth.

The walk put heart into her. She felt ready for anything as she crossed the last field before the Holman house.

Mrs. Holman greeted her with a kiss.

"Why, Nan, how do you do? I'm right glad to see you. I suppose you know Molly McClure's here? Jim told you? Yes. Well, sit right down in this chair. We'll stay on the veranda, for it's cooler than in the house." She stepped to the door. "Molly!" she called. "She'll be down in a minute. She's most through dressing," she said, coming back to Nan. "How nice you look in that dress! You're one of the few women I ever knew who could wear pink and keep their complexion in it."

That did Nan good. She was cool and her heart had steadied down when a great rustling of skirts on the stairs announced Mrs. McClure. Nan rose to meet her.

"Why, Nan Farrell—Nan Lancaster, I should say!" Molly cried, embracing her ecstatically. "I am perfectly delighted to see you!"

She held Nan off and looked at her. And Nan looked at Molly. In that moment her doubts, her long fear, her jealousy, blew away like a pinch of thistledown in a strong breeze. She found herself sitting in her chair again with Molly beside her talking volubly. It was all over.

"You haven't changed a bit, Nan," Molly was saying. "I asked Jim if you had yesterday, and he wouldn't say. He said I should judge for myself. What have you done to keep your complexion like that, and your figure?"

Nan laughed. She could laugh now. Molly's young glory had faded sadly. Her wonderful hair was thin and dull, her cheeks coarse; her teeth had unmistakably been replaced; her double chin rested on her full bosom, and she wheezed as she talked.

Presently Jim came striding up with Mr. Holman. From afar he waved his hand toward his wife.

"Just as much in love with you as ever, isn't he?" Molly said, seeing him. She disposed her handsome skirt carefully, so as best to display its cut and finish. But Nan did not notice. She was thinking of Jim. Molly had been an illusion, and the illusion was dispelled.

PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR

Hissed His Own Play.

Baron de Frenilly, who figured prominently in France during the days of "the terror," must surely have been the only author who ever hissed his own play. This was entitled "Les Trois Tantes" and was produced at the Vaudeville theater, Paris.

"Before half of the first scene had been played I said to myself, 'Oh, but this is execrable!' The public was of the same opinion and, while my friends kept applauding, hissed with all its strength. I ended by heartily hissing myself, for the further the play progressed the more convinced I was that the people were right.

"On leaving the theater a friend who was not in the secret of the authorship said to me, 'What a piece of extravagance, what a wretched farce!' 'Detestable,' I replied, and whatever he said I went one better. 'It is said to be by Comte de Segur,' he continued. 'No,' rejoined I; 'it was written by me.' The poor man was fixed with amazement."—From "Baron de Frenilly's Reminiscences."

A Peasant Boy Philosopher.

Very remarkable was the boyhood of the celebrated James Ferguson, who was born at Keith, in Banffshire, Scotland, in 1710. His father, who was a day laborer, taught him to read and write and sent him to school for three months at Keith. At the age of eight he constructed a clock of wood that kept remarkably good time and afterward made a wooden watch with a whalebone spring. He began to earn his first money by cleaning and mending clocks in the neighborhood. His astronomical pursuits commenced soon afterward, his father having sent him to a neighboring farmer, who employed him in watching his sheep. While thus occupied he amused himself at night by watching the stars and during the day in making models. In 1747 he published his book on the phenomena of the harvest moon, and this was followed by other astronomical works. His books received the approval of the Royal society, before which he frequently appeared.

No Trouble About That.

The druggist's clerk handed him his porous plaster.

"You want to read the directions carefully," he said, "so as to know what to do when you're ready to take it off."

"I never take 'em off," answered Mr. Wipedunks. "I always wear the things till they drop off."—San Francisco Chronicle.

YOU CAN CURE CATARRH

J. H. Taylor, 54 Bond St., Toronto, Breathed Hyomei and Cured a Long-Standing Case of Chronic Catarrh That Defied All Other Remedies, Also Toronto and New York Specialists

Without taking a drop of medicine into the stomach, J. H. Taylor, 54 Bond Street, Toronto, tells how the distressing troubles of Catarrh were overcome by simply inhaling Hyomei air. It's the history of tens of thousands similar cases on record, proving that Hyomei can be depended upon to cure Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Croup. It has no equal for any distress of the breathing organs.

Mr. Taylor says: "Some years ago while on a hunting trip in Northern Canada, I contracted a severe cold that settled in my head and finally affected my throat. It rapidly developed into catarrh and caused a miserable throat weakness. My head would become clogged during the night and there was a catarrhal dropping from the nose into the throat. Many days I had been unable to breathe other than through my mouth, and the constant hawking and spitting was almost unbearable. I had been treated by the best throat specialists here and in New York, but nothing benefitted my condition. I obtained Hyomei from a druggist and soon found relief, the throat dropping ceased and my head began to clear. I continued with Hyomei for six weeks and after that time I was well in every detail. There has been no return of the trouble since, and I feel grateful in speaking well of Hyomei, as it cured me when all else failed."

END OF THE WORLD.

Speculations of Scientists as to How It Will Come About.

The terrible catastrophe in Italy which caused the inhabitants of the ill fated city of Messina to believe that the end of the world had come is only a foretaste on a small scale of what many eminent scientists believe will be the end of the world. That eternal problem of how the world will end is, in the opinion of many, a matter of scientific investigation, and it is curious that the majority believe that the earth will open up and fly to pieces in the most gigantic earthquake ever known, an earthquake that will wipe all life from the globe before the actual destruction of the earth is complete.

The late Grant Allen firmly believed that the world would end by the crust of the earth eventually giving way beneath the colossal weight above it. And Abbe Dupin, one of the greatest scientists of France, believes that doomsday will begin with a war that will envelop the greatest nations in Europe, this being followed by a plague the like of which has never been known, culminating with an earthquake that will practically shake the world to pieces.

Mr. H. G. Wells, whose scientific prophecies are well known, is, however, of a different opinion. The world will end, he declares, by its becoming entirely frozen over. It is a well known fact that every year more ice accumulates around the poles. In short, many millions of tons of ice in excess of that of the year previous settle about the earth's extremities each year, and, in Mr. Wells' opinion, this will gradually extend until the whole world is frozen over and every living thing is thus destroyed.

Several scientists are of opinion that we shall perish by fire and this old world of ours with us. Nikola Tesla, the great American, is convinced that, the atmosphere of the world being so fully charged with electricity, the result will be a gigantic explosion by spontaneous combustion, when the world will be entirely encircled with flame, which in the space of a few seconds will destroy all life.

Two of the world's greatest scientists firmly aver that the end of the world will be brought about by astronomical conditions. Take Professor Marienberg, the noted Austrian student. In his opinion the earth will fly from its orbit and come in contact with one of the other planets that may chance to be in a direct line. The earth, being comparatively small, will, of course, get the worst of it and split into fragments at the collision. But of course directly the world swerved from the orbit all living things would die and such an earthquake take place as would completely put the Italian catastrophe in the shade.

Just as interesting is the prognostication of M. Camille Flammarion, one of the greatest living scientists. After many years of study he has arrived at the conclusion that the world will in the twenty-fifth century come across the path of the comet Biela, which crossed our line a few years ago. On this occasion, however, a collision will take place, and, Biela being infinitely greater than the earth, a shock may be expected which, he calculates, will be 865 times greater than the shock caused by the collision between two trains, each traveling at sixty-five miles an hour.—Cassell's Journal.

No "White Rhinoceros."

Speaking of carnivora and the other fauna of Africa, let me say for the benefit of the American writers, lecturers and artists who wish to pretend to a knowledge of African animal life that there are no yaks, alligators, kangaroos, turkeys, bears or tigers in Africa outside of a circus or a zoological garden. There are two species of rhinoceros, the bicornis or prehensile lipped and the simus or square mouthed rhino. The latter, although almost as black as its relative, is called the white rhinoceros on account of a blue, slaty tinge in its skin. To be exact, there is no such thing as a white rhinoceros.—Captain Duquesne, Famous Boer Hunter, in Hampton's Magazine.

TWENTY DROWNED.

Launch Goes Down In Ohio River With 30 Persons Aboard.

Pittsburg, May 12.—Twenty persons are missing and all of them are believed to have been drowned when a gasoline launch sank in the middle of the Ohio River near Schoenville, four miles below Pittsburg, last night. Of the thirty occupants of the boat only ten are known to have escaped. The missing are: Albert Graham, pilot and part owner of the boat; George Thompson, formerly of Altoona, Pa.; Booth O'Neill, James Conner, Walter Low, Thomas Kennedy, Wm. Guthrie, Henry Vogelet, Dennis Murphy, Tony Bole, —— Ruskey, Louis Goldstein, Wm. Davis, Jos. Lyle, Wm. Burke, two brothers named Botts and three others whose names have not been learned.

All of the men were employes of the Pressed Steel Co. at the McKeesport plant. The men had been working overtime until 8 o'clock, and left the works to cross the river in the launch about fifteen minutes later. The boat is said to have been intended for not over twenty persons, and sank because it was overweighted.

LINER IS DAMAGED.

Siberian and Scotia Collide In Fog Off Halifax.

Halifax, May 12.—With her stem split and her bow bulwarks smashed, the steamer Scotia, Capt. Reid, arrived in port yesterday from eastern shore ports. The Scotia was feeling her way in through the dense fog, when off Meagher's Beach the Allan Liner Siberian, bound to Philadelphia, loomed up out of the fog. The distance was too short for either steamer to change her course, and the result was a collision, the Scotia coming out second best, having her bow smashed and her forward bulwarks broken. The damage was all above the water-line, and the Scotia had no trouble in reaching her dock. The Siberian got clear away without sustaining any damage, and proceeded on her way to Philadelphia. Capt. Reid of the Scotia said he was coming in very slowly, just picking out his course, when the Siberian appeared out of the fog, bearing straight across his bow. He had no time to change his course before the steamers came together.

Germany Secures Coveted Portrait.

London, May 12.—At last the mystery of the disposition of Holbein's famous Queen Christina, which the Duke of Norfolk sold for $300,000, has been solved.

Dr. Bode, director of the Berlin Museum, has captured the prize.

The duke has notified the municipal authorities of Sheffield that he intends to transfer to them the only park in the city. It covers 60 acres, and is worth $5,000 an acre. This donation just offstands the price the duke received for his Holbein.

In Heterodox Pulpit.

New York, May 12.—A special to The Tribune from New Haven, says: Rev. H. Herbert Henson, Canon of Westminster and rector of St. Margaret's, London, left Yale Monday for Boston, to sail hurriedly to England, to face charges preferred by Bishop Gore of the Church of England, who accuses him of having violated ecclesiastical law by occupying a nonconformist pulpit in a workingman's institute in Birmingham, England.

No More Land Grants.

Ottawa, May 12.—At the evening session, during consideration of the estimates of the Department of the Interior, Hon. Mr. Oliver stated that there was a growing prejudice against land grants, and he thought the grant to the South African veterans should be the last.

An Agent's Error.

Trainmen In Session.

Columbus, Ohio, May 12.—The ninth biennial conference of the National Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen opened in Memorial Hall yesterday. There has been a gain of about 2,000 members during the last two years. The membership is now 101,000. The most important question to come up at the convention is the proposed increase of insurance rates.

Skin Diseases.

A diseased or disfigured skin will always leave its stamp on the mind of the individual. Many people suffering from disfiguring skin diseases avoid society and lose all pride in their personal appearance. When the skin breaks out in eruptions and sores it is due entirely to an impure condition of the blood.

In all such cases Burdock Blood Bitters will quickly purify the blood and drive all the impurities out of the system.

ITCHING RASH CURED.

Mrs. J. J. Magee, Jr., Kinmount, Ont., writes: "In the spring of 1906 I was troubled with a Rash that broke out all over me. It was the worst on my face and head, had a dry, scaly top, and when I would get warm it would become very itchy. I tried the doctor's medicine but it did me no good, so I then got one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters and before it was all used the Rash was entirely gone."

SORES ON FACE.

Mrs. Harvey Barkhouse, Gold River, N.S., writes: "I was greatly troubled with Sores on my face and finally became so bad I had to go to the doctor about it, but he could do nothing to help me.

"I thought about Burdock Blood Bitters and decided to try a bottle. I cannot recommend B.B.B. enough, as I had not taken all the bottle before my face was cured."

Chief Campeau Testifies.

Montreal, May 12.—In the civic enquiry yesterday, Chief of Police Campeau testified that the C.P.R. Stock Yards Hotel was not removed from Capt. Beignet's district because he persisted in reporting it for selling on Sunday, but because the annexation of Rosemount necessitated the division of two districts. Capt. Beignet had retired from the force because he had been advised to do so by the chief on account of scandalous charges made against him. He had retired on a pension instead of going on trial before the police committee.

Milton Hersey, analyst, testified that he would not like to place a good horse in the cells of the new No. 12 station on account of the dampness and lack of ventilation.

Roy, charged before the Criminal Court at St. Johns with offering to the Government false reports of the Bank of St. Johns, where he was president, opened yesterday. All were overruled.

Evidence will be offered to-day by officers of the Finance Department.

HOW HE GOT POSTED.

How a Newspaperman Primed Himself Up for an Interview With Booth.

Hearing of the birthday celebration of General Booth a member of The Star staff became reminiscent.

"About twenty years ago," he said, "I was a reporter on The Globe, and General Booth was visiting Canada—for the first time, I think—and The Globe wanted him interviewed. As he was to arrive in Toronto rather late at night I was instructed to go to Hamilton and interview him on his way to Toronto.

"Here I became vividly impressed with the truth that to interview a man successfully you must know something about his favorite topic. On the subject of Salvation Army work I was in a state of woeful ignorance. Luckily there was a little time for preparation. It was Saturday. The interview was to be on Monday night. Walking pensively up Yonge street, I stopped at Britnell's bookstore, and was idly turning over a lot of volumes marked at some phenomenally cheap price, when my eye caught the title on a paper-bound book, 'Life and Work of General Booth.' Not to buy it was to fly in the face of Providence. I took it home and spent several hours in turning the whole book into interrogative form. Wherever the author—I think it was the General himself—made a statement I turned it into a question. In this way I prepared an examiner's brief of about fifty questions.

"The General was most polite and willing to give infomation. Whenever I asked a question he gave me the answer in the book. He appeared to be astonished at my knowledge of the working of the Salvation Army, not being aware that the knowledge was only one day old. At the meeting that evening he jocularly remarked that he had little to say because a reporter had met him at Hamilton and pumped him dry."—Toronto Star.

The Geodetic Survey.

In many parts of Ontario will be seen slight frame towers not unlike in form the steel towers of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. These are geodetic towers, but very few people ever stop to enquire what they are for. It was explained by Prof. Biggar. The object of the geodetic survey is to get the exact location and the altitude of every foot of ground in Ontario, and some day in the whole of Canada. A point is established. In a recent debate in the House of Commons it was said that McGill University, Montreal, is the most exactly located point on the continent of America. The Dominion Observatory surveyors, to make a map of Ontario, first fix a point, say at Coteau, and erect a frame tower thereon. With their instruments they sweep the country for twenty miles in each direction, mark the altitude of every hill and knoll, and the depth of every depression. When the section of the country has been thus explored they proceed to a distant point within range of the first tower and erect another tower, allowing the farmer upon whose land the first tower is erected to pull it down and use the timber; and from the second observation point they cover another range of country, marking the features of the landscape. And so on, till the whole country has been surveyed. These flimsy structures, it was explained are more stable for the purpose of accurate observation than the tops of the most solidly-constructed buildings. Whereas a ten-storey concrete and iron sky-scraper will "bend" with the wind and oscillate with its own weight, the observation towers of light wood, so cheap that they are abandoned when the work of the surveyors is completed, are built on such scientific lines they will stand perfectly erect against the wind, the centre of the instrument remaining exactly over the point marked on terra firma.

A fine photo of a complete eclipse of the sun is in the possession of the Dominion astronomer at Ottawa in the Observatory. It was the phenomenon which occurred two or three years ago. Several investigators from the Dominion Observatory journeyed to Labrador to get photographs of this eclipse, and spent weeks perfecting arrangements, but, alas, on the fateful morning, the sky was overcast by clouds, and the observers had to return home without so much as a glimpse of what was taking place above them. Fortunately, however, in Spain, the weather conditions were favorable for an unobstructed view and some splendid photographs were obtained, one of which is in Ottawa. The fruitless trip to Labrador only illustrates what obstacles must be overcome in pursuing scientific studies. Somebody will ask: Is it worth while for Canada to expend money in this way, when other investigators can find out all there is to know, and we will get the benefit of their labors? The answer is, that Canada must take her place in the world of science, and not hang back while others are doing the work.

The Port of St. John.

The development of the Port of St. John, N.B., goes steadily forward, and the volume of trade this year is in excess of the best previous record. Mr. Louis Coste, C.E., chief engineer of the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, has, writes a correspondent, been in the city to consult with the Common Council regarding the construction of additional steamship berths south of Sand Point. Mr. Coste tells the council that the expenditure for the development of terminal facilities on the west side and in Courtenay Bay as well may run into a total of $10,000,000 during the next few years.

London to Calcutta by Wire.

It is now possible to send by wire a telegraphic message from London to Calcutta, a distance of [illegible] miles, without any intermediate retransmissions. That is the remarkable feat which has been achieved after a series of elaborate experiments extending over many months by the Indo-European Telegraph company and the Indo-European telegraph department of the Indian government.

Cabinet Resigns.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—After a conference between the Premier and the Emperor, which continued until nine o'clock yesterday morning, M. Stolypin returned to St. Petersburg from Tsarskoe-Selo an hour later, bringing the text of an imperial rescript, expressing the confidence of the monarch in the Ministers and his gratitude for their services and explaining the motives leading to the rejection of the naval staff bill. The rescript will be published in the official gazette yesterday.

The crisis was solved in a manner peculiarly Russian. The Emperor refused to sign the bill providing for a naval staff, because he considered it an invasion of his prerogative, and he declined also to accept the resignation of the Cabinet, ordering the Ministers to remain at their posts.

The latter after reiterating their representations of the impossibility of rendering useful services under these conditions decided that their duty, according to Russian precedents was to continue in their present offices.

Victory for Morris.

St. John's, Nfld., May 12.—Practically complete returns from the voting in Saturday's election, show that the party headed by Sir Edward Morris has won an overwhelming victory and that Premier Morris will have 26 members of the Legislature as against ten supporters of Sir Robert Bond, the former head of the Government.

In the voting last November each side elected eighteen members, a situation which resulted in Saturday's balloting.

Premier Morris and his two colleagues carried the west division of St. John's. Bond and two supporters were elected in Twillingate.

Wilkins Is Moderator.

Toronto, May 12.—Rev. W. T. Wilkins of Trenton was elected moderator of the Presbyterian Synod of Toronto and Kingston at the meeting in St. James Square Church last night. Dr. J. A. Turnbull of the West Presbyterian Church nominated him and Rev. James Buchanan of Dundalk, seconded.

Dr. J. B. Fraser of Annan was nominated by Rev. Finley Matheson of Chatsworth, but he asked to have his name withdrawn, saying he desired the nominee to be appointed unanimously.

$58,000 for Two Legs.

New York, May 12.—Fifty-eight thousand dollars for the loss of both legs was the verdict awarded in the Supreme Court yesterday to Miss Addie Hunt, a trained nurse, against the Long Island Railroad Co. Some time ago she obtained a verdict of $25,000, but the court set it aside as inadequate and ordered a new trial. The railroad company will appeal.

Ambushed In Africa.

Lagos, British West Africa, May 12.—Lieut. D. A. VanBrennen, assistant resident administrator of a district in Northern Nigeria, three other Englishmen and 36 native police were ambushed recently by natives at a point fifty miles northwest of Zungeru. The lieutenant and 12 of the policemen were killed. A British force has been despatched.

Captain Hains Has Been Convicted By The Jury

Army Officer Found Guilty of Manslaughter in the First Degree—New Trial Has Been Asked For—Jury Not Carefully Watched, Says Counsel for the Defence.

Flushing, N.Y., May 12.—Captain Peter C. Hains, jr., U.S.A., to-day faces a prison term of from one to twenty years. Despite all the testimony submitted by the defence as tending to show insanity, he was convicted late yesterday of manslaughter in the first degree for killing Wm. E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht Club last August.

Quickly following the young officer's conviction his counsel announced that they would produce affidavits to show that the jury had not been properly guarded during the trial, and upon this allegation will urge that a new trial be granted. These affidavits will be submitted on Monday, the time set for passing sentence.

CAPTAIN HAINS.

Daniel O'Reilly, of counsel for the defence, said: "There was no evidence in this case to warrant a verdict of manslaughter. It should either have been murder in the first degree or acquittal on the ground of insanity. The jurors were permitted to roam about the country in an automobile and go right to the verge of the scene of the homicide, which is clearly against the law. We will have affidavits to prove that such is the case, and also that the jurors were permitted to leave the jurisdiction of the county and have been on Government property at Fort Totten, all of which is ground for setting aside the verdict."

The jury were out three hours and evidently followed Judge Garretson's ruling in his charge that "One may be guilty of manslaughter in the first degree who kills on the impulse of the moment in the heat of passion, or because of a peculiar set of circumstances which confront him." Speaking of the domestic relations of the defendant, Justice Garretson said the truth of the allegations against Mrs. Hains and Annis did not have to be shown. It was sufficient, in considering the defendant's mental condition, if he had believed them to have existed.

Four ballots were taken. On the first three ballots six voted for murder in the first degree and six for acquittal on the ground of insanity.

Sultan Plows Furrow.

Constantinople, May 12.—Mehemed V. ended his "coronation day" by plowing a furrow in the lawn at Dolmabagtache Palace, symbolically at least, by holding the low handles for a fraction of a minute, while two horses dragged it a few yards. In carrying out the ancient test, Mehemed V. showed himself to be sound of body and fit to bear the physical burdens of the empire.

It had been a day both of fulfillment of ancient customs and of the breaking of them. Christians were for the first time admitted to the small mosque attached to Ayoub Mosque and allowed to see the ceremony of girding the sword of Osman upon the Sultan. Among thirty persons present were Bucknam Pasha, a Canadian, and Woods Pasha, an Englishman, both of whom are in the Turkish service.

Another Strike In France Postal Employees Go Out

Chamber of Commerce Believes Automobile Service Will Prevent the Paralyzing of Business—Six Thousand Men Have Gone Out.

Paris, May 12.—The Chamber of Deputies after a stormy session of four hours yesterday adjourned the debate on the interpellation on the postal situation until to-day.

The response of the postal employes was quick and decisive. Within half an hour the federal committee had issued an order for a general strike, and the railway mail clerks walked out in a body.

An hour later, a meeting of 6,000 postal employes at the Hippodrome took up the gage of battle and unanimously voted to strike.

There was no great enthusiasm shown, but determination and resolution to force the hands of the Government were apparent.

"The Government is playing for time; we must not be caught napping," was the spirit of the meeting as expressed by Pauren, a dismissed postman, and one of the most active organizers of the movement.

During the debate in the Chamber, Mm. Sembat and Willm, Socialists, defended the position of the strikers, affirming their right to organize themselves into a syndicate, as the only way of redressing their grievances, and charging the Government with failure to keep its promises at the conclusion of the previous strike, especially with regard to the retirement of M. Simyan, Under Secretary of Posts and Telegraphs.

M. Deschanel considered the crisis very grave. He laid the responsibility for the present situation largely on "parliamentarism," which, he said, was working in a vicious circle, and he considered that the only remedy would be the introduction of real civil service, based on merit, to end favoritism and the spoils system.

The general opinion to-day is that the Government, with the aid of soldiers and the co-operation of the commercial bodies, will be able to maintain crippled services. The main danger is that violence may occur and that passions may be aroused by the appearance on the scene of the general federation of labor.

The Paris Chamber of Commerce last night sent out a letter to all Chambers of Commerce in France with full instructions to a scheme for a business letter service, which is to be carried out, in the event of the railroads failing, by means of automobiles. The prefects of the various departments have already arranged for these.

After A Hard Fight Hon. Mr. Graham's Bill Stands Over

Ottawa, May 12.—Hon. Geo. P. Graham's amendment to the Railway Act, introduced yesterday, the most vital part of which is legislation regarding railway crossings, occupied the morning and afternoon sittings of the House, but had to be adjourned, and it is just possible that it may not be enacted this session.

These proposals that the speed of trains at level crossings where an accident has occurred be limited to 10 miles an hour until safeguards have been provided, are those of Senator Beique's bill and they encountered some severe criticism, notably from Mr. Lancaster.

There was a lengthy discussion over the priority of the highway or the railway. The clause at first read "existing highway." The word "existing" was struck out. Where the highway existed before the railway, the railway must bear the whole cost, but where the railway was built first, the municipality may have to bear part of the expense.

An important clause provides that railway companies which have filed plans for lands must take possession within two years. Pending cases will not be touched, but where no arbitration has been begun the clause will apply.

The long expected changes in the Insurance Act agreed upon by the sub-committee of the banking and commerce committee were announced yesterday. They include giving the Phoenix Assurance Co. power to carry on fire, life and accident business. Any society benevolent, industrial, or religious, having an assessment insurance system may come within the second part of the act. The clause limiting expenses is struck out. Shareholders must authorize salaries to directors. Sliding scale contracts with agents based on volume of their business are permitted. From the clause respecting assets and investments in Canada by foreign companies there is struck out the words "at least two-thirds in market value of which shall consist of investments in or loans upon Canadian securities."

A number of changes are made in the investment clauses, the general effect being to widen the power. It is provided that no loan shall be made to a company director or officer except on the company's own policy. As to voting by proxy, the provisions apply to every company "other than a life insurance company."

A new sub-section provides that in connection with deferred dividend policies issued after Jan. 1 next, the companies shall, at least, once in five years, ascertain the profits to which such policies are entitled, and pay such to the shareholders. Until distributed, these profits shall be treated as a liability. The circulation in Canada of any estimate of dividends or profits is prohibited.

The participating policyholders will be entitled to at least two-fifths of the directors. The policyholders and shareholders shall name their directors separately. The clause in respect to the distribution of profits is amended so as to provide that profits will include a share of profits arising from the sale of securities. The clause dealing with the impairment of capital is amended to provide that companies may be permitted to calculate till 1915 on the basis of not less than 80 per cent. of unearned premiums.

Amendments providing that a director must hold stock to the value of $2,500, instead of twenty-five shares, as stipulated at present, was accepted, as was an amendment setting forth that a policyholder to vote must have $2,000 insurance.

OFF FOR ENGLAND?

Kinrades Are Traveling to Portland, Maine.

Hamilton, May 12.—The local police claim to have obtained information through Albert Newport that Col. and Mrs. Warburton, mentioned in the Kinrade case, are located at Alexandria, Ind., a town of 8,000 on the line of the Cleveland, Chicago & St. Louis Railway. T. L. Kinrade, the younger daughter, and the two sons are still in Hamilton. Suffragettes New Dodge.

London, May 12.—Shut out of the House of Commons by the police especially selected to circumvent their wiles and ingenuity, the suffragettes yesterday found a new method of getting literature into hands of the nation's legislators.

Chartering a fine steam launch, which they aggressively labeled "Dreadnought," and putting a band on board, a party of suffragettes steamed up the river yesterday afternoon until they reached a point opposite the House of Parliament.

Here the boat stopped and the women attracted the attention of the members on the terrace by singing the Marseillaise.

Then suddenly there was fired from the launch a broadside of rockets. These burst above the terrace and a regular snowstorm of hand bills fluttered down over the watching members.

FIVE YEARS TERM FOR THE BANCROFT MAN WHO RECENTLY STABBED TWO OF HIS NEIGHBOURS

Emmanuel Hannah Sentenced To-day in Belleville—His Wife Was Living With Man He Stabbed, It is Stated—Trial Ended This Morning.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

Examiner Special (2:45 p.m.)

Belleville, May 12.—This morning Emmanuel Hannah, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary on a charge of stabbing Louis Saucier, of Bancroft, and two years for assaulting William Bandry, who interferred in the fight between the two men. It is stated that Hannah's wife was living with Saucier during the absence of her husband in the lumber camps. When Hannah came back this spring, and found the condition of affairs, he sought Saucier and stabbed him severely. Bandry was a witness of the affray and tried to save Saucier and was himself wounded.

The case caused much excitement in Bancroft and the trial has been followed with interest. In some quarters there is considerable sympathy manifested for Hannah, in view of the circumstances of the assault.

COULD NOT CATCH IT.

Lively Chase After Fox at Roller Rink Last Evening.

There was a large crowd at the Auditorium roller rink last evening, the fox chase attracting a great many young people. At the close of the skating, Prof Genno opened a suit case, and let out a little grey fox, which ran about the rink and tried hard to escape, but was unable to find any opening. Several boys chased the animal around the floor, but were unable to catch it. Each one was given a one-minute trial, separately, and they all went after it, at once.

Prof. Genno announced that the law would prohibit the worrying of dumb animals, and when the youths were unable to catch it at the end of two minutes, he took the fox from the floor.

HEAVY GRAIN TRAFFIC

Opening of Upper Lakes Has Resulted in Rush to Sea Port.

Large quantities of grain have been brought down from Fort William to Midland by the boats since navigation opened, and the Grand Trunk Railway is very busy on this line. In fact on Monday, the rush was so great that several trains had to be sent around by the Allendale route to Toronto, where the main line was joined and the grain sent on to the seaboard.

Not only is the business heavy through the day time on the line through Peterborough, but during the night the trains are steadily keeping up the traffic and the business is as busy as could possibly be expected.

TO DICUSS THE SYSTEM

The Penny Bank Savings Scheme for Schools is Discussed by Supervision Committee—Talk Over The Plan.

NOTHING DEFINITE YET.

The Penny Bank system of saving was discussed last night as a result of the visit of Messrs. McMurchy and Mulholland recently, and their address to Peterborough's leaders in education. The Supervision Committee of the Board of Education was asked to consider the question and this was their first meeting for that purpals.

Mr. John Crane occupied the chair, and others present were, Messrs. L. M. Hayes, K.C., Dr. Morrison, H. R. H. Kenner, A. Mowat, and W. O'Brien. All the members seemed to favour the idea and the workability of the scheme was carefully discussed Nothing definite, however, was decided and it will be taken up at another meeting. It is very probable, however, that about September 1st, the system will be introduced into the Peterborough schools.

The meeting practically took the form of a general talk on the subject. Inspector Mowat has communicated with Ottawa, Galt, Guelph and other towns where the system has been established and nothing further will be done until he present a report.

IS CHOSEN FOR BISLEY

Col. Sergt. Walter H. Moore Receives Notification of His Appointment as Member of Canadian Team To Go To Bisley.

PREVENTED BY BUSINESS.

Examiner Special.

Ottawa, May 12.—Col.-Sergt. Walter H. Moore, of the 57th Regiment, has been selected as a member of the Canadian Bisley team.

In connection with the above an Examiner reporter, in conversation with Mr. Moore to-day learned that he has received the notification of his appointment, but also wired in return that he would be unable to go this year. Mr. Moore had until a month ago, fully intended to have gone if he had been chosen, but since that time he has taken up a business which demands his close attention. It is, therefore, almost a regret to him that he has been unable to accept the place on the Bisley team, one of the most distinguished honours that is offered Canadian marksmen.

Colour-Sergeant Moore was a member of the Canadian Bisley team in the year 1905, when he gave a creditable exhibition of his skill at the butts.

His ability was also shown at the last competition at Ottawa, when it was almost understood that he would be selected to go to England. He stated to-day that this would be a particularly good year to make the trip on account of the extra competitions and the jubilee features. He has not only won distinction for himself in being chosen, but he has also kept the name of the 57th Regiment before the Canadian public.

PARIS IN STATE OF SEIGE AS RESULT OF STRIKE

Examiner Special (2:45 p.m.)

Paris, May 12.—Paris to-day resembles a city in a state of siege. Troops are in possession of the Central Post and Telegraph Stations, and squads of infantrymen are posted around every branch office, while the streets are being patroled by the mounted Republican Guards. All this is to protect the postal employees, who are willing to work in spite of the strike declarations, for the strike is not very serious, few besides the railway mail clerks having gone out. The leaders, however, express themselves as confident that the strike will spread rapidly and eventually tie up the whole government machinery.

Rev. Father Galvin Appointed To Bobcaygeon And Galway

Word has been received of the appointment of Rev. Father Galvin, as parish priest of Bobcaygeon, to succeed Rev. Father O'Leary, who has been transferred to Bracebridge. The appointment has been made by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor. Rev. Father Galvin has been one of the staff of the Cathedral since his ordination, and has also been in charge of the parish at Keene. He has made many friends since his entry to the priesthood, and he will be greatly missed. He has been a curate and his zeal, earnestness, and ability has been recognized. He is a native of Ennismore, and his friends will be pleased to learn of his advancement. Rev. Father O'Leary is also of Peterborough.

Steamer Otonabee Will Be Ready For The Water By The 24th Of May

The steamers of the Otonabee Navigation Company's fleet will soon be all in the water and resuming the business of trafficing on the Midland waterways. The Monarch is already doing service. Her run is between Peterborough and Rice Lake. She was the first of the larger vessels launched this season. A gang of men are now at work on two of the other boats at the East City docks. The Water Lily will be ready for work this week and it is expected that she will make her first trip on Friday. The Lily navigates from the upper lakes to Peterborough, and last year's schedule will be followed in practically every respect. The Company have not yet announced their schedule for this summer, but it is certain that the Lily will continue to serve the Kawartha Lakes' public.

The Otonabee will not likely make her appearance until the 24th of May. She is now undergoing treatment at the hands of a number of painters, and will come out fit and fresh in a bright new raiment to handle her regular trips and also for the picnic season. It is not expected that the Company will have any other boats stationed at Peterborough this summer as this fleet ably handles the business.

Said To Have Placed Ties On The Track To Try And Wreck Train

Detective Scott, of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, was in the city to-day, having been brought here on official business. A young lad residing in the South end of the city threw a stone the other day through a window in a G. T. R. coach, and Mr. Scott came here with the intention of prosecuting him, but the matter was settled satisfactorily out of court, the parents of the boy paying for the damage incurred.

Detective Scott, in conversation with the Examiner this morning, said that he recently had a tramp arrested at Stayner near Barrie for placing four ties on the track in an endeavour to wreck a train. The same fellow had, in the same day, been put off a freight train while attempting to steal a ride. He comes up for sentence at Barrie on Friday.

Mrs. Cook and Little Ruth and Helen, Who Await Dr. Cook's Return in Brooklyn.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, Who Has Been Gone Three Years in a Single-Handed Attempt to Reach the North Pole.

Brooklyn, May 12—On the walls of a pretty Brooklyn flat hangs the picture of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, now on his way to the North pole. The wire that holds it is long, so that little Helen, four years old, can look at the picture. Helen was only one year old when her father started.

Dr. Cook's expedition, singlehanded, except for a few Esquimos, depending for food on the game they kill, is probably the most daring of a long line of daring expeditions. Mrs. Cook at home, keeps up her own courage, by keeping fresh in her children's minds the memory and character of their father.

Little Helen often looks at the picture, then runs to the telephone.

"Hello, papa," she says.

"Hello," says the telephone girl. The telephone girl knows all about it.

"When you coming home, papa?" asks little Helen.

"Oh, after a while," says the telephone girl. Little Helen always thinks the telephone girl's voice is that of her father.

There's Ruth, too, who is nine years old.

"I'm studying awfully hard in school, so when papa comes home he'll find me very smart," she says.

Mene, Peary's famous little Esquimo boy, who recently disappeared from New York, was always a welcome guest in the Cook home. With little Helen on his knee, and with Ruth sitting on a stool before him, he has often told them of the wonders of the ice and snow of his cold land and of the long winter nights in the snow huts during the six months of darkness.

Helen's favourite story, invented by Mene and often repeated by him at her request, was about a little white polar bear whose mamma hid it in the snow and went away to get something to eat for it and never came back.

"And so the bear looked up through the hole in the snow at the tiny bright stars," Mene would say, "and kept looking and looking, until it forgot it was hungry. Then it felt warmer and warmer until it went to sleep. And it never woke up again.'

Dr. Cook if he is not already frozen to death in the snow fields of the Northland, should be leaving his winter quarters by now for his last dash to the pole. If he wins, his heroism will gain for him a high place in the list of the immortals.

If he wins—for already his friends, alarmed at his long absence, are fitting out a relief expedition. Dillon Wallace, the conqueror of Labrador, will start in July unless word is received before that time.

For in his last letter out, Dr. Cook said, "I will find the pole or die in the attempt."

Knowing the indomitable character of the man, his friends fear the worst.

Strangely enough, Dr. Cook's best friend does not worry, is not afraid. This friend is his wife, who lives with her two children in Brooklyn. She has supreme confidence in her intrepid husband. She treasures the last letter she got from the frozen North. In it was the sentence:

"If I find the pole, the honour will belong to you and me alone. No one else will be connected with it."

Dr. Cook is a typical ice fighter. His record with Peary and his mastery of Mt. McKinley are well known. But the heroism of a wife, who patiently endures, as has Mrs. Cook, years of waiting is almost incomprehensible.

"Oh, I miss him, of course," she said. "But he is such a real genuine man that I delight in his conquest for the pole. There's no mollycoddle about him. I'd rather have him for a husband and see him only half the time than have a husband with me all the time who doesn't want to do anything in the world but keep his family comfortable.

"He's always quiet and self controlled. He never gets excited. Why, he walked hundreds of miles one time to send me a letter. And there wasn't any lovey-dovey stuff in it at all. But when he wrote in it, "All my world, wife, moves about you and the two children,' it thrilled me more than all the love-letters I had ever heard of because I knew it was true. So when he says, 'I'll find the pole or die,' I know he means it."

Mrs. Cok isn't a woman to be pitied by any means. Many husbands would be delighted to have their wives as proud of them as Mrs. Cook is of her husband.

Dillon Wallace who will head the relief expedition, was with Leonidas Hubbard, jr., in Labrador, when the latter starved to death. Mr. Wallace barely escaped with his life. This was in 1904, but in 1905 Mr. Wallace again covered the Labrador territory and gained a lasting reputation as a brave but careful Polar investigator.

Are Arrested In Latchford On A Charge Of Being Counterfeiters

Latchford, Ont. May 11.—Two Montreal men, posing as prospectors, and giving their names as Adelard Dion and Thomas Gascon, were arrested on Saturday after one of them, it is alleged, had tried to pass a false fifty-cent piece at Duncan McGregor's store.

In the tent they were occupying, on the shore of Bay Lake, were found a number of moulds, dies, blow pipes, crucibles, and a complete equipment of the counterfeiter's trade. They made a desperate struggle to get away from Constables Jerry and Fred Lefebvre, but they were eventually overcome and their goods seized.

Only a small quantity of false coins was found, but the camp fire had been lighted, and one of the crucibles was standing over it when the seizure was made.

The men were fully equipped for a trip up the river, and had in their possession $500 of good money. They account for the possession of the moulds, etc., by stating that they were intending to make tests of different ores up the river at the shaft head.

The spurious coins, while excellent in design, could easily be detected as they rang false and were rough to the touch. One of the men said that the other had a mining schol in Montreal and that they had chummed together for a prospecting trip. He said that he knew that money was being made but he thought it was for a pastime, and that the articles used in its manufacture were brought along for the purpose of making tests.

The men were remanded for trial at North Bay.

WAS THROWN FROM DEMOCRAT TO PAVEMENT IN RUNAWAY YESTERDAY

Team of Mr. John Hanbidge of Otonabee Got Frightened at Street Car on George Street Yesterday Evening.

SOME DAMAGE WAS DONE

A runaway that resulted in a democrat waggon being damaged and the driver thrown from it on to the hard pavement, occurred yesterday evening on George street, shortly after five o'clock. A team of horses belonging to Mr. John Hanbidge of Otonabee, was standing out in front of Mr. P. Connal's grocery store. Mr. Hanbidge was placing some groceries in the back of the vehicle, when a street car passing by scared the animals, and they started away.

Mr. Hanbidge quickly caught the lines, but in turning out, the pole of the democrat snapped in two, giving the driver little control over the spirited animals. They made across the street, and it was thought that they would run into R. J. Soden's store, but they turned and ran towards Simcoe street. At the Dominion Bank the broken pole caught in the street, causing a sudden jolt and Mr. Hanbidge was thrown on his head and shoulders on the hard pavement.

The team did not run any farther, but before Mr. Hanbidge was able to return he had to have the democrat repaired.

MAN AND GIRL FOUND HANGING BY ONE ROPE

Suicide Pact Discovered by Mother of Young Woman—Niether Will Die.

Lima, O., May 13.—That a suicide pact existed between them is the belief of Mrs. William C. Reeves, who found her daughter Bella and Ralph Higginbotham, of Toledo, hanging by the same rope from a rafter in a closet off the bedroom of the girl to-day.

The mother knew nothing of Higginbotham's presence in the house. A clothesline was used and the tragedy had not taken place more than half an hour before the discovery. Neither will die. Higginbotham is an employee of the Craig Shipbuilding Company.

LAUNCH SINKS WITH 20 PEOPLE

Pittsburg, May 12.—Twenty persons are missing and all of them are believed to have been drowned when a gasoline launch sank in the middle of the Ohio River near Schoenville, four miles below Pittsburg, last night. Of the thirty occupants of the boat only ten are known to have escaped. The missing are Albert Graham, pilot and part owner of the boat; George Thompson, formerly of Altoona, Pa.; Booth O'Neill, James Conner, Walter Low, Thomas Kennedy, Wm Guthrie, Henry Vogelei, Dennis Murphy, Tony Bole, —— Ruskey, Louis Goldstein, Wm. Davis, Jos. Lyle, Wm. Burke, two brothers named Botts and three others whose names have not been learned.

All of the men were employees of the Pressed Steel Car Company at the McKeesport plant. The men had been working overtime until 8 o'clock, and left the works to cross the river in the launch about fifteen minutes later. The boat is said to have been intended for not over twenty persons, and sank because it was overweighted.

GOOD FINANCING.

The Dominion supplementary estimates are unusually small this year as we were promised they should be; and the entire estimates for 1909-10 show a retrenchment of nearly 22 millions, as compared with those of last fiscal year. This is prudent financing on the part of Hon. Mr. Fielding, Minister of Finance. He shows a proper sense of his responsibilities. When there was a buoyant revenue, the country requiring national equipment, such as railways, canals, wharves, etc., money was liberally spent to supply these wants. When the financial cold wave came retrenchment was indicated and retrenchment was made—the estimates are cut down about one-fifth. Mr. Fielding is receiving much commendation of his prudent financing from important independent authorities.

DON'T DESIRE THE TRUTH.

The Conservative press adopted the New Brunswick Central Railway Commission's report, endorsing the 'charges'' it made against Hon. Mr. Pugsley, before it was made public. We cannot, therefore, expect it to recognize the complete exculpation its consideration in Parliament afforded. The organs are still asserting their slanders of Mr. Pugsley, even when decency suggests that silence should be observed respecting a matter, sub judice. Hon. Mr. Pugsley has denied the essential findings of the commission, as he is affected, and to prove his bona fides, has entered an action in the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, for an accounting, which, he says, will verify his contentions. This should silence the scandal-mongers, till the decision of the court is given out; but it will not do so. They don't want the truth; they will make the most of their time for fear the decision of the court will deprive them of their ammunition. The Conservatives have avoided the means open to them to secure thorough investigation and revelation of the facts. They declared the "indictment" represented by the report of the commission was well framed, and upon it proceeded to condemn the minister; but, not a single Conservative member of Parliament dared use it as a basis of a formal charge that would bring a thorough investigation. Insinuation, not investigation, is the Conservative Opposition's strong suit. They don't want the truth; they simply want an excuse for slander.

NEW TURKEY.

The enthronement of the new Sultan of Turkey, Mehemed V., promises better conditions. Though the sword of Osman was girded upon him, the spirit of Osman apparently did not go with it. For the first time in Turkish history Christians were admitted to the mosque to see the ceremony of girding on the sword as a feature of the "coronation" ceremonies. This is reasonably taken to be a sign that under Turkey's new rule Christians will be treated like Christians, and not slaughtered and despoiled as they have been in the sanguinary past. The role and rule of Turkey has been a filthy blot upon modern civilization. If the Christian nations of Europe could be held to individual responsibility, they would long since, very properly, have had their heads chopped off for permitting the ghastly rule of the Turk to yield its bitter harvest of outrage and slaughter of Christians for so many centuries. The Christian nations of Europe have, with Turkey as the stake, been throwing diplomatic dice made of the bones of their fellow Christians, and signing pacts with the blood of their fellow Christians, imitating in spirit the role of the persecuting Saul, who held the garments of the slayers of the proto-martyr—one nation restraining another to impotence, while the bloody Turk was perpetrating atrocities and working iniquities that were a disgrace to barabarous humanity, not to speak of civilization and Christianity. It is to be hoped that under the new regime Turkey may fall into line with the march of Christian civilization. If, however, Turkey should relapse into the conditions of the past, and the Christian nations of Europe do not retrench her atrocities, they might well strike the Cross from their escutcheons, for they will not be worthy to wear it—they will be particeps criminis of the unspeakable Turk.

The Puritan hated bear-baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators—Macauley.

ART AND WORK

Ottawa musicians have been forbidden to play in Sunday School orchestras except at the Union rate of pay. Playing in a Sunday School orchestra is not work; it is an act of devotion or worship, and if it is not the orchestra has no place in the Sunday School, and might be cast forth the church or school room, as the Master cast out the money changers and poultry merchants, who defiled the temple with their games of gain. It is taking a rather sordid view of music to regard it as a trade and not a high art. But we are getting used to such things. Sprinting, walking, lacrosse, hockey, baseball, etc., formerly were sports now they are speculations, pursued not for the love of the game but for the love of the gain. The man who follows a sporting game, not from love of it but for the money, is not a sportsman but a labourer for hire. The man who sings or plays the praises of God in a church or Sunday school not from devotional motives but for filthy lucre is not a worshipper but a sort of pseudo-sanctified navvy, who does a certain amount of work for a certain wage. The legitimate members of a church choir or Sunday school orchestra, who give their services and Dei gloriam, do so without hope of earthly reward and in doing so make no little sacrifice and incur great commendation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The British colonists who kicked over paying a little tax on tea in 1773 have vastly degenerated. Now their descendants are taxed to the neck, and take it in the neck as meek as slaves. The early colonists had the British grit that would not permit them to be slaves to even weak Lord North or mad King George the Third.

The London conspiracy case was, says the London Advertiser, a conspiracy between local politicians, and the Attorney-General's department to circumvent the Election Act. It was worse than any offences against that act committed in the election campaign, because it reveals the Attorney-General's department, the centre of the administration of justice, as a party machine.

SPEAK UP, SIR JAMES!

Sir James Whitney has not yet deigned to show the people of Ontario how he figures that that they will save $500,000 the first year that they discard the present school readers and buy his new ones. So far every published attempt to calculate the saving fails to show that it will be even one-twentieth of the Premier's boasted half-million.

Separate school pupils may be left out of the calculation; their school readers are not cheapened in the least. The latest report of the Minister of Eduation shows that there are less than 400,000 pupils enrolled in the public schools of the Province. More than a fourth of these are in the primer—the only book estimated to give only a single year's service. Inspector Hughes, of Toronto, in his evidence before the text-book commission, testified that the average length of service of the second reader was five years; of the third and fourth, each six years. He testified further than in Toronto the average cost per pupil each year in a period of fourteen years (1892 to 1905, inclusive), had been only 10½ cents for readers and all other text-books. At that rate, even if there were 400,000 pupils in the public schools, the total annual bill, not for readers alone, but for them and all other text-books, would have been within $43,000—thousands of dollars less than one-tenth of what Sir James delares that his readers alone will save the people in the first year.

But the maximum total for readers need not be estimated in approximations; it can be stated to a dollar. The publishers were compelled to disclose their lists. Anyone, from returns printed by order of the Legislature, may verify the following statement

Name of Reader.	Average annual number printed from 1894 to 1905 inclusive.	Value at the maximum retail price
First Reader, Part I.	70,004	$ 7,000
First Reader, Part II	51,192	7,678
Second Reader	38,290	7,658
Third Reader	27,244	8,173
Fourth Reader	17,825	7,130
		$37,648

The total annual average at the maximum retail price was less than $40,000, and yet Sir James declares that his books will save over twelve times that amount in the first year.

All the public school readers published in the Province of Ontario for the ten years ending with 1905, if sold at the undiscounted maximum retail price, would have totalled only $342,764, and yet the Premier delares that the new readers will save the people $500,000 in a single year! The pupils now have a partial supply; in spite of the loss caused by discarding these, the people are to save a half-million in the first twelve months!

Did Sir James take the word of one of his educational officials?

Without thiught or care of the responsibility that rests on a First Minister's utterances did he make an extravagant guess?

Or was he guilty of a deliberate whopper?

His declaration certainly maintains his reputation for boldness, but by allowing it to stand for quotation in and beyond the Province, he places his honesty in dire hazard.

The text-book commission did the public a good service, which we have no wish to disparage, but apart form the lustre so reflected upon the Whitney Government it has not yet earned much glory by its management of the school-book problem. More than five years will have elapsed before the new readers are for sale, and these are only five out of the half-hundred or more public and high school text-books that are authorized or approved.

We have not noticed a word of praise for any of the few books that have been changed. What would appear to be one of the latest additions to the list approved by the education department, namely, a text-book on etiquette for training schools, is not getting praise for either cheapness or quality. A teacher writing in the Weekly Sun under the caption, "Lawdy-Daws Instead of School Teachers," reviews it in part, by setting the following examination upon it:

1. Servants: In what particular ways do servants "who are generally ignorant, and often impudent and ill-bred," tax their mistress' temper? Give instructions for servants in respect to the use of the front stairs, telephone, tips, and addressing the children of the family. (See pages 77, 95-97.)

2. Dances: State the maximum number of dances permissible on the first evening of an acquaintance. When is it permissible to use the street cars in going to a dance? (Page 47.)

3. Gloves: Give rules for the wearing of gloves at the card-table. When may a man wear light or pearl gloves? (Page 70.)

4. Matrimony: What is the wisest thing for a girl to do "if she discovers very soon after her marriage that she has made a mistake? On what occasions is the re-performance of the marriage ceremony customary?" (Pages 55, 64.)

5 Indicate briefly the differences in the etiquette of chaperonage for young widows and unmarried girls of the same age. (Page 63.)

6. Pink Teas: State the etiquette in eating olives, cheese, chicken-bone, dates, oranges, candy; also for the use of finger-bowls and toothpicks. (Pages 82-94.)

Those politicians who argued that there were too many subjects and too many text-books, will have difficulty in defending additions on the above.—London Advertiser.

In respect of the criticism of the book on etiquette by a teacher as reproduced above, it may be said that while the criticism of the character of the book may be quite warranted, not so the inference that the subject of etiquette is unworthy of attention. Any system or scheme of education that does not provide for the formation of character and conduce to refinement of soul and culture of mind and taste, courtesy and the graces that heighten the comfort and delight of human intercourse, falls short of a worthy objective. Refinement of character, meaning, likewise, refinement of manner, is in its broad general sense the differentiating quality of savagery and civilization. We should not be content to dwell always in the hayseed belt. This term is used in no spirit of contempt for any class, but to indicate extreme rusticity and is equally applicable to dwellers both in country and city, who scoff at refinement and culture and rub offensively against the sensibilities of the refined. While culture, refinement, courtesy and graceful deportment, and pleasing manners, should be imparted to pupils, there is doubt of the necessity of a text book. If the pupil cannot absorb these qualities from the personality and example of the teacher, a text book can only supply a spurious counterfeit. The teacher should himself or herself be the text book. If a teacher offends by the employment of slang or slipshod English in communication with the pupils under instruction to neutralize the most theoretically perfect teaching of English grammar, he or she destroys its usefulness as a means of imparting correct and refined employment of the English language.

Life is not so short but that there is always room for courtesy.—Emerson.

ONE MEANING OF LOVE

Women in France are supreme. They hold the pursestrings. Often they assist their husbands in their business or profession. Their practical sense and ability are respected. Their beauty and their talent for making themselves attractive are universally admired. A charming, well-dressed woman in Paris is looked at by everybody. Why do the men sit outside the cafes? To see the elegant toilets and the dainty figures and the pretty faces which pass. English women find this unpleasant, but the French woman looks for admiration. She would be disappointed and quite rightly if she did not receive it.

For the greater power of woman is to be beautiful. Yes, that has always been so. For a woman to be forced to work in competition with men is pitiful.

To a French woman it comes natural to be pleasant, amiable, to seek to put people at their ease and make them happy. It comes natural to her to cook and to manage a home. It comes natural to her to watch over her children. And the reason? It is because she in turn has been watched over and taught and cherished by her own mother.

Nn one in France would jest about love. It is sacred, beautiful, the one reality of life. With you Anglo-Saxons it is not taken seriously. It is something to smile at, a "passing madness," you call it. Ah! you poor people, how much you miss!

FRED SIMPSON WILL BE HIS OWN MANAGER HENCEFORTH

Indian Has Cut Loose From Tom Eck and Will Make His Own Contracts After This---Has Gone Home to Rest Up for a Week---May Not Start in Montreal on the Holiday.

Fred Simpson announced to the Examiner yesterday that he was through with Tom Eck, as his contract with the veteran manager expired on Saturday, and henceforth the Indian will be his own manager. He thinks that he is capable of handling his own affairs, and will look after himself in future with none to divide the profits with, as has been the case hitherto.

Asked as to his plans for the future Fred stated that he had nothing very definite in view as yet. He was undecided as to entering the Marathon at Montreal on May 24th, although he may decide later to enter the contest, however, and for the next week at least he will go out of training as far as active work is concerned. He has had a whole lot of running lately, particularly in the last couple of weeks and he is trained down so fine that a week's rest would be of the greatest benefit to him.

Mrs. Simpson accompanied Fred to to New York for Saturday's race, and had a very enjoyable time in the Metropolis.

JIMMY KELLY ARRIVED LAST NIGHT FOR HIS BOUT WITH DALY

Jimmy Kelly arrived from Buffalo last night, looking fit and well for his scrap with Tommy Daly, of Toronto, at the Brock Street Rink to-night. He seems very confident of victory, although he knows that Daly is bad medicine, especially in a ten-round bout, and that he will have to fight all the way if he hopes to stop the Toronto boy, who just now is in the best shape of his career, and is faster and cleverer than ever.

There promises to be a big crowd at the rink to-night, as the enthusiasts are excited over the prospect of a red-hot melee, and look for a battle royal from the first gong. The bout will be fought in three-minute rounds, and will sure be worth seeing, as both are shifty and experienced with any amount of ring wisdom stored away that will need to be revealed to-night.

POSTPONED GAME CAUSED TANGLE FOR THE EXECUTIVE

The executive of the Midland Football League has a tangle on its hands just now, over the game that was to have been played at Marmora on Monday night. The teams were scheduled to play, but the weather was unfit for football, so that when the Havelock team arrived at the grounds in Marmora there was no one there. The Havelock eleven lined up on the field, nothing daunted, and scoring a goal claimed the game, which the referee, who by the way was Ormiston, of Havelock, awarded the game to the boys of the railway town. Both sides have written to Secretary Brummell, Havelock claiming the game and Marmora stating that they will drop out unless the game is played. The Marmora secretary states that there was an agreement between the two teams that if it rained on Monday the game would be off and, therefore, their team did not expect Havelock over for the game.

No one will know his handicap until after the race is over which will add to the interest. There will be a time prize as well as prizes for places.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

The [illegible] was [illegible] Toronto [illegible] yesterday. [illegible] to get [illegible] hits, one of them of the scratchy variety, off Pitcher Manser, of Jersey City, while the Skeeters secured no less than eleven off Dickie Rudolph, and yet the Canucks won by 4 to 2. Three bases on balls in the fourth innings, followed by Wiedy's scratch single, and Mitchell's screaming single to centre scored three runs and another came in the sixth on another free parade, an infield out, and a clean single by Wiedy. The Skeetres scored two in the eighth on clean hitting, but that was the only occasion that they could bunch their hits enough to score. At that Jersey City played errorless ball.

Rochester Won Again.

Rochester used fourteen men, including four pitchers yesterday, and beat Newark 8 to 7 in ten innings. A base on balls, followed by Holly's triple, gave the game to the Bronchos. Snyder, Barger, Beecher and Holmes pitched for Rochester, and Parkins and Frill for Newark. Holmes has pitched 28 innings without a run having been scored against him.

Eleven Innings' Battle.

Buffalo and Baltimore went eleven innings yesterday, the Herd finally winning by 4 to 3. Baltimore led until the eighth, when Buffalo evened up and then won out in the second extra innings when Ryan singled, was sacrificed to second, by Kissinger, and came home on Natresses 'hit to right field. Kissinger, for Buffalo, and Dessau for Newark, were the pitchers.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

In the National League the Chicago Cubs defeated New York 4 to 3, in an exciting game, the Chicagos winning out in the ninth on a wild throw by Bridwell. The Giants' errors were responsible for two scores against them. Three fingered Jack Brown opposed Wiltz on the slab, and the Chicago phenom had the better of the argument, holding the Giants to six hits. The feature of the game was the sensational fielding of Bill O'Hara for New York.

Camnitz Was Good.

Camnitz's fine pitching and the Pirates' great batting gave Pittsburg an easy victory over Philadelphia. The Pirates batted Foxen out of the box in the fourth, and got fourteen hits altogether off him and Vandyke. The Phillies could only bag five, and were beaten 7 to 1.

The Reds Hit Well.

Cincinnati beat Boston 10 to 8 in a slugging match, the Reds getting 11 hits off Ferguson, Dorner and Chappelle, while Boston got thirteen off Ewing and Campbell. The batting of McLean and Beaumont, and a bare-handed catch by Becker off the right field fence, were the features.

Dodgers Again.

Brooklyn nosed out St. Louis in the ninth, winning 2 to 1. With one out Kustus doubled and scored on a timely single by Sebring. McIntyre held the Cardinals to three hits.

The American League.

In the American League Detroit had a merry time at the 1909 pennant raising. They beat the Highlanders by 16 runs to five, making eighteen hits, while New York had seven errors. The Tigers' base running put Stallings' men in the air, and the pitchers followed suit. Willett, for Detroit, did not allow a hit until the sixth. Bill Donovan finished the game for the champs, making his debut for the season. Brockett and Schmidt were the New York pitchers.

Boston Beat Cleveland.

Boston beat Cleveland yesterday, 5 to 1, in easy fashion. Cicotte, who had to retire with a sprained ankle, and Arrelanes, who succeeded him, were very effective on the mound for Boston, while Wright only lasted one innings, and Liebhardt, who followed him, was hit hard. The fielding of Speaker and Hooper was the feature.

Sox Won This One.

Chicago and Washington had a long drawn out and listless battle, which the Sox finally copped by 5 to 3. Chicago made five errors, but they hit Burns, Groom, and Gray hard, while Smith was always fairly effective.

Powell's Fine Pitching.

The excellent pitching of Powell, who held Philadelphia to two hits, gave St. Louis a 3 to 0 victory over the Athletics yesterday. The Browns played errorless ball behind Powell. Coombs pitched for Philadelphia.

PAT POWERS SUES LONGBOAT 'TWILL BE A FIGHT TO A FINISH

Toronto, May 11.—The long-expected has happened—Tommy Longboat and P. T. Powers have hooked up for a fight to the finish, and the battle will come off in Montreal.

Troublesome Tom started the fun before the Marathon Derby by defying Powers. P. T. came up with some soft salve and smoothed the affair over, but when the Hon. T. Longboat laughed in his face and contracted to meet A. Shrubb at Montreal, P. T.'s fighting Irish blood rose, and he waded in. He jolted Tom Saturday with a stiff left in the form of an attachment of his share of the gate receipts, and followed it up with a rattling right hand to the slats—a suit for $1,000 damages.

The writ was issued in Montreal yesterday.

The suit will test the validity of P. T. Power's contract with the Indian.

Not worth the paper it is written upon is what the redskin and his friends allege, and Longboat will fight it to a finish.

This will settle it.

Meanwhile what becomes of Longboat's 20-mile engagement with Shrubb at Scarboro Beach Park May 24?

The Indian, subdued and docile after his defeat at Montreal Saturday, took a run to-day and is determined to get right for the big race.

WILL PLAY IN THE LOCAL TENNIS LEAGUE

Nicholls Oval Tennis Club Elect Their Officers.

The annual meeting of the Nicholls Oval Tennis Club was held at the Y. M. C. A. last night. There was a good attendance of the members and officers were elected and other arrangements made for the season. It was decided to enter the Club in the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association.

The following officers were elected:

President—Mr. D. Eason.

Vice-Pres.—Mr. Leslie Turner.

Secretary-Treasurer—Miss Clarice McClennan.

Executive committee—The officers and Misses Mabel Gillespie and Maud Adams, and Messrs. D. Downie and D. B. MacRae.

The constitution was changed to allow new members to be admitted by the executive committee.

The financial statement of the secretary-treasurer showed the club to be in an excellent condition.

SPORTING SPARKLETS

The St. Peter's and King Edward school teams had a lively and well played game yesterday afternoon, the former winning by 7 to 5, after seven innings of good ball. Both sides did some clever fielding and pitchers did fine work, especially Willie Taylor, who, in spite of the fact that both legs are off above the knee, is a very clever pitcher, and hits well, while he fields his position in a manner that causes surprise from all who have seen him. The batteries were Taylor and Williamson for the King Edward school, and Callaghan and O'Heron for St. Peter's. Mr. W. O'Brien was a satisfactory umpire.

• • •

Chicago, May 11.—Joe Tinker, thespian shortstopper of the world's champion Cubs, scored a tremendous hit in a new role yesterday, winning an unpromptu battle royal with Dick Egan, second baseman of the Cincinnati club, shortly after the curtain descended on the final battle of the series at the West Side Park.

Ringside spectators with one accord decided in favour of Joe after he had beaten his opponent into a state of helplessness for seeking a quarrel. Egan picked the fight and Tinker put on the stage settings with a prodigious wallop to Mr. Egan's jaw, following up the advantage, according to the eyewitnesses, with a graceful exhibition of savate.

Hard names applied during one of the innings when Tinker was retired in a double play at Egan's station precipitated the melee. According to Egan, Tinker called him a liar at the time. After the game, when the players had donned their street clothes, Egan bolted into the Cub training quarters bent on getting Joe's goat. The fighting redleg was informed that Joe had just departed. Egan then set sail for the front of the grounds, hoping to meet his victim. He did, as Joe was crossing the short field, and one word leading to another started the riot.

The battle ended when Tinker climbed on top of Egan's prostrate form and was pulled off only by the united efforts of Chance, Griffith, Larry McLean and members of both teams. Tinker escaped with a few marks, while Egan was badly bruised about the left eye.

ODD WAY TO SAVE MONEY

How a Fortune Was Begun by Young Man Who Persevered in the Plan He Commenced—Saved Coins and Bills of Particular Date.

LOCKED IN LEATHER BAG.

The death some days ago of Douglas Baird, the English multi-millionaire and sportsman, recalls to long memories the interesting personality of the late James Baird, a Scottish ironmaster, the father of half a dozen sterling millionaires. Old James Baird was, indeed, the model on which the Carnegies, the Thaws and other steel founders of Pittsburg subsequently formed themselves. A man of much better social beginnings than any of these, he nevertheless acted from the start of his amazing career as if he had only a pick and shovel to help him on the road to wealth.

That he transmitted his traits to subsequent descendants—with the exception of the late "Abingdon" Baird—is clear enough from the success the Bairds have invariably met with, both here and at home, in commercial careers. A few years ago one of the family told the present writer how he himself had laid the foundation of his pile, a highly respectable one.

It was in the northern wilds of Canada—the heart of the Bush—at a spot called Moose Factory, near the mouth of the Abbitibi River, at the extreme base of Hudson Bay, and round a camp fire that the middle-aged relative of old James Baird gave a party of adventurers his object lesson in the art or science of thrift. It was worthy of Mr. Rockefeller himself. Young Baird started out with a good education, a small sum of money and a talent for the social amenities—so great a talent, indeed, that he found he could not save a cent. He resolved, however, not to be left behind by his contemporaries, and, after much consideration, hit upon the following novel plan for holding his superfluous cash. He possessed a small empty leather bag, the lock of which refused to open, and which was, therefore, practically useless. In the top of this bag the prospective financier made a slit sufficiently large to slip in coins and bills. He began first by collecting coins bearing the date of a certain year, say 1869. Having gathered all the cents, nickels, dimes, quarters, half-dollars, silver dollars, dollar bills, five dollar and ten dollar notes of that year, he passed them into the bag—not, of course, in a lump sum, but just as they came to him. Having collected all he could lay hands upon bearing the date 1869, he began with the year 1870, of which year he accumulated a similar collection, and so on with the years 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874 and perhaps onward.

The writer forgets how many years he continued this novel method of banking, but the young financier assured the party that when he eventually opened the bag it was stuffed with all sorts of currency, copper, silver and paper, even to the verge of bursting. He invariably kept this bag in a larger trunk, and it is a point for both his caution and his reticence that he never placed a penny in a bank, nor told his relatives or friends of the existence of his hoard. At all events, he assured his hearers that on the occasion on which he opened the treasure he found himself in a position to purchase a house, to start a bank account and to take unto himself the lady of his choice—an experiment which may recommend itself to all who are looking for an easy method which shall assure them a fair chance of accumulating the elusive silver coins and the evanescent dollar bills.

Son of Nicaragua's President Married Despite His Father Plays Piano In Cheap Theatre

"Flunked" at College and Was a Failure—Was Deported When About to be Married and Returned to the Pretty Daughter of Old Virginia Family—His Wife is Now Selling Tickets.

ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE.

Washington, May 12th.—Alfonso Zelaya, the President of the Nicaragua's only son, and his lovely young American wife, a descendant of the Lees of Virginia, are two great attractions at a five cent theatre in Ninth street here.

Every morning Mr. and Mrs. Zelaya, who seem devoted to each other, go from their three-room flat to the cheap little amusement house. The wife, who has the dark eyes, the vivid colouring and the little figure of her Spanish mother, seats herself in the high chair back of the ticket window. There she remains, all afternoon and far into the night, selling tickets, while the performance is repeated over and over again and nickel Johnnies admire her from afar.

Husband Plays the Piano

Her husband, heir of the South American, who is a thorn in the State Department's side at the moment, takes his place at the piano; he is the orchestra rolled into one. He plays well; he reels off with equal brilliancy martial music when the soldiers charge in the moving pictures, some idio-pathetic ballad when a songstress sings of her dear old mother in the humble cottage far away, or rag time when a brunk cork ethiop gives a stale cakewalk. Thus the Zelayas support themselves and their baby.

Zelaya's father, a pretty good fighter, wished his son to have a military education, so the United States Government politely invited Alfonso to become a cadet at West Point. He entered the academy six years ago, and after a couple of years "flunked"—failed to pass his examinations. He came to Washington, and while living in a boarding house met the charming Miss Marguerite Baker, as she was known, adopted daughter of D. W. Baker, of the Post Office Department. He fell in love, courted her ardently, she promised to marry him.

Carried Off To Nicaragua

Whether the Nicaraguan Legation had been ordered to watch young Zelaya has never been made known. But just as he was planning happily for his marriage with Miss Baker a detail of policemen from Headquarters here seized him in his boarding-house and he was carried off to Cairo Hotel to await the sailing of the first steamer for South America. Senor Don Luis Corea, then Nicaraguan Minister to this country, vigorously denied that the legation had any part in the young man's capture and deportation.

When young Zelaya reached New Orleans he telegraphed Miss Baker to have faith in him and he woudl return and marry her. He kept his word, they wed in the spring of 1906—since then they have learned, but seemingly not to their sorrow, that the world is not made up of Republics and of well-born and cansiderate Virginians.

A most romantic fact in this courtship and marriage become known months after Zelaya had won his bride. The nshe produced proofs of her descent from the Lee family. Mrs. Zelaya's mother was a beautiful Spanish woman, and records in the district of Columbia courts show that the daughter was committed to a local foundling asylum years ago under the name of Lee. She taken from the asylum and adopted by Dr. Baker, and until she wed young Zelaya it was believd that she was Dr. Baker's daughter.

Cause of Their Straits Unknown

Mrs. Zelaya speaks with a pronounced Spanish accent. Her husband and she visited Nicaragua, and reports came back to this country that President Zelaya had ben won over by his daughter-in-law. Just why the young people are living under such circumstances it is impossible to learn, their pride bars them from making an explanation. It was rumoured, not long ago, that Zelaya's father would appoint him to a diplomatic post.

The Labour Department And Mr. W. A. Bailey's Correspondence

Mr. W. A. Bailey has sent the Examiner the following copy of a letter received by himself from the Department of Labour of the Dominion Government:

Department of Labour,
Dominion of Canada.
Ottawa, May 5, 1909.

Sir,—Your communication of April 29th, addressed to His Excellency the Governor-General, and enclosing a clipping relating to the Raven Lake Cement Works, has been referred by His Excellency to the Department of Labour for attention and I am directed to state with regard to your representation concerning the alleged unfortunate working conditions in connection with the industry named, that the matter is one that would appear to fall within the scope of the factory inspectors of the Province of Ontario and you may consider it desirable to address a communication on the subject to the officers of that department. The Chief Factory Inspector is Mr. Jas. T. Burke, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. The subject of factory inspector is one that falls outside the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government.

With regard to the further statement contained in your letter that "something should be done to protect immigrants from such treachery," I am directed to point out that your letter does not give precise information with respect to the alleged misrepresentations to immigrants, and it is not possible to refer the same for investigation without further particulars.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
F. A. ACLAND,
Deputy Minister of Labour.

Steamers Have Already Been Secured For The T. A. S. Pic-nic

One of the mottoes of the committees in charge of the annual picnic of St. Peter's T. A. S. is to get to work early and complete arrangements in order that everything will be in readiness at least a week before the big event. At any rate the greatest part of the work is then complete, and it only remains to add the finishing touches. This year will be no exception, and even greater attention will be given than in the past. It has [illegible] have exceeded the expectations of even the most sanguine. This year every attention will be given to the accommodation of the people. Two boats and two scows have been secured for the day. They are the Monarch and the Rainbow, which, making regular trips all day, should meet any demand that is presented.

The committee has just begun to do its work, and is not in a position to make further announcements, but [illegible] attention will be given to the entertainment of the excursionists on the grounds. The games will, of course, be held on the same grounds as last year, they having proved all that could be desired.

APPRECIATES A LOCAL DOCTOR

The following tribute to a local physician appears in the May number of "Ups and Downs," the monthly published in connection with the Dr. Barnardo institutions:

As must be expected in the Spring of the year, especially when every other person one meets either has or has just had, or is just about to have an attack of the "grippe," there has been a good deal of illness among our girl family, and Miss [illegible] has had her hands and her [illegible] more than full. We do not know what we should do at Peterborough without Dr. Halliday, who for so many years has been the "visiting physician" as well as the [illegible] and generous medical counsellor. The number of our girls that Dr. Halliday has treated for ailments small and great, and the number of times of health trouble in which his advice has been sought, must run into many hundreds. When we add that professional fees are charged on the most moderate scale, it will be realized what a good friend Dr. Halliday has been and is, and how deeply we are indebted to him, not only for his professional skill and care, but for his generosity to the work.

Mr. Geo. Brown Has Opened up the Hotel—Water Is Still High.

Examiner Special.

Bridgenorth, May 11.—Things are lively in the village and park now.

Mr. Wolfe, of Hamilton, has returned and is occupying his new house that he built last fall. Mr. Wolfe has the finest cottage in the park. He has now three fine cottages here.

Mr. James Tully and Mr. J. Long has been spending a few days at their cottage enjoying the fresh air and tidying up their cottages.

Mr. Hollingshead, of the Bank of Ottawa, sent up a scow of lumber and window and door frames for a new cottage at Sandy Point, on Pigeon Lake.

Mr. Heatton, of Toronto, is also putting up a new cottage at Sandy Point. Mr. Percy Fitzgerald is the contractor for both cottages and is busy on the spot with a gang of men.

The water is very high in the lakes and some of the boat-houses have suffered.

Mr. Geo. Brown is back again, and giving the hotel a overhauling and getting things in order for the summer trade.

Both Mr. Kelly's saw-mill and Mr. Hurd's saw-mill, are buzzing away turning out lumber and shingles, giving employment to all the men that want employment.

The farmers are not making much progress on account of the cold and wet weather. The land is wet and the spring is late, one of the latest in many years.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, May 12.—Things were booming in the stock market during the forenoon and gains running from 1 to 6 points were general. The latter was scored by Del. & Hudson which jumped from 190 to 196. Reading made a new high record and led the coalers, big and little, to higher levels. The activity was not confined to these but extended throughout the list from the leading rails to the minor industrial "cats and dogs." There were a larger number of shares traded in up to noon to-day than on any half day during the present upward movement. This market is beginning to look high and buyers should use great discrimination in making purchases as it is believed some of the leading bulls are distributing stocks, but this has been on a limited scale so far, as the public is still holding back and buying but few stocks.

MARRIED.

HALL—REINHARDT—At the American Presbyterian Church, Montreal, by the Rev. Robert Johnston, D.D., on Monday, May 10th, 1909, E. H. D. Hall to Alice S. Reinhardt, of Montreal.

COURTSHIP AFTER MARRIAGE.

Busy American men consider their marriage certificate a sort of fully paid up policy of happiness. They act as if the courtship days were those of paying premiums of compliment, cheerfulness, courtesy, consideration, and chivalry, and that marriage cuts off all these premiums of loverlike attention. The only way to get an absolute guaranteed insurance on matrimonial happines is to keep paying the premiums.

These same men at their clubs often run perilously close to the dead line of boredom in telling of the marvellous qualities of their wives; they run the chromatic scale of enthusiasm, while you wonder in a dreamy way, whether the angels in heaven were not modelled after these women. Yet at home these husbands keep as silent about their appreciation as if it were a Masonic secret.

There is a tendency to asume that this love is known and recognized, so why speak of it? "She knows how much I think of her"—this is a dangerous taking for granted of what should be made real, pulsing and vital in thought, word, and deed.

There is little danger of overtelling this story; it is often the wine of life and inspiration to one hungering and thirsting for the little tenderness of affection.

Ofttimes some little touch of loving sweetness throws a golden streak of happiness through a life's whole day, and an involuntary half-smile and a love-light in the eyes born of the remembrance hours later tell of the vitalizing power of a seeming trifle, forgotten or perhaps unnoted by him who gladdened a life anew.

There are more people on this great big rolling earth hungering for sweetness, tenderness, and words of gentle appreciation, genial confidence, and generous affection, than are starving for bread. Such words, that were the current coin of conversation before marriage, often seem withdrawn from circulation afterward.

With husband and wife these delicate messengers of affection cost so little—sometimes only a thought—but it is the thought that does it all. There are men who would no more think voluntarily of carrying home to their wives a bunch of roses just as a bit of sentiment than they would think of taking home a bridge or a church or two or three miles of sea coast.

Continued courtship after marriage preserves the lover in the husband and the sweetheart in the wife. But courtship is not solitaire; like a quarrel, it requires two to make it a real success. It is not the wife alone who needs the gracious sweetness of consecrated comradeship, for husbands who are built on the right lines have the same hunger for loving kindness.

One of the most common causes of the decline of courtship after marriage, where it does occur, is the disillusion that often comes after marriage. When the rosy tints of the courtship days grow dimmer there is a tendency for the real poetry to turn into commonplace verse, or even into the baldest prose.

In the days before marriage the two candidates for felicity are on dress parade, under the inspiring glow of mutual regard every latent virtue blossoms in to full flower, every falling assumes a roseate hue under some charitable interpretation. Why let such good things go with the wedding day?

WHY THIS MAN LEFT ENGLAND.

A young Englishman who has been living in New York for more than a year, gives a novel and amusing reason for having deserted London for this city—a reason that appeals irresistibly to the American sense of humour.

"I came to America," he says, "to escape the blighting influence of the British Home."

He thereupon proceeds to descant eloquently upon the suffocating atmosphere of dulness and hidebound conventionality which pervades that time-honoured institution, and that, as he remarks, stifles and kills in a young man all ambition for progress.

In his own especial case, which he says is typical of thousands of others, he draws a vivid but scarcely alluring picture of returning from business in the city to his suburban home and of being expected as a matter of duty, sanctified by immemorial custom, to spend the evening in the bosom of the family playing cribbage or reading.

An evening passed otherwise than under the paternal roof being considered a cause for grave suspicion, this restive youth finally found the chief excitement of his life in absenting himself and returning at the ungodly hour of 1 a.m., stealing in in deliciously burglar fashion.

At length, weary of being invariably met on the stairway by an exasperated father, who, lighted candle in hand, exploded indignant remonstrances at such unheard of dissipation, the bored but intrepid youth, despite the bitter remonstrances and direful prophecies of his outraged family, breaks his shackles and hies him to the land of freedom.

It is an interesting and unusual point of view that he brings with him—for an Englishman.

"Let a man grow up and be educated entirely in England," he says, "and insularity and prejudice clothe him like a garment, they become part of the fibre of him, he fits into the accustomed groove of the smoothly running life there easily, unconsciously he becomes a machine and lives his life as in a treadmill, never departing from the traditional mode of life, hardened into the rut of custom which has obtained in England for centuries.

"However, let a man in his youth have two years at a university on the Continent, and on returning to England he will find the life there impossible.

"In America I find not a traditional freedom, but an actual freedom—liberty of thought, custom, action.

"The atmosphere of New York is stimulating to the last degree, it is enormously interesting. A certain amount of crudeness I find, of course, that is to be expected, but it does not offend me, and, unlike the typical Britisher, I am not irritated to exasperation by the fact that I do not find in American customs and institutions a replica of our English ones.

"After a year spent in New York I returned to England for a visit. I found just one week of it quite sufficient, and on my way across the Channel to France I watched the little island fade into the mist with much satisfaction."

Numerous young men in England, it seems, are becoming imbued with a spirit of restlessness and dissatisfaction with the narrow, conventional life and the few opportunities offered in that country for advancement in business, and are looking with envy at their more fortunate fellow countrymen who have broken away from tradition and sought a freer life in America.

In conclusion the Englishman remarked: "What I admire more than anything else in your country is the American woman. She is quite unlike the women of other nationalities; she stands alone, she is unique in charm and in fascination. The American man? Well, you see—really—that is, you know, I am afraid that I do not find him as interesting or attractive as I find many other things in this land of my temporary adoption which I have grown to love."

Man Said to be Selling Patent Medicine Without Government Stamp.

The Examiner was informed to-day that there was a certain gentleman going around the city selling a certain kind of medicine which was not properly stamped as required by the Government. Since April the first, druggists and all others who sell patent medicines are required to stamp their goods with stamps purchased from the Government, and it is said that the medicine which this man is selling in the city is not properly stamped.

PROBLEM OF APPENDICITIS.

By J. M. Smyth, M.D.

Appendicits is not a disease of modern times, though its nature and methods of treatment are the result of careful observation by one of our well known modern surgeons while engaged in post mortem work.

It may be safe to say that appendicitis is as old as mankind, for in studying very old histories wherein are given the diagnoses of the physicians, we read of cases of inflammation of the bowels, intestinal disorders and like ailments, the symptoms of which prove that they must have been appendicitis.

Appendicits is inflammation of the vermiform appendix, a small blind tube averaging two and a half inches in length and a quarter of an inch in diameter, attached to the coecum at its inner and posterior part. It is made of a very sensitive mucous membrane containing several glands.

The appendix is part of the digestive tract, its function, it is believed, being to lubricate that part of the intestines, though as yet there is no absolute proof of this. Careful study of a child from whom the colon had been removed, until he reaches the age of manhood, has revealed no irregularities of any nature.

The causes of this disease may be grouped under four heads, stenosis, which means closing up; impaction, the entrance of foreign bodies, not necessarily seeds; exposuer and injury. In fighting the disease nature takes three methods of disposing of the toxic materials, discharging them into the peritoneal cavity, sending them into the bowels or discharging them through an external wound. In the first, if the discharge be not too rapid while the peritoneum is taking them up, nature gain makes an effort to ward off the threatened danger by walling the poisonous matters in, thus localising them and so aiding the physician or surgeon in his work. If, however, the discharge be sudden, as is the case when the mass bursts, the whole of the peritoneum becomes involved, which is called septic peritonitis, and this is generally fatal.

After the diagnosis has revealed the disease, the doctor decides whether the case be one for medicine or external treatment, or for separation. In the latter case the greatest of care is demanded, as sometimes an immediate operation is necessary, while at other times it must be delayed, often for hours, until the condition of the patient has been brought to that point at which the surgeon can feel it is safe to go ahead.

The operation determined upon, the most careful arrangements to secur perfect antisepsis are made, and the patient is placed in a full state of anaesthesia.

The operating surgeon then draws an imaginary line from the navel to the anterior superier spine of the right hip bones, dividing that line into three parts. Under the inner side of the middle third, the appendix, in normal cases, will be found, though in rare cases it has been found on the left side and in extremely rare cases otherwise displaced.

Having satisfied himself of the exact spot under which it will be found, an incision from two to five inches long in made in the skin. (Some of the best surgeons pride themselves of the smallness of their incisions in this operation). The fatty tissues are then cut through, the small blood vessels are secured and then the muscular walls of the abdomen are separated, bringing into view the peritoneum. This is a serous secretive lining, composed of two layers. On cutting through this, the edges of both layers are clamped so as to enable the surgeon to reunite them when the operation shall have been completed.

The intestines are now visible and the affected section is very tenderly drawn through the opening, where the nature and extent of the infection are made known. Hot towels moistened with salt water ar ekept applied to the intestine while it is exposed. The word "tenderly" characterizes the whole of this operation, as the surgeon must be more than careful to prevent any rupture of the appendix, for should this happen while he is operating the pus would be quickly taken up by the peritoneum and other mucous membranes, and the resulting complications would make the outcome very uncertain.

The mesentery, a large vessel adjoining the appendix, is next ligated and then the colon is tied off, after which the diseased organ is cut away. The stump is pushed back into the intestine and the ligature is tightly drawn, this to prevent the forming of a pouch.

The removal safely accomplished, the intestine is replaced, the edges of the peritoneum are carefully approximated and the muscular walls, fatty tissue and skin are brought together by subcutaneous and cutaneous sutures.

In the majority of cases, no complications ensuing, the patient is ready for discharge in two weeks.

Why Bass' Barley Wine

Is the Cheapest Malt Extract.

We're going to prove to you that, at 30 cents a bottle, Bass' Barley Wine is the cheapest extract of malt and hops ever sold.

The price of most malt extracts is 25c a bottle, some sell for 20c, others as low as 15c.

Now if you pay 25c for a bottle of ordinary malt extract and Bass' Barley Wine contains three times more nutritive value, which is the cheaper?

Many of the so-called malt extracts are nothing more nor less than by-products of the brew.

Of course they contain a certain percentage of nutritive value, but very little.

These extracts are then bottled and, naturally, are in a process of fermentation.

To stop fermentation, preservatives, such as salicylic acid and other preparations, are used.

Ask your doctor what effect salicylic acid will have on your kidneys.

Bass' Barley Wine is made from pure barley malt,—not a by-product,—and hops.

It is aged for three years in casks to remove fermentation and when bottled requires no preservatives to keep it for an unlimited period.

When we say that Bass' Barley Wine is the finest production of Bass & Co., the greatest brewers in the world, this is the highest praise we can give it.

You don't take malt extracts merely for the pleasure of drinking them, but for the amount of good they're going to do you.

Shall you then let a difference of 5c stand in the way, when that difference will give you Bass' Barley Wine with three times more nutritive value than any other malt extract?

John, Thomas, Richard, Etc.

The popularity of John is believed to be due to the supposed suitability in baptism of the Baptist's name, just as Jordan was a name usually given to children who were baptized in water brought from Palestine by pilgrims or crusaders. The prevalence of William is due to William the Conqueror, that of Robert to sympathy with the misfortunes of his son. Thomas came in with the murder of the great archbishop. The crusading exploits of Richard I. made the name popular, while to the adventures of the paladins we owe Roland, Roger and Reginald. In the fourteenth century Charles, James, and George were almost unknown. Charles only became popular after the execution of Charles I., and George came in with the Hanoverian dynasty.—London Notes and Queries.

Remembered By The Members Of Park Street Baptist Choir

Mrs. Harold Jewett Presented With Pearl Crescent on Her Departure to the West to Join Her Husband—A Pleasant Affair.

AN ADDRESS WAS READ.

The choir of the Park St. Baptist Church said farewell on Tuesday evening to Mrs. Harold Jewett, who leaves in a few days [illegible] her husband in the West. The affair took place at the residence of Mrs. Robert Wright, Albert street. The choir had met for practice and afterwards a pleasant social time was spent. Refreshments were served and many kind references were made to the happy relations which have existed among the members of the [illegible] and the part Mrs. Jewett has played in promoting the welfare and [illegible] work so pleasant and [illegible].

During the evening Mr. [illegible], the leader of the choir, read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Jewett,—When we first heard of your intention [illegible] from us to seek a new home in the great western country, we thought of what our loss would be, as a church, in the social meetings, the Sunday school and the choir, and we held some hope that the change would not be made. But as the time has come when you are to be with us no more at least for some considerable time, we want to express to you our wishes for your future prosperity and spiritual good as well as that of your highly respected husband, and we trust that "He who doeth all things well" will be with you both in every good work and may your influence in your new home be helpful in the building of the great Kingdom.

We now ask you to accept this pearl crescent that you may have something to remind you of the friends you have left in the old home.

Signed by the members of the choir, Mr. J. C. Miller, leader; Mrs. Robt. S. Wright, Misses E. Gillespie, E. Eagleson, A. Hope, M. Smith, L. Smith, Ethel Hill, [illegible], N. Smith, M. [illegible], and Messrs. Percy Hill, W. J. [illegible], Gavin Kennedy, Charles [illegible], [illegible], Robert S. Wright and [illegible] Hayward.

Mr. Percy Hill presented Mrs. Jewett with a beautiful crescent of [illegible]. [illegible] Mrs. Jewett expressed her gratitude to the members of the choir for their kind expressions and for their beautiful remembrance.

YELLOW JOURNALISM.

The yellow journals are pursuing the Kinrade family to the bitter end. We are told that they went to Montreal and registered under assumed names; a very reasonable proceeding, since the Crown authorities and the newspapers have done their best to rob them of their good name. We have the thrilling intelligence, flashed over the shrinking wires that Mrs. and Miss Kinrade and the latter's finace put up at a Montreal hotel and actually had luncheon. By some neglect we are not informed what the ingredients of the luncheon were. As further evidence of the criminality of the party, they even took rooms in a hotel, and afterwards went to Sherbrooke, without permission. They left Sherbrooke at 9.15 for Boston, and "the detectives are hot on their trail." We are told that the train was held up at Newport for an hour, but mention is omitted of the fact that nine and one-half miles out of Sherbrooke the engine-driver took a chew of tobacco. The way the Kinrade family is persecuted; all their movements "set in a note-book, learned and conned by rote" is disgusting. Under the circumstances one is led to the feeling that the most fortunate member of the family is the murdered girl—she is at rest, and the yellow journalist passes her by.

The "codfish aristocracy" rules the roast in Newfoundland.

MINISTER OF LABOUR.

In discussing the appointment of a Minister of Labour, the Mail and Empire demands that a workingman be given the portfolio. It argues that the late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie was a workingman. He was, and a good one, too. But if, as a workingman he became premier he was, according to the Mail and Empire's contention, a misfit, since every minister must be by occupation adapted to his office—a finance minister must be a banker or a broker; a minister of agriculture a farmer, a minister of railways and canals, a brakeman or a lockmaster; a minister of militia a drill sergeant, Postmaster-General a mail clerk; a minister of marine and fisheries a sailor; a minister of Inland revenue, a gauger; a minister of public works a contractor, a minister of trade and commerce, a knight of the yard-stick; and so on ad infinitum. Theoretically, expert qualification should be an equipment for every portfolio, but this theory is very partially practised. Political circumstances, personal qualifications, ability to carry a seat and general equipment for successful administration of a department are considerations that supplant professional or vocational qualifications. Sometimes the man and his occupation go together. For instance, Sir Wilfrid Laurier made Mr. Fisher, a first-rate farmer, his Minister of Agriculture thirteen years ago, and he has made a success of his work as hardly any man of any other occupation could have done. Sir John Macdonald gave the portfolio of agriculture to a brewer. Sir John Abbott reappointed him. Sir Mackenzie Bowell put the plough handles in the hands of a doctor. To be consistent and sincere in reasoning [illegible] the Mail and Empire should have entered its protest against Sir James Whitney making a doctor—and not the most scholarly in the world—minister of education, the round man in the square hole, with a vengeance. But the organ has no desire to be consistent, it only wants to find fault and embarrass the Government. It merely aims to make a little demagogic posing as a champion of the workingman. Who is the working man? He is the man behind the yard stick, he is the man in the ditch, the banker in his office, the man [illegible], the book keeper at his desk, the doctor in his gig, the blacksmith at the bellows, the minister of the crown, who works more hours a day than any navvy on this earth, the man behind the pen that writes these words, the—in fact we are all working men, that is, any of us, who are worth our salt, and it is only the snobbery of the demagogue which sets one portion of our population in a class by itself and, with an air of offensive patronage, labels them—brands them—"working-men," when some political object is to be gained, some political animus to be indulged. The Mail and Empire doesn't care tuppence for the "workingman," or the interests of labour, organized or unorganized, or disorganized. Neither does the Conservative party, which it speaks for. This party was in power for eighteen years on end, and not one act of legislation or one order in council was enacted or passed in the interests of labour. And when the Liberal party, whose record both at Toronto and Ottawa is studded with scores of acts, passed in the interests of labour, logically carries its policy to the point of investing labour with a new dignity—giving it a department of its own and a minister of its own—the Mail and Empire offensively patronizes the "workingman" and insists that one of this class be made minister. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will make a working-man minister; whether or not he is a "working man of the Mail and Empire brand, whether he is tinker or a tailor, or candlestick-maker, or blacksmith, trench-digger, or doctor, he will, when he becomes a minister be a workingman, working longer hours, than any other workingman in the land.

Why doesn't the Mail and Empire get Sir James Whitney to make Mr. Allan Studholme, the labour member for Hamilton, Minister of Public Works in his cabinet?

THE BIGGEST SHIP.

Montreal is very proud and with reason, because the Laurentic, of the White Star Line, a ship of 15,000 tons, has arrived in that port. It is a decided credit to Canada that a ship of this size, one of the biggest of the ocean greyhounds, can penetrate 900 to 1,000 miles inland. The fact of this possibility is a decided credit to the Liberal Government of the Dominion, whose generous expenditures upon the deepening and improvement of the St. Lawrence between Montreal and Quebec, helps Canada to keep well in line with the foremost maritime nations. Montreal, thanks to the Government's action, in improving internal transportation by water, has disputed the grain-carrying trade with New York and, due to the same cause, the Canadian transoceanic route is coming to the front in serious rivalry with the New York route, because it is the shorter; and to the modern-minded traveller, who is only killing time, the saving of a day or a few hours in getting to the end of a voyage counts a great deal. The Montreal Herald thus refers to the arrival at that port of the "biggest ship":

The Laurentic, a ship of 15,000 tons, is in port on her initial trip, and there was a luncheon on board yesterday to celebrate the occurrence. Montreal undoubtedly has the right to be proud of it, and the pride might very well be shared by the whole Canadian people, to whom is due the credit if a ship of this size can be navigated in safety to a point so far inland. It is a great deal to be able to feel that in such a matter Canada is holding her own with the foremost maritime nations. It is not very long since we had to blush for the equipment of the port, but so much has been done in the last twelve years that this now little more than a memory. The port is well equipped, and [illegible] the authorities are contemplating improvements that they will be forced to undertake before long by developments already under way in the interior of the Dominion. Parliament has shown itself willing and doubtless will continue so, to make the St. Lawrence route in all particulars equal to the utmost demands that can be made upon it. The progress made in recent years, as well in the passenger as in the freight department of ocean transportation, has attracted general attention to the advantages of the St. Lawrence route. Montreal caught the eye of New York by capturing the lion's share of the grain trade, and the passenger ships are each year carrying more and more travellers from the American side of the boundary. All this is pleasing to Montreal, and in such celebrations as that of yesterday the pleasure is manifested.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The lady stenographer is the only example of womankind that permits a mere man to "dictate" to her.

In Saskatchewan they speak of "the welcome rain." Farmers in Ontario would find a little less rain more welcome. But in the West they have bush fires, which it is hoped the rain will check.

The Mail and Empire publishes a letter regarding the politics of Mr. Pugsley, [illegible] answer [illegible] suggesting the inquiry—[illegible] was Conservative. [illegible] has at last [illegible] something that Mr. Pugsley [illegible].

The Trent Valley Woollen Manufacturing Company, suggests the Hamilton Times, does not appear to regard the woollen business as being hopeless when properly managed. It contemplates greatly enlarging its premises and employing 75 more hands. Campbellford has just voted to reduce its assessment $[illegible], making it $[illegible] for ten years, by way of encouragement.

Newfoundland will now get down to business. Last November the people elected a legislature with even party balance, each having 18 out of 36 seats. Premier Bond resigned. Sir Edward Morris was called upon to form a ministry, the House was dissolved and at the general election Sir Edward Morris won, taking 26 out of the 36 seats, after a most bitter contest.

A young lady, at Ottawa, by entering the legislative halls while the august body of Parliament was sitting created as much consternation as a mouse at large at a pink tea party. There does not seem to be much chance in the House for female suffrage, when a dainty petticoated presence, creates a panic like a bomb, with a two-inch fuse. It was the greatest bit of spice in the history of the House—of course the mace doesn't count.

The enterprising "American" newspaper correspondent is inexhaustable in resource. Not content with having ex-president Roosevelt shoot a few lions and rhinocero—what is the plural of the animal? say, rhinoceroi—before breakfast, they have dug up a missing Austrian archduke in a Cleveland machine shop. But Canadian journalists can't throw stones—they are pursuing the ill-starred Kinrade family like bloodhounds, and making sensational stories of every movement.

RAILWAY ACCIDENTS

(London Advertiser.)

Of over 100 collisions and derailments on Canadian railways investigated by the Dominion railway commission during the year covered by its recently-issued report, 72 per cent. were, in the opinion of the investigators, due to a failure on the part of the employees to do their full duty to their employers, their fellow employees and the public. These so-called accidents resulted in the death of 529 persons, and injury to 1,309 others. Responsibility for accidents in the cases inquired into is placed by the report as follows:

Engineers	18
Engineers, conductors and brakemen	20
Conductors	4
Brakemen	4
Conductors and brakemen	5
Engineers, firemen and brakemen	4
Trackmen and yardmen	9
All of train crew	6
Train dispatchers and operators	8
Agent	1
Companies	6
Accidental causes	24

Among the "accidental causes" were broken rails, spread track or some defect that might escape ordinary vigilance. Negligence on the part of the whole of a train crew, it will be seen from the above table, has been found in some instances, each member probably depending on the others to perform what was really his duty. The object of the commission is to impress upon railway officials and employees how essential to safety is strict enforcement of precautionary measures and absolutely necessary to public safety.

WHITNEY OBJECTS TO THE TREATY

Protests Against Ratification of Waterways Treaty Rider.

AN INJUSTICE TO ONTARIO

Whitney Tells Sir Wilfrid In Telegram That Ontario Government Believes Rider Should Be Left Out When Compact Is Passed by House—Means Old Conditions at Sault Ste. Marie.

Toronto, May 13.—With a sharp eye to the rights of the Province of Ontario under the terms of the waterways treaty as mutilated by the United States Senate, Sir James Whitney has not allowed the occasion to pass unnoticed. The following telegram was sent to Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday, which indicates the feeling of the local administration:

"Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Prime Minister, Ottawa, Ont.:

"The Ontario Government is of opinion that if the waterways treaty be ratified by the Parliament of Canada, such ratification should be exclusive of the rider inserted at the end thereof by the United States Senate, and this Government respectfully protests against such rider, as being unfair to the Province of Ontario in view of the other provisions of the treaty as to waters and streams.

"J. P. WHITNEY,
"Prime Minister of Ontario."

In an interview Sir James afterwards said: "It would seem, if the treaty is ratified, that an injustice will be done to the province, as apparently the original situation is resumed at Sault Ste. Marie, while the other changes which affect British boundary waters remain."

The Smith rider, to which exception is taken by the Ontario Government, provides "that nothing in this treaty shall be construed as effecting or changing any existing territorial or riparian rights in the water, or rights of owners of land under water, on either side of the international boundary at the rapids of St. Mary's river at Sault Ste. Marie, in the use of waters flowing over such lands, subject to the requirements of navigation in boundary waters and of navigation of canals, and without prejudice to the existing rights of the United States and Canada, each to use the waters of the St. Mary's river within its own territory."

Vanished From Hospital.

Windsor, May 13.—Michael Hook, former proprietor of the Tecumseh House, London, was spirited away from the Red Cross Hospital in Detroit by friends anxious to get him out of that institution.

The police have searched high and low for him, but so far without success. His attorney admits Hook is being held under cover, but says his friends have no need to worry.

To-day Hook will be summoned before Judge Durfee, to have his bond of $2,500 as administrator of his wife's estate raised to double that sum. Hook has been spending his wife's money so freely that it was deemed advisable to have the surety increased. Since his wife's death last October, Hook has chequed out $2,600. Mrs. Hook left real and personal property worth about $12,000.

The estate will be placed in hands of special guardians unless Hook is able to satisfy the court with the increased bond.

April Crop Report.

Ottawa, May 13.—The census and statistics office has given out a statement of crops and live stock for the month of April.

Vegetation is later than usual this year, and no report on the state of crops can be made for Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. Spring work in Ontario has been carried on for the most part only in the counties along Lake Erie and Lake Huron, and seeding has been delayed by weather conditions throughout the northwest provinces. Winter wheat is grown in all parts of Ontario except in the counties of the Ottawa Valley and north of the lakes. Its condition at the end of April was uniform in all parts of the province, and compared with a standard crop it ranks at 76.5 per cent.

Vankleek Hill, May 13.—Mrs. Alex. Hunter, sr., who resides about a mile and a half from Hawkesbury, aged 74 years, was struck by a C.P.R. train at a crossing near the station and fatally injured.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Firm—Hogs Lower at Buffalo and Chicago.

LONDON, May 12.—London cables for cattle are steady, at 12¾c to 13½c per lb., for Canadian steers, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 10¼c to 10½c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 12.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning the offerings were 400 cattle, 200 milch cows, 250 sheep and lambs, 400 hogs and 1500 calves. A feature of the market was the demand from exporters for suitable cattle to complete shipments with; but, as the offerings of such were limited, the volume of trade in this direction was small, as only about 50 head were picked up at 5½c to 5¾c per lb. There was a fairly good attendance of local buyers, as they all wanted a few cattle to fill their requirements for the balance of the week. The demand was steady for small lots, and a moderately active trade was done. The tone of the market was firm, and prices show no change. Choice steers sold at 6c; good at 5½c to 5¾c; fair at 5c to 5¼c; medium at 4½c to 4¾c, and commoner grades at 3c to 4c per lb.

The supply of milch cows was in excess of the requirements, as the demand for such was only fair; but, in spite of this fact, prices were fairly well maintained, and sales were made at from $40 to $80 each, as to quality. There was a good demand for sheep and lambs, of which the supply was a little larger than it has been of late, and a more active trade was done in consequence. Prices ruled firm, with sales of yearling sheep at 6c to 6½c; old sheep at 5c to 5½c per lb. Spring lambs brought from $3 to $6 each, as to size. Calves were plentiful, and, as some of them were of much better quality, prices ruled higher. Good to choice stock sold at $5 to $8 each, and the lower grades at from $1.50 to $4. The supply of hogs was fair, for which the demand was good from packers and dealers, and the undertone to the market was steady, with sales of selected lots at $8.25 to $8.35 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

A Provincial Grocers' Association.

London, Ont., May 13.—At a meeting of the Grocers' Association it was decided unanimously to recommend the formation of a provincial association. The annual picnic will be held to Detroit on June 23 and 24, and Toronto and Hamilton associations will be invited to join.

JURYMEN INDIGNANT.

Hamilton Men Resent Insinuations Regarding Kinrade Verdict.

Hamilton, May 13.—According to R. B. Spera, the foreman of the Kinrade jury, they were laboring under a misapprehension when they brought in an open verdict, and that they would have decided on an entirely different course had they not believed that the crown had something else in view, and that there would be immediate developments. "People are telling us to our faces that we were bought." At a conference of some of the jurors yesterday morning it was decided to send a letter to the Attorney-General. When the jury met for the last session they were given to understand that there were some 12 more witnesses. Before the taking of testimony was begun, Geo. T. Blackstock, K.C., who represented the crown, asked for a delay until a conference could take place between the crown and the Kinrade lawyers. Then the case came to sudden close. The coroner had a draft of the verdict drawn, in which a name was mentioned, and he says ten of the 15 jurors were in favor of signing it. The sudden termination of the case led them to believe that an understanding had been reached, and that anything but an open verdict would hamper the crown.

Preparing for Convention.

Toronto, May 13.—His Grace the Archbishop of Toronto has expressed his deep interest in the coming congress of the International Council of Women, and his willingness to aid it in every way possible. Word has been received that the Swedish Government will follow the example set by Norway, and will pay the expenses of the Swedish delegates, some ten in number.

Frau Hainisch, the Austrian delegate, will be accompanied by her son, Prof. Hainisch, and her son-in-law, Herr Eduard Figdor. The former, who was the founder of public libraries in that country, will give an address on the subject in the literature section, and the latter, who is a large land owner, will speak on Women as Farmers and Gardeners.

About eight delegates from Australasia sailed for Vancouver on Monday. They will cross the continent and join the other foreign delegates in Montreal about June 13.

Mrs. Sanford of Hamilton, general treasurer for the International Council of Women has just returned from Europe. While abroad she met and conferred with the International president, the Countess of Aberdeen, who expressed her satisfaction with the arrangements as made by the Canadian council for the congress.

Fewer Trainmen at Work.

Columbus, Ohio, May 13.—The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen are in convention here, with an attendance of delegates and visitors totaling over 4,000. Vociferous greetings were extended to both W. G. Lee, grand master, and his predecessor, P. H. Morrissey.

Mr. Lee announces a probable change in the insurance system of the order, whereby the reserve will be greatly increased. Because of the depression in industrials, the railways during the last year and a half laid off many thousand men and the result has been a reduction in the number of accidents because of the reduction in the individual chances taken, and the enlargement of the surplus without an increase in assessment.

A new home for railroad men will likely be erected in Illinois through the efforts of Father Coffin, the temperance worker, and friend of the railroad men.

Priests Approve Mutiny.

Constantinople, May 13.—Constantinople witnessed another batch of executions yesterday morning when 24 mutineers of the army and navy were hanged in public within the city limits.

Priests prayed with the condemned men shortly before they were taken to the places of execution and commented upon the evil deeds which had resulted in their deaths. One of the condemned men spoke up and said that all the priests he had talked with on the day of the so-called mutiny and the days following had approved of his action.

Cadets Leave for Bisley.

Toronto, May 13.—With 500 cheering cadets lining the platform, and the cadet band playing patriotic airs the 10.15 G.T.R. train pulled out for Montreal last night. On board were Galer Hagarty and Albert J. Flood, the first Toronto cadets to shoot at Bisley. They will sail on the Virginia at 9 a.m. Friday, will arrive in England about the 21st and the shooting will commence on the 24th.

"WOMEN!"
"Are You Nervous?"

The results of modern civilization are evidenced in an increase of nervous disorders. It could not be otherwise with the way we eat, drink, lose sleep, and keep up a continual round of excitement. The work, the worry, the excitement, all tell upon the nerves till they cry out in revolt, and will not be placated till a remedy such as come along with their nerve-strengthening and energizing properties, and restore them to their normal condition.

Mrs. Wm. Levi, Markdale, Ont., writes: "I had for several years been troubled with nervousness, and, like many others, spent lots of money on medicine that did me no good. I was so bad that the least noise would make me jump and my heart would thump so you could hear it plainly and I could not lie on my left side at night. I saw a few testimonials of others and decided to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and to my great joy and surprise they completely cured me and it only took six boxes to do it. I have a neighbor, Mrs. Rickett, and I induced her to try them and they effected a cure. I can endorse their use for anyone afflicted as I was."

TWO DRUNKS WERE ALLOWED TO GO

Two young men were charged with being drunk at the police court this morning. Both were allowed to go. One of them came into the city yesterday from Emily, where he said he had been working for a farmer, who had refused to pay him. He was on his way to Lindsay when he got drunk. He was arrested on Hunter street yesterday afternoon.

The other one was taken in custody by P. C. Adams last night about eleven o'clock. He was lying in the lane on Chambers street helplessly drunk. He had fallen on the pavement at the George and Hunter streets, inflicting a big cut in his head.

LADIES, WHY NOT PRESERVE YOUR YOUTH AND BEAUTY?

Parisian Sage, the quick-acting hair restorer, is now for sale in Peterborough at the drug store of Wm. Madill, and is sold with a rigid guarantee at 50 cents a bottle.

Parisian Sage has an immense sale, and here are the reasons:

It is safe and harmless.

It cures dandruff in two weeks by killing the dandruff germ.

It stops falling hair.

It promptly stops itching of the scalp.

It makes the hair soft and luxuriant.

It gives life and beauty to the hair.

It is not sticky or greasy.

It is the daintiest perfumed hair tonic made.

It is the best, the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

Fight shy of the druggist who offers you a substitute: he is unworthy of your confidence.

"OUTDOOR CANADA."

The May number of "Outdoor Canada" is filled with special articles breathing the spirit of the great Outdoors in Canada, and no one can read it from cover to cover without experiencing the longing that chill winds may quickly cease and warmer suns and skies invite to the field and stream and the freer life under the bright canopy of Heaven.

Among the many excellent articles is one by A. N. Woolverton, on the Kootenay Lake Launch Club; another by R. D. Brown, on The Canadian Henley; another by H. J. P. Goode, on the King's Plate, D. M. Barton's contribution on Rowing and Swimming; a very interesting description of a summer's work in the Alaskan and Yukon districts fixing the international boundary line; and Roden Kingsmill's always welcome contribution on general sports.

The illustrations in this month's issue are particularly good, the number and quality of the half-tones used excelling anything heretofore attempted. The new management of the magazine has this month made a change in the price, single copies at ten cents, the annual subscription price remaining at $1.00 per year.

More and more this magazine is meeting the possibilities that have so long been undeveloped in the particular field to which it belongs, and with the reduction in price and the increased excellence of the magazine, it should easily and quickly take first rank in the purely Canadian magazine field.

Copies of the May number may be secured from newsdealers everywhere or from the office of publication, Spectator Building, Hamilton, Canada.

ILLUMINATED SIGN AT GRAND HOTEL

Mr. Chas. Nixon, proprietor of the Grand Hotel, has recently placed a handsome illuminated sign at the entrance to his place on George street. It is painted in black and white and when lighted up at night presents a very attractive appearance.

THE NOX TASTELESS LIQUOR, DRUG AND TOBACCO CURE.

We have yet to hear of one failure to cure where a fair trial has been given. Can be given without the person knowing it, is harmless and absolutely without taste. Mother, sister or wife, you would be doing a great work by giving this remedy to some members of your family. We will mail a full month's treatment for five dollars. Errant Lady Stenographer Makes Panic In Parliament

A "Stranger" in the Sacred Presence Wobbles the Constitution—Girl Gets in on Ground Floor While House is Sitting.

INNOCENCE AN EXOTIC.

The staff correspondence of the Toronto thus records an amusing incident in Parliament:

For one thrilling moment or two yesterday the House of Commons of Canada thought that the Suffragettes had arrived. For the first time in the history of that learned body a lady interrupted its proceedings by entering the sacred chamber while the House was in session and tripping daintily down one of the aisles to a seat beside an astonished member; and it was a young lady, too. For one amazed instant Parliament rubbed its eyes. Then aroused masculinity yelled "Order" hoarsely upon seeing its holy privileges thus invaded. It was far and away the funniest scene of the session.

The chamber, as most people know, slopes quite abruptly towards the centre. There are two central entrances, also one at each corner of the chamber. The former are guarded; the later are not.

It was nearly six o'clock. The House was in session on Mr. Graham's Railway bill. As the House was in Committee, the Speaker was not in his chair. The attendance was of that sparsity which is too often to be observed when important but not exciting matters are under discussion.

Suddenly there entered by one of the corner doors what seemed to the astonished gaze of Parliament an apparition. It moved daintily and with the unconsciousness of established custom, tripping down an aisle to the seat, the prominent seat, of the Hon. J. R. Stratton. Suddenly Parliament realized that here, in its very midst, was a girl, a person not even entitled to vote, a "stranger."

An awe-inspiring cry of "Order" went up to Heaven. From a number of outraged masculine throats it came.

The vision, which was decidedly pretty, gave a gasp of horror. Mr. Stratton gave a warnig cry. There was a swish of skirts, and the young lady was up the aisle and out at the door before the Sergeant-at-Arms had time to capture her. Even the mace semed to rest easier after she had gone.

As for Mr. Stratton, he turned a nice pink. The visitor was his stenographer, to whom he had sent word that he had some letters to dictate at six o'clock. The young lady apparently thought the House adjourned, an impression confirmed by the scarcity of members and the Speaker's empty chair. It is the regular thing for the stenographers to enter the chamber to receive dictation from members while the House is not sitting, hence her sublime unconsciousness until the cries of 'Order" and Mr. Stratton's warning cry aroused her to the seriousness of the situation.

SHOULD WIFE ALWAYS PLACE CONFIDENCE IN HER SPOUSE?

"If I ever marry, my husband won't be bothered about domestic worries, nor will he hear about household affairs that have gone wrong."

Sometimes a girl makes a remark like that. Well, she isn't going to be very happy in married life, that is all I can say, for I am quite certain that if things go wrong in the home, it is a wife's duty to tell her husband.

I know that some women have the idea firmly fixed in their heads that men hate to hear about domestic worries. Stuff and nonsense! To hear about domestic worries annoys no real man; he rather appreciates being taken into full confidence, and, if he is a shrewd individual at all, he may even be able to suggest a remedy if things are not going so smoothly as wifie would like.

It is perfectly true that some couples before marriage agree that the man shall attend strictly to his own side and the wife to hers, and that they shall in no way interfere with each other—in a word, each agrees to act independently in his and her own particular sphere. Believe me, that is a very bad arrangement, and it is not at all conducive toward peace and happiness existing in the home. I think that where real affection exists there will be complete candor and frankness, and not one item will be withheld on either side.

Obviously, a husband has every right to know what is taking place in the household; it is a wife's duty to keep him posted upon all matters, except, of course, in the case of a man who very plainly indicates that he will not tolerate being primed up on the latest happening in the home during his absence at business.

Very, very few husbands are like that; most husbands are delighted if wives take them into the fullest confidence, and relate all their grievances, worries and vexations. And what is more calculated to lighten burdens than confiding all about them to one you love and who loves you in return?

Surely it must lighten a wife's burden to hear the sympathetic words of a husband; and may it not wonderfully aid her if she sees that he is willing to lend assistance in the solving of domestic problems which have worried dreadfully? Moreover, what is a wife to do when in domestic trouble if she does not go to her husband and tell him all about it? Must she brood over the matter alone, and perhaps end up by making herself thoroughly wretched and miserable, or go to an outsider and be laughed at all over the neighbourhood?

A husband and wife agree to share troubles as well as joys, so it is but right that, if any matter connected with the home is tormenting a woman—and it is a common occurrence—she should go to the one who has promised to share all with her—her husband.

When big things annoy a woman she always goes straight to her husband; but it is not the big things which worry the life out of one most—it is the little, nagging things which seem almost too trivial to mention and those are the very things a wife should go to her husband about.

I certainly can counsel all young women who may be thinking of getting married to resolve that, granted they get husbands, these husbands will be told all—mark the word "all." Nothing should be kept back concerning domestic affairs which have gone wrong.

And, of course, this bit of advice extends to everything. Nothing should be hidden from a husband if peace and happiness are desired. Moreover, two heads are better than one, and any day a husband may be able to show his wife that she was a little silly to be bothered about such and such a thing, and may point the way out of her difficulty in a moment.

Yes, it is right that a husband should be told all about domestic trouble. What would a wife say if a husband hid business troubles from her, and disaster happened as a result maybe? She would declare that he ought to have confided in her.

Well, there is no saying how any domestic trouble might turn out in the end, so it is best to be on the safe side. Let the husband be told, and he will not have any reason for grumbling and fretting later on about being kept in the dark at a time when he might have solved the problem, for really men are not the stupid creatures women believe them to be—it is astonishing the grasp some men have of domestic affairs.

INTERESTING WARSAW NEWS

Examiner Special.

Warsaw, May 12.—Mr. P. Mc Murray had the misfortune to lose a valuable colt, injured, possibly, beyond recovery, on Friday evening. Mr. McMurray was breaking the colt in, and had it harnessed double with an older horse, but with no rig, and was driving the team about, when the colt being high-spirited, became restless and unmanageable, and in some manner got badly cut above the hoof on one foot. The cut bled very freely, and the beast was very weak before the arival of Dr. Murphy, Veterinary Surgeon, of Lakefield, who was called.

Mr. Sidney Watley was the victim of a distressing accident on Thursday of last week, when he had the end of the thumb on the left hand taken off below the nail by a shingle saw, at his mill. Mr. Watley was engaged in edging shingles, and in some manner his hand slipped and struck the saw. Dr. D. Munro dressed the wound, which has now commenced to heal.

The next regular monthly meeting of the Warsaw Women's Institute will be held at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Marvin, on the afternoon of Thursday, May 13th. Interesting papers will be given on the following subjects: "Courtesy and Good Manners in the Home", "Our Dominion and Memories of our Queen"; "Cheerfulness versus Worrying."

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a team to enter the Junior Football League has been called for Wednesday evening, May 12th.

Rev. John Gray, D.D., of Knox College, Tornto, conducted the morning and evening services in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday last, and addressed a largely attended gathering of young people in the church on Monday evening. At the Sunday morning service, Dr. Gray presented the claims of Knox College in an eloquent and forceful address, and he is this week calling upon the members of the Church in the interests of that institution.

Dr. D. Munro and Mr. W. J. Kidd were in Lakefield on Tuesday.

Mr. Edwin Picken, proprietor of the Victoria House, Stony Lake, was in town on Wednesday.

Miss Lena Payne, of Hall's Glen, is spending a few weeks with her aunt, Mrs. A. Watts.

Mrs. Forster returned on Thursday from Peterborough, where she attended the Sabbath School Convention.

Mrs. Coleman, of Port Hope, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. David Miller.

Mrs. J. R. Selkirk and Mrs. (Dr.) Munro were in the city on Saturday.

Mr. R. G. Hendren was in Lakefield on Tuesday.

Mr. A. W. Smithson spent Sunday and Monday at Bailieboro.

Miss Beatrice Selkirk visited relatives at Lakefield on Tuesday.

Miss Florence Snider, who has been spending a couple of months visiting her sister, Mrs. O. A. Kidd, at Cobalt, returned home on Saturday.

The Misses Smithson and Bateman, of Bailieboro, returned home on Saturday, having spent a couple of weeks as guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Smithson.

Mr. M. McNutt left on Tuesday morning for Coe Hill, where he will spend a couple of months.

FARM WORK IS MUCH RETARDED

Land is Too Wet Except in Hilly Places—Pasture for Cattle Good.

"Not one half of the farmers of the county have made any advance in getting on to their land and seeding has been greatly retarded," was Reeve Scott's comment on farm conditions at present. The fields throughout the county are very wet and only on the sides of a hill can any work be done. In the ordinary fields the horses are to their knees in mud, and it is only with continued dry weather that favourable conditions can be reached.

UNNA DEFINES A CAUSE.

European Skin Specialist Says Dandruff is Caused by Parasites.

Upon that theory, proved beyond a doubt, a cure for dandruff was sought after. Scientists, chemists, druggists, and physicians, all "took a hand" and the successful issue is the present product known as "Newbro's Herpicide."

This remedy actually kills the parasites that infest the hair bulb, does its work most effective and contains not an atom of substance injurious to any thing else than the germ alone. Herpicide causes the hair to grow as nature intended it should, soft and abundant.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10 cents in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Sold by McDermid & Jury, Druggists; also Payne's Drug Store. One dollar bottles guaranted.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

Spring is in the air, giving the promise of Summer, and reminding us that the Y. W. C. A. Summer Conference is almost here.

Where is it to be? What will it be like? Who is going? Is it worth while? are the questions that pop into a girl's mind as she reads the announcements.

Of course the answer she gets is an enthusiastic description of the 'Summerland of Muskoka." "This paradise of lake and stream, of forest and island, far from the haunts of men, where Mother Nature lies ready to reveal her secrets to those who have ears to hear and eyes to see."

There is no better centre from which to explore this Canadian Lakeland than the Elgin House, on Lake Joseph, where the first Canadian Y. W. C. A. Conference is to be held June 26th to July 5th.

The afternoon will be given up wholly for recreation. A special committee is making the arrangements for launch trips through the lakes, bathing, boating, tennis, and picnics into the woods.

The morning and evening programmes will consist of Bible study hours, Mission Study, Conferences on the lines of work carried on in the Association, presentation of home and foreign mission work, and addresses by strong speakers.

Among the speakers and Bible and mission study leaders are President Mackenzie, of Hartford Seminary, Canon Cody, Toronto; Rev. John Timothy Stone, Beltimore; Rev. John MacNeill, Toronto; Prof. Gilmour, McMaster University; Prof. Reynolds, of Guelph, Mrs. McLaurin, of India, Dr. Jean Dow, of China, and Miss Thomas, Toronto.

The purpose of the Conference is to lead young women into a deeper knowledge of God, and into service for Him, as the one life which satisfies, and in the second place, to consider the best methods by which the Association may accomplish this end.

We feel satisfied that our Conference, as far as place, accommodation, and programme is concerned, will be very successful, and most profitable, but the far-reaching success of it depends largely on the attendance.

Miss McCalla will be glad to meet and have a talk with any and every girl who would like to spend these ten happy days at the Conference.

The Bible Circle will hold its monthly missionary hour to-morrow (Friday) evening at 8 o'clock. A cordial welcome to every girl to meet with us and learn more of the home life, also of the wonderful growth of the kingdom of Christ, in Japan and Korea.

The "Merry-Makers" meet this afternoon at 4.15. All girls between the ages of twelve and fifteen are invited to join this Club.

A trip to the woods is being planned for Saturday afternoon, leaving the Y. W. C. A. at 2 o'clock.

We would like to have twelve go up to beautiful Lake Joseph from Peterborough. A number have already signified their intention of going. Are there not others? The expense at the Elgin House for ten days' board and room will be $7.00. There is a programme fee of $3.00, payable by every one in attendance. The Railways offer their usual rate of one and one third fare for round trip.

Will You Help Us to Make SATURDAY A Day of Days?

We make it to your practical advantage to do so. Read these items carefully and come Saturday for these tempting Bargains.

"Are Women Ungrateful?" Is The Question Mr. W. A. Bailey Asks

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The article you published on Saturday, in which it was said that the gentler sex are unselfish, but have little or no sense of gratitude, is worthy of some thought. Are women really ungrateful? If so, they possess a virtue for which they do not evidently always have credit. If this were "the silly season" the views of your readers would be interesting; but the times are serious." But most of all when thou blamest a woman as faithless or ungrateful, turn to thyself. For the fault is manifestly thine own, whether thou didst trust that a woman who had such a disposition would keep her promise, or when conferring thy love thou didst not confer it absolutely, nor yet in such way as to have received from thy very act all the profit. For what more dost thou want when thou hast done a service Art thou not content that thou hast done something conformable to thy nature, and dost thou seek to be paid for it? just as if the eye demanded a recompense for seeing, or the feet for walking For as these members are formed for a particular purpose, and by working according to their several constitutions obtain what is their own; so also as man is formed by nature to acts of benevolence, when he has done anything benevolent or in any other way conducive to the common interest, he has acted conforably to his constitution and he gets what is his own." Such is the philosophy of M. Antonius.

W. A. BAILEY.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, May 13.—Bullish manipulation was again in evidence in the stock market to-day. The coalers under the lead of Del. & Hudson, and Reading were the most conspicuous, making smart gains and giving tone to the whole market. Rock Islands were put to new high record figures as were also C. & O., Amn. Can. issues, Kansas City Southern and Southern Railways. The market was not as active as yesterday, but the buying was just as impressive. The bears had an innings yesterday, but they were sorry to-day as they sold themselves into a hole again, just as they have done on numerous other occasions during the last few months. The bulls have splendid control over the market ,but don't want it to rise too fast and check it every time it moves up very much. Professionals and outsiders are as a rule bearish, which keeps a nice standing short interest in the market all the time. The market will continue to advance just as long as these conditions exist.

650 DOG TAGS ARE OUT NOW

That Number Has Been Issued at the City Clerk's Office so Far This Season.

Something over 650 dog tags have been bought already this spring as compared with 950 last year, showing that there are still several hundred to be accounted for. The alternative is the police court which will now be tried. After a fair effort is made by notification through the press and otherwise the only other course is to extract the necessary price of a tag through police court proceedings. More will be heard about this as the "tickets" are served.

BASEBALL

There will be a meeting of the Junior Church Baseball League in the Y. M. C. A. to-morrow night for the purpose of drawing up the schedule for the season, and transacting other business. A full attendance of representatives of the different teams is expected.

In connection with the Intermediate Baseball League meeting on Friday night, there will be a number of questions introduced. One of these is that all of last year's players be allowed to play again. This will effect several of the teams, giving them men who are barred by the recent rule passed. Those in favour of it state that there is no reason why those who played Intermediate last year should be prevented from participating in the coming series. The representatives are asked to think the matter over. It is stated that the teams will practically all receive an advantage by this rule if it is favourably received.

Some very attractive features will be presented at the Choir Concert of Murray Street Church on Friday evening of this week. The chorus of ladies' voices will be of a very high order. The Retail Trade Getting Uneasy About The Contract

The Examiner is publishing the following article at the request of the Canadian Grocer, which represents the grocery trade of the country:

Retailers throughout Ontario are becoming keenly interested in the school book contract which has fallen into the hands of the T. Eaton Co.

It would be surprising indeed, were the retail merchants of this country to remain silent and inactive under the circumstances.

The fact that the T. Eaton Company have practically been given a monopoly of the school book trade of Ontario is, perhaps, of very little importance directly to the retailers, but when its far-reaching significance is taken into account it is a matter that should very much interest every one of them.

It is estimated that during the first year some 700,000 books will be required from the T. Eaton Company. This means that something like 700,000 children throughout Ontario will send to the Toronto departmental store for the necessary readers.

The significance of this should make every retailer sit up and think, and think seriously, for not only will it be books that the parents will send to the T. Eaton Company for, but with the catalogue of that firm in their possession they will naturally, when they have to send for books, purchase other things.

While this menacing state of affairs is, for the present, confined to Ontario, business men in other parts of Canada cannot afford to remain disinterested spectators.

The T. Eaton Company can print the same books for other provinces, the only condition being that they shall not charge a higher price than that in Ontario.

What does this mean? This and nothing else. If the Governments of the other provinces become possessed of the idea of getting books at less than cost they may be led into the temptation of making a similar contract. The retail merchants all over the country would then find themselves in a similar position to that of their confreres in Ontario. It behooves them, therefore, to be on the alert.

It is not our intention for one moment to blame the Government of Ontario. Its first thought was no doubt to get cheap books for the school children throughout that province. But in its desire for this it doubtless overlooked the fact that it was giving a monopoly to an institution which has already done a great deal of damage to the retail trade throughout the country.

Before tenders are sought the Government experts no doubt ascertained the approximate cost of printing the books. They must have known, therefore, when the tenders were received that the figures of the T. Eaton Company were below the cost of production. Knowing this, it is unfortunate that they did not realize that the T. Eaton Company, not being a publishing house in the ordinary sense, must have had some ulterior motive in quoting the figures they did.

This ulterior motive is now obvious to everyone. As we pointed out in a previous issue, every book will bear the imprint of the T. Eaton Company and that every book that goes out will probably carry advertising literature, not only regarding books, but merchandise in general. As far as the retail trade throughout the country is concerned, it is here that the heaviest blow is struck.

It is not yet too late for the Government to deprive the T. Eaton Company of this trade menacing evil. It has the power to have the imprint of the educational department put on the books and the books delivered to the educational department and through that department distributed among the purchasers.

Self-interest demands that the retail merchants of Ontario stir up both their local members in the Ontario Legislature and the local press, with a view to bringing about the necessary modifications in the contract.

DYNAMITE BLAST WAS PREMATURE

Twenty Persons Lose Their Lives at South Bethlehem, N.Y.

OFFICIALS AMONG THE DEAD

Premature Explosion of Thousand-Pound Blast Results In Death of General Manager and Several Officials of Road Improvement Company and Twelve Italians —Shock Felt For Miles.

Albany, N.Y., May 13.—At least 20 men were killed by a premature blast of dynamite yesterday afternoon in a stone quarry operated by the Callanan Road Improvement Co., near the village of South Bethlehem, 11 miles southwest of Albany.

The dead included John H. Callanan, vice-president and general manager of the company; Chas. D. Callanan, a brother; Leroy McMillan, assistant superintendent; Henrickson, steam drill foreman; Fred Snyder, master mechanic; Fred Zapport, agent of the National Power Co., New York, with two foremen and 12 Italian workmen.

One thousand pounds of dynamite exploded, scattering the bodies of the victims for hundreds of feet around, and it was with difficulty that the blackened, dismembered remains, mutilated almost beyond recognition, were identified.

Clothing hung in shreds from the bodies, from which the heads of some were missing; others lacked arms or legs or both. Italians with shovels searched here and there for portions of bodies, bringing the gruesome loads in boxes to the engine house, which served as a temporary morgue.

The blast was caused by the premature discharge of a percussion cap. Houses in the vicinity were shaken, windows shattered and consternation reigned in the little village half a mile away.

Soon after the explosion fire was discovered in the woods in which the dynamites storehouse was located, and it was feared for a time that the flames might reach the building in which a carload of explosives were stored, but the fire was extinguished before the danger was reached.

Five of the great charges of dynamite remain unexploded in the quarry. This rendered somewhat difficult the search for the bodies, the workmen fearing further explosions.

In Danger of German Warship.

Sydney, N.S.W., May 13.—Captain Strachan, master of the Australian ketch Envy, has arrived at Brisbane and has fallen foul of the German authorities, who accuse him of kidnapping natives and carrying away the German flag from Tobie Island.

The German vice-consul informed him that a German man-of-war would seize the vessel if she went outside the three-mile limit. Capt. Strachan claims the ownership of the island, which he says he first visited in 1894.

STRIKERS ARE QUIET.

Paris Labor Troubles Have Been Free From Violence Thus Far.

Paris, May 13.—The first day of the postal strike passed peacefully. No disturbances were reported and the movement appears to have not gained ground.

The services in Paris and throughout the provinces last night, with the exception of the railway mail clerks, are normal, and as a result there has been no need to take advantage of the preparations made by various business organizations and commercial bodies to carry on a private service.

The Cabinet last night summarily dismissed 228 men under the decree issued on March 18, which authorized the discharge of strikers from the state service and made other provisions for dealing with recalcitrants. The Ministers are very confident that the removal of the principal fomenters of the agitation will have the effect of crushing the movement.

The leaders of the strike experienced another discouragement in the failure of the miners' congress at Lens to vote a sympathetic strike, and up to the present none of the trades unions has made a sign of joining the movement.

Physical breakdown, due, it is believed, to overwork, while employed as a clerk at the White House, Washington, caused Thomas H. Netherland, 46 years of age, to commit suicide.

The "devil car," propelled by a steel mannikin, in which President Grand and King Edward rode, and which scared western Indians into submission, is to contest with a modern automobile.

President Taft has been asked to grant an unconditional pardon for Fred Doumouchelle, the Walkerville hotelkeeper arrested last year for participating in a counterfeiting scheme, who is dying in a Detroit hospital.

Did He Poison a Dog?

Windsor, May 13.—Dr. Merwin, manufacturer of patent medicines, is charged with poisoning a dog belonging to Walter Woods. The latter will produce a witness to testify that he saw Merwin deposit a piece of poisoned cheese in front of the postoffice, and that the dog ate it.

About two years ago Merwin was fined for poisoning another dog. He admitted placing the death dealing food on his lawn, but claimed he intended it for sparrows. Several dogs have been poisoned of late, but Merwin maintains he is not responsible.

He is so annoyed over what he terms persecution, that he announces he will sell his house here and leave the city.

Favor Perks' Scheme.

Ottawa, May 13.—Sir Robert W. Perks, the British capitalist and Parliamentarian, who is here to confer with the Government regarding the building of the Georgian Bay Canal by a company of which he is the head, but which might at any time be expropriated by the Government, has been interviewing several Cabinet Ministers and members.

A number of members have signed a memorial to the Government favoring construction of the canal on the terms suggested.

Reprieve for Blythe.

Ottawa, May 13.—Walter C. E. Blythe, the Englishman who beat his wife to death at Agincourt with a poker, was to hang in Toronto's jail yard to-day, but a last minute reprieve was sent yesterday by the Minister of Justice, upon the arrival of further evidence as to Blythe's past submitted by his legal representative.

"We have reprieved Blythe," said Hon. Mr. Aylesworth last evening, "but a reprieve simply means a postponement. This reprieve is not necessarily an indication of our final decision. It is simply a delay of execution to give us an opportunity of going over thoroughly the representations which have been made to us by the prisoner's counsel."

Seeding In the West.

Winnipeg, May 13.—Seeding in the west will be practically completed by the end of the week, and most of it will be done by to-day.

This, in brief, is the substance of a special crop report issued yesterday by the grain agent of the C.P.R. covering the three prairie provinces. With the heavy rainfall of Tuesday, the crops will receive great benefit, as this is just what was required.

Earthquake In Formosa.

Victoria, B.C., May 13.—News of a severe earthquake in Formosa, causing considerable loss of life, chiefly in the northern part, was brought by the steamer Admiral Hamelen, which arrived yesterday from Havre via the Orient. The centre of the disturbance appeared to be in the sea off Keelung and Giran.

THE BILL HAS BEEN ADOPTED

Mr. Graham Frames Satisfactory Level Crossings Measure.

DIVORCE COURT NEGATIVED

Motion In Senate Is Withdrawn After Discussion — Mr. Lancaster Enters Plea for His Crossings Amendment — Insurance Bill Favors Full Payment to Paralytics and the "Insurably Dead."

Ottawa, May 13.—The Beique amendment to the Lancaster level crossings bill was incorporated in the Graham Railway Bill yesterday morning.

"I wanted something that would pass both Houses," said the Minister of Railways. Mr. Graham explained that the existing law would remain.

On the third reading of the bill Mr. Lancaster moved to substitute his own level crossing provision for the Senate amendment. The House divided and the motion was defeated on a vote of 100 to 70, H. H. Miller, Liberal, of South Grey, voting with the Opposition.

An amendment by C. J. Doherty to hold railways liable for loss of life in fires caused by locomotives, was lost on the same division.

Wilfrid Nantel of Terrebonne, got in an amendment requiring railways to print their time tables in French and English on lines in Quebec.

Claude Macdonnel of Toronto sought vainly to have the act amended by requiring railways issuing commutation tickets to not withdraw them without the consent of the Railway Board, also to require railways issuing them to other points from the same centre within the same or a lesser radius. Richard Blain seconded the amendment.

But Mr. Graham had not had time to see just what a general application of such a law would mean, and he would not like to adopt the amendment without study. "I am not unsympathetic," said he; "I will take the matter up in recess."

The public accounts committee yesterday morning adopted the final report of the sub-committee which has been looking over the list of assets figuring in the Dominion's balance sheet, with a view of wiping off any bad debts. The net result is an addition of $473,759 to the debt balance, instead of nearly two millions, as was previously announced. The assets struck off totaled $837,646, while a liability of $363,387 which has been on the books of the Finance Department for many years as owing to the defunct bank of Upper Canada was also eliminated.

There was some discussion over an item of $30 standing in the I.C.R. accounts as a claim against Sir Robert Wetherbee, ex-chief justice of Nova Scotia, in connection with a special train hired by him on the occasion of his son's illness, and for which he declined to pay. It was finally decided to remit the bill.

William Ross of Halifax yesterday offered a resolution to the Senate declaring against divorce by Parliament and favoring divorce courts instead.

Senator Ellis, seconding the motion, said four provinces had divorce courts, and for the others the Senate acted. In his opinion, the Senate should rid themselves of that duty.

Senator Power disputed Senator Ross' argument that the Catholic Bible could be read to permit divorce. He favored the present system because it made divorce difficult to obtain. With a divorce court in Ontario there would be twenty times more divorces.

Senator Ross—"What about the poor?"

Senator Power said that poor people did not seem to qualify for divorce as wealthy people did.

Senator Ross withdrew his motion, saying he only wanted an expression of opinion.

Correspondence laid on the table of the House of Commons by the Minister of Labor shows that there have been complaints of ill-treatment of laborers on the Pacific section of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

E. J. Chamberlain, general manager, says in a letter that Labor Organizer Daly "is trying to make all the trouble he can." Complaints were, first, that the men on Pacific section were ill-fed, and ill-treated and, secondly, that they were mulcted to an unnecessary amount for hospital money.

As to this Mr. Chamberlain says that Foley, Welch and Stewart are giving as good a medical service as does the G.T.P. itself, and that as a matter of fact at the time of his writing they were $17,000 behind, but the best proof of the success of the hospital service on the Prince Rupert section is that the health has been generally good, and that there have been very few cases of typhoid.

The new insurance bill was reported by the banking and commerce committee yesterday.

An amendment providing liberal treatment to persons totally disabled was made. It permits the payment of the whole amount of a policy to certain persons "insurably dead." This would make it possible for a paralytic to receive the full amount of the insurance due to him.

Hits Rocks on First Trip.

Halifax, May 13.—The steamer Amelia on the south shore route between Halifax and St. John, arrived in port yesterday badly damaged by striking a ledge off Gull Rock, near the entrance to Lockport Harbor.

This was her first round trip on the south shore since receiving the subsidy from the Dominion Government to perform the service.

Presentation to Mr. Borden.

Ottawa, May 13.—Geo. A. Clare, M.P. for South Waterloo, and the Conservative members presented to Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Borden yesterday a landscape painting, the work of Homer Watson. Claude Macdonnel of Toronto made the formal presentation.

Hindus In Salmon Canneries.

Vancouver, B.C., May 13.—Hindus will this season become salmon cannery hands and in the north scores of them will be employed, according to a statement made yesterday by a northern canner. He said:

"Chinese hands have become so scarce that we simply have to take any labor that offers itself and the Hindus may aid us in solving the problem of how to provide ourselves with 'roustabout' labor. They will not be allowed to come in contact with the fish."

Five Years for Stabbing.

Belleville, May 13.—In the County Court here before Judge Deroche, a young man, Mannual Hannah, residing in the northern part of the county, was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary on a charge of stabbing Louis Saucier. He was given two years on a charge of assaulting Wm. Beaudy.

Arranging for New Railway.

Montreal, May 13.—Premier Murray and R. E. Finn, M.P.P. for Halifax, are here to-day together with Mr. Sinclair, M.P. for Guysboro, and it is said that they will conclude arrangements that will ensure the construction of the Halifax and Guysboro Railway.

Clerk Charged With Theft.

Ottawa, May 13.—Albert Dorion, a clerk in the Department of Mines and Fisheries, was charged in the Police Court with the theft of 26 dozen photographic plates, the property of the Government. He was remanded for a week.

Woman Murdered In B.C.

Vancouver, B.C., May 13.—Face downwards the body of a well-dressed woman was discovered yesterday under a clump of brush in Burnaby. The corpse has apparently been exposed to the elements about four months.

License Reduction In Windsor.

Windsor, May 13.—A notice of motion is before the Windsor City Council to reduce the number of hotel licenses here from 27 to 17. A by-law will likely be submitted at the municipal election next January.

STOPPING OF THE BOUT IN THE EIGHTH ROUND SAVED DALY FROM KNOCKOUT LAST NIGHT

Jimmy Kelly Had All The Better of Last Night's Bout---His Punch and Stamina Were Too Much for the Toronto Boy, Who Was Handled Pretty Hard---Go Was a Fine Exhibition.

Jimmy Kelly, of Buffalo, put it all over Tommy Daly, the Toronto boxer in their ten-round go at the Brock Street rink last night, the Buffalo boy having his man so badly dazed that the bout was stopped in the eighth, and he was given the decision. A knockout was due any minute, and Referee Geo. Graham wisely put an end to the scrap, as Daly had no chance in the world to last out. He took the count in the seventh from a left swing to the jaw, and the gong saved him, but Kelly went back at him in the eighth, chased him to the ropes, and floored him with a couple of jabs to the jaw. The Toronto boy staggered to his feet at the count of three, but Kelly was waiting for him and the referee flagged the bout, doing the right thing in the right place.

The bout was easy for Kelly, easier than many of the fans fancied that it would be. The Buffalo boy had the punch, and the stamina and in addition was just as clever and shifty as Daly, if his style was not as pretty. Daly fights with a low crouch, and close guard, while Kelly leaves himself apparently open, stands erect and holds his hands high. From this position he suddenly whips out a right or left jab like a flash and it was these lightning-like jabs that soon had Daly in distress. Kelly fought cautiously for the first couple of rounds, landing several nice ones, but apparently waiting to figure out Daly's methods. Then, evidently believing the Toronto boy was not dangerous, he opened out on him, and and what he did was a shame. A few hard jabs left Daly in pretty bad condition. Kelly worked in a few to the stomach that jarred Daly badly, and then the whips to the jaw finished the business. The Toronto boy clinched frequently to save, and his pretty style was not effective, Kelly having no trouble in breaking through his guard at will, and he might have finished him earlier had he desired. He finished him quickly when he did go at him.

The bout was a good one all the way, and the crowd, which was fairly large, enjoyed the affair immensely. Kelly was in right from the beginning because of his clean tactics. "Cleanest boy I ever saw in the ring" said one enthusiast.

The preliminary bouts were interesting. Two well-known local boys met in the first, a three-round affair, which came to a sudden termination early in the second. One of the boys got a swing on the jaw that put him down and out.

Two other local boys met in an interesting three-round bout in the second preliminary. They mixed it up well, and gave a good fast exhibition. The decision was a draw.

TOMMY DALY,

LOCAL BASEBALL

The committee appointed by the Intermediate League to draw up the Schedule for 1909, met last night in the Examiner office and prepared a report which will be presented at the next meeting of the executive. The members of the committee are J. D. Clarke, W. J. Metherall and J. McNirn. According to the report the first game will be played May 29, when the T. A. S. and Park Nines open the league. The schedule will be published when adopted.

• • •

The Park St. Athletic Club is the latest to apply for admission to the Intermediate City League. Notice of their request was not received until last night and the schedule committee were then drawing up the list of the games for the season. However, these have yet to be submitted to the executive and the Park St. promise to have a representative at the next meeting when they will present a strong argument in favour of their being accepted in the flock. Jack Pilling will manage the team and Rev. Mr. Riddiford who has always taken a deep interest in athletics is also helping the boys on to organization. For this purpose a special meeting has been called for this evening in the Old Park St. Church building and all the young men interested in baseball are requested to be present. The Park St. team considers that they will be able to make a good showing in the league and are therefore anxious to be allowed to play.

• • •

Gus Rose will do the twirling for the West Ends this year

• • •

Eddie King is reported to be back with his old team.

• • •

Some one has been asking what line-up would the Straths present to the rest of the kindergarteners when they begin their play. If Bill Metherall has not something up his sleeve, more than one guess has gone wrong. The question is "who are they?" The fighting manager may get into the game himself this year He will if he is needed, but then nobody thinks for a minute that he would neglect to have a complete line-up in order to safeguard against such a state of affairs.

• • •

Jack Pilling would make a good addition to the list of managers. The only regret is that Park St. did not come along earlier. Some of the teams do not want to open up to them now unless one of the other teams drop out.

• • •

A meeting of the Intermediate League has been called for Friday night at [illegible] in the Y M C A. The schedule will be submitted and everything will be got ready for the opening games. FORM 2B WON FIRST GAME IN THE COLLEGIATE LEAGUE

The Collegiate Institute Inter-form League had an auspicious opening yesterday afternoon at Riverside Park the contest being not only the first game in the League, but also the first match of the season at the pretty ball grounds across the river. The diamond although soft, was in pretty fair shape, and a few days of warm sunshine will fix things up nicely.

Form 2 B had an easy victory over Form 1 A in the opening game, the senior form winning by 18 runs to 3. They had all the better of the play throughout, fielding cleanly and doing some timely hitting. Minorgan, who pitched for the winners, was always effective, and was given good support, while on the other hand, Armstrong, who twirled for the lower form was bumped hard at times, and his team did not help him out any by blowing up in the pinches. Some very snappy fielding was done, and the game, in spite of the one-sided score, was always interesting.

Principal Kenner umpired the contest to the entire satisfaction of both teams. The line-up was as follows:

Form 2 B—Layfield c, Minorgan p, Conroy 1b, Crane 2b, Rankin ss, Gibson 3b, Sheehy lf, Pearson cf, Fessenden rf.

Form 1A—Hayes c, Armstrong p, Leahy 1b, Kelly 2b, Laing ss, Stevenson 3b, Dixon rf, Bartlett cf, Carlyle rf.

HERB MARTIN DOES THINGS TO THE LOCAL ALLEY RECORD

Herb. Martin gave Geo. Cairns' 264 score, which has been the record at the P. B. C. Alleys since they were opened, an awful jolt yesterday afternoon, when he raised the high score mark to 279. Now 279 is rolling some, Clarice, and the figure is liable to stand for some time. It is the first time that Cairns' score has been beaten and it has never even been equalled before on the local alleys. Martin was bowling with a traveller at the time and started out disastrously, getting a split in his first frame which yielded him nine pins. Then he got going and scored eleven strikes in a row, raising his score by thirties from 9 to 279.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

Thanks to Ben. Houser and his big bat the Torontos took the second game of the series from Jersey City yesterday, winning 2 to 1. The big first baseman's timely swat came in the ninth when it looked as if the game was to go into extra innings. Kellogg pitched for Toronto and held the slugging Skeeters down to four hits, although he gave six bases on balls. He faced George Merritt, who had not lost a game this season. Neither team scored until the seventh, when Foster hit to the right field bleachers for a homer. Toronto evened up in their half on Mahling's double, an infield out and Spahr's error on Houser's grounder to the pitcher. Houser's homer in the ninth gave the victory to Toronto.

The Bronchos Lost

Strange to say the other Eastern League games were won and lost by the same score, 2 to 1. Newark beat Rochester by that figure, and as a result the Torontos are within hailing distance of the leaders, although a defeat for the Leafs to-day will put them back in third place. The Sailors won yesterday's game in the third, getting two runs. Snyder and Beech pitched for Rochester and allowed but four hits, while McGinnity was touched up for ten and at that won his game.

Baltimore Lost

Baltimore at last won a game, beating Buffalo yesterday, 2 to 1. The Orioles got after Vowinkle in the fourth and scored two runs. Adkins pitched for Baltimore.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE

Pittsburg still leads the National League, although the Pirates were beaten 3 to 1 by the Phillies. It was a pitcher's battle between Moren, of Philadelphia and Leifield, of Pittsburg, five hits being made off each, but errors by Wagner gave the Phillies the game.

Dodgers Kalsomined

St. Louis gave Brooklyn a bad walloping yesterday, trimming the Superbas 10 to 0. Beebe had the home-sters at his mercy, holding them to two hits, while Wilhelm, for Brooklyn was batted hard and regularly.

Twenty Charities

Twenty bases on balls was the feature of the Cincinnati-Boston game which the Reds won 6 to 2. Karger, who pitched for Cincinnati, gave no less than twelve free passes himself, but allowed only four hits. Boston having fifteen men left on bases through failure to hit. McCarthy was easy for the Reds and was yanked out in the fourth in favor of Lindaman.

The Big Indian Hit Some

Meyers, the Indian catcher, of the New York Giants, was very prominent yesterday, and to his fall hitting is due the credit for a 3 to 2 victory over Chicago. He tied the score in the [illegible] with a timely single, and brought Bridwell home in the ninth with the winning run with a double [illegible]. Overall pitched for Chicago and Rube Marquard for the Giants, and the pair had a merry battle until the big slab weakened in the end.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

In the American League Detroit made a sorry exhibition of New York, beating the Highlanders 11 to 4. Wil[illegible] who pitched for New York was wild and his infield support was poor, while Detroit ran bases at will. Summers pitched for Detroit, and while batted hard, was good in the pinches. Cobb's hitting and base-running were prominent factors.

White Sox Lost

Chicago lost the third game of the series to Washington yesterday in a poorly played and long drawn out game, each team using two pitchers. George Browne, purchased by Washington from the Chicago Nationals, had a double and two singles. The Senators won 6 to 2. The pitchers were Owen and Scott for Chicago, and Smith and Johnson for Washington.

Athletics Win

Two singles and an error gave the Athletics the only run in the Philadelphia-St. Louis game yesterday, in the eighth innings. It was a pitchers' battle between Graham, of St. Louis, and Bender, of Philadelphia.

Chech Still Unbeaten

Chech, Boston's crack pitcher, who has yet to lose a game was too much for his former team-mates on the Cleveland team, the Naps losing 3 to 2. Chech was very effective with men on bases. Berger, who pitched for Cleveland, struck out ten men and allowed but six hits, but Boston bunched two doubles and two singles with an error in the fourth, winning the game right there.

MARATHON RACE ON ROLLER SKATES

Great interest is being taken in the Marathon on roller skates at the Auditorium Rink to-night and the probabilities are that there will be a big crowd present for the event, the first of its kind ever held in Peterborough. There will be a large field of starters and Mayor Rush will give the starting signal sharp at 9 o'clock. The boys have been in training for the event for some time and the race promises to be a hot one. They will go the full Marathon distance of 26 miles 385 yards. A number of the entrants had a work-out last night, and the leader covered ten miles in 50 minutes which is sure going some. There are a number of sprinters in the race, who will make things interesting for the first few miles, but the pluggers will be heard from later on.

TURF CLUB MATINEE WILL BE HELD MAY 24

The Christmas matinee was the last race conducted by the Turf Club, and although there was not a large crowd present the heats were some of the most interesting that have ever been seen on a local track. On the 24th of May they will hold another matinee, which, from the standpoint of the entry list, will be better than anything of this kind. There will be horses from Port Hope, Lindsay, Lakefield, Keene, Peterborough, and other places, and in the 2.50 and free-for-all classes the horses starting will be some of the best in this district. The feeling is that with good weather the matinee will be one of the best the Club has ever conducted. As the horsemen all know each other and have met before the rivalry is sure to be keen and the races well contested.

CHANGES IN THE KNOX CHURCH CHOIR

Several changes have been made in connection with the choir of Knox Presbyterian Church. Miss Lottie Chiles has been appointed organist and Mr. Ruse, of the Evans Piano Co. has accepted the position of choir leader. Miss Chiles is well known to the members of the church, having been a member of the congregation before her removal from the city.

Mr. Ruse has had a good grounding in music and should bring the choir to even a higher standard than it has enjoyed in the past.

A Thackeray Story.

A correspondent of London Notes and Queries contributes this anecdote of Thackeray:

Thackeray once desired to succeed Cardwell as M. P. for the city of Oxford and when returning from his canvass said: "What do you think, Cardwell! Not one of your constituents ever heard of me and my writings." He prefaced "constituents" with a strongish adjective.

Strange, if true. They must have been starving in the midst of plenty.

Moving Stairs For Waiters.

It is a strange fact that one of the greatest conveniences possible in the working mechanism of a hotel is being successfully introduced in foreign hotels and, although manufactured in New York, is only beginning to be heard of in the United States. It is known as an escalator and is a moving runway or stairs for carrying the waiters from the level of the kitchen to upper dining rooms. Less than a year ago one of them was shipped to a leading hotel in Stockholm, Sweden, and some time later another to a hotel in Buenos Aires. Others are being prepared for shipment to hotels in Europe.—Popular Mechanics.

Mr. Roosevelt's Forehandedness.

For the months immediately following his exit from Africa in the spring of 1910 Mr. Roosevelt has three engagements, the exact dates for which are as yet necessarily indefinite. He will deliver three series of lectures—at Oxford, at the Sorbonne in Paris and at the University of Berlin. As a hint of Mr. Roosevelt's forehandedness and capacity as a worker it is worth saying that all these lectures are already written.—Collier's.

By FRANCES POMEROY.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

"The very fact that every one expects me to marry you," declared Clara Adams, "is the main reason why I don't want to do it. It makes me furious to have your parents and my parents decide the whole matter for us."

"I am glad you feel that way about it," Roger Armstrong declared heartily—at least, the cunning dog succeeded well in assuming an appearance of great heartiness. "Of course I was willing enough and am now to marry you to please our people, but I don't want you against your will, you know."

"That's it exactly," assented the girl. She did not, however, seem quite pleased. "Of course we'll be very good friends, and all that, still, but we simply must show independence. Naturally I'll be tremendously interested in the girl you marry, and I'll try to see that you get the right one."

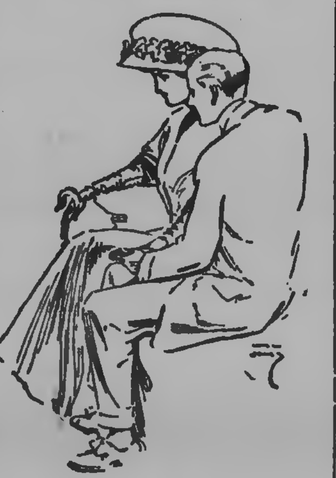
"And I'll be very much interested in your man," declared Roger. "I hope you'll be as happy as I mean to be. I'm going to look for a nice, quiet little cottage on a nice, quiet little street."

The girl looked distinctly displeased now, but she conquered herself bravely.

"Me, too," echoed she. "Another reason why I hate to have them arrange for me to marry you is because I know they'd expect us either to live in your father's place or in my father's home.

"I want a little place where there won't be a lot of servants and where I can go into the kitchen and cook myself without causing a miniature scandal.

"I mean to have a husband that's poor—that is, not too poor—and that has to work each day. And while he is gone during the day I'll fix everything nice and cozy and comfortable for him when he comes home tired out in the evening."



PUTTING HIS ARM AROUND HER, HE DREW HER CLOSE.

"You've got the idea!" cried Roger somewhat excitedly. "Why don't you pick out the kind of a place that you want so that you'll have it all ready when you find the kind of man that you want? I'll tell you what we'll do. You pick out your prospective home, and I'll pick out the kind of place I want for my wife. Then we'll compare them."

"All right," laughed the girl gayly and ran from the lawn, where they had been talking, up the path to the big stone house where she lived.

Pursuant to their plan, the young man met the girl the following afternoon.

"Did you find your home?" he asked gayly.

"Oh, yes, I did!" she cried. "It's the dearest little place imaginable. I fell in love with it at first sight. I can hardly wait for you to see it. And did you find your home too?"

"I certainly did," replied the man. "It's a dandy—a cozy little place back among the trees. Now all we need is the right man and the right girl. By the way, you may be interested—I saw a girl this morning that looked to me as if she would make just the right kind of a wife for me."

Clara did not smile so much at this.

"You aren't really thinking of marrying her?" she gasped.

"Oh, I think so," the man replied easily. "She looked very capable to me."

"I hope you'll be satisfied with her," the girl said after a piqued little silence. "I know I shall be satisfied with my husband. He's mighty handsome."

"What?" cried Roger. "You haven't gone and picked out your husband, have you?"

Clara demurely surveyed Rogers' countenance, which did not look quite so indifferent now, but betrayed decided annoyance.

"Yes," she replied. "I only realized today that he's the only man I want. Something—something brought my feelings for him to a decision all of a sudden."

"Well, I never!" ejaculated the man, a pained tone evident in his voice. "I—I never suspected that you were really in love, Clara. Who—who is this man?"

A bright light came into the girl's eyes as she surveyed his perturbation; but, nevertheless, she laughed gayly.

"I may tell you—some time," she replied, "but I'll not tell you now, for here we are almost at my house. Isn't it the dearest little place? See what a big veranda it has, and there's another big one in the rear, overlooking the sweetest old fashioned garden."

The man gazed at the house once and at the girl two or three times.

"Is this the house that you've picked out?" he asked finally.

"Yes," said the girl.

"Well, see here," remonstrated he. "It's rather cool of you, you know. This is the very house that I picked out for myself."

Some few minutes later the man and the girl were seated on the rear veranda, rather close together.

"You say you won't give up the house to my wife and me?" Roger asked.

"Silly!" replied Clara. "Of course I'll not."

"And, naturally," went on the man, "I'll not give it up to you and your husband. Consequently there's only one way out of it that I can see."

"What's that?" asked the girl, somewhat tremulously.

"Why, marry each other!"

A slow flush spread over the girl's face.

"But that's just what we don't want to do. Every one expects us to!"

At that moment voices came to them from the interior of the house. While they had been seated on the veranda some one had entered. Roger turned to the girl suddenly.

"It's our mothers," he whispered.

The girl nodded.

"I'm so glad that we've secured the lease on this dear house," one of the voices said. "It's an ideal place for Clara and Roger to begin their lives together."

The other voice assented, then went on, "I'm so happy in their happiness."

The voices trailed away as the speakers went into another room. Suddenly Roger turned to the girl and, putting his arm around her, drew her close.

"Dear," he said, "don't you think it would be a shame to bring sorrow to them—and to us—by not marrying each other?"

Apparently the girl's answer was satisfactory, for a moment later neither of them appeared as though sorrow could ever touch them.

Here is the question: The governor of Kgovjni, a very mean man, desiring to give a very small dinner party, invited his father's brother-in-law, his brother's father-in-law, his father-in-law's brother-in-law and his brother-in-law's father-in-law. How many guests were there?

Here is the answer: None. The governor dined alone.

Here is the explanation: The governor was a widower, with a marriageable daughter and a marriageable sister. The governor's father was also a widower. The governor and his father married sisters. Thus the governor became his father's brother-in-law. The governor's brother married the governor's stepdaughter; thus the governor became his brother's father-in-law. The governor's father-in-law married the governor's sister; thus the governor became his father-in-law's brother-in-law. The governor's brother-in-law married the governor's daughter; thus the governor became his brother-in-law's father-in-law. The governor therefore dined alone.

Two Could Do It.

Basel, Switzerland, was visited some years ago by an adventurous Frenchman whose ruling passion was the ascent of mountains shunned by most other tourists who value at least their soundness of limb. He tried strenuously to scale the Gopaltenborn for the sake of carving his name upon the peak, but all his efforts were vain. The next year he returned to the attack and eventually by taking many precautions arrived at the summit. On his next appearance at the table d'hote he recounted his exploit to the company and informed them that he had planted on the spot a blue silk flag containing his name embroidered in large characters. An Englishman, who had listened silently, rose from the table and marched out of the hotel. Two days afterward a parcel was delivered to the adventurous Gaul. He opened it and found inside his blue silk flag, which his English neighbor at the table d'hote had won from the peak by his own pluck and daring.

Why?

A little girl named Mary was noted for her propensity to ask questions. So fixed was the habit that she seldom knew when she was asking questions and life became to her one prolonged interrogation. Her mother, slightly worn by this peculiarity, sometimes took the opportunity of speaking "a word in season."

"Mother," cried Mary, bursting into the room one day, "what shall I name the kittens?"

"I should think," said the tired mother, fixing upon her a meaning eye, "you might call one of them 'Why' and the other 'What.'"

The names seemed to strike the child's fancy and were at once adopted. But the moral refused to stick, and indeed its existence was not even suspected, as was shown a day or two later.

"Mother," said Mary innocently, looking up from a prolonged cuddling of her pets, "why is Why's name Why?"

Lots Easier.

Bobby rushed out to meet his father the other night as he was returning from work and said breathlessly:

"Oh, papa, I won't have to study nearly so hard at school any more."

Now, Bobby had been doing far from well, and his father was pleased to hear of the new interest, hoping for better things.

"How's that, my son?" said he.

"Oh, I got put back a class."

A Straight Tip.

Johnnie (to new visitor)—So you are my grandma, are you? Grandmother—Yes, Johnnie. I'm your grandma on your father's side. Johnnie—Well, you're on the wrong side, you'll find out!—Philadelphia Bulletin.

GOT INTO TROUBLE WHILE IN LAKEFIELD

On Tuesday last Wm. King of Peterborough, appeared before John Hull, J.P., in the town hall, to answer to the charge of being drunk in a public place. He pleaded guilty and was fined $1 and costs, the total being $5. King came up from Peterborough on the morning train, well loaded with whiskey, to take the Lakehurst stage for the Cavendish Co.'s camp, and had only been a short time in the village when he was arrested by Constable Webster.—Lakefield News.

THE KINRADE JURY RESENT STATEMENTS IN THE PRESS

Examiner Special (2:45 p.m.)

Hamilton, Ont., May 14.—The Kinrade jurors strongly resent the report to the effect that they rendered their verdict under a misapprehension and that they intended holding another meeting to consider the matter and possibly to pass a vote of censure on the government; 2 or possibly 3 jurors profess to be dissatisfied with the verdict, but the remainder emphatically declare they are satisfied that they have been always so, and they have not the slightest intention of holding another meeting. Coroner Anderson says they could not meet as jurors anyway, because with the closing inquest their duties ceased altogether. The only way in which the matter could be re-opened would be to have another jury sworn in and the body exhumed. There is of course no thought of taking this action.

WATCH FOR THE EXAMINER'S SPORTING EDITION TO-MORROW

The Examiner will issue another sporting extra to-morrow night at 7:30 o'clock in order to give its readers the results of the big athletic meet at Hamilton, which will be held to-morrow afternoon for the purpose of raising funds to send Bobby Kerr to Engand to uphold the honour of Canada on the sprinting path. Nearly all the prominent athletes in Canada will take part in the meet, which will be one of the largest ever held in this country. The Examiner has therefore made arrangements to have the event thoroughly covered and the sporting extra will contain a full account of the affair, showing the results of the different races and the features of the meet.

In addition the special edition will give the results of the horse races at Louisville and Belmont, the scores of the Eastern, National and American League games, and all the other important sporting events of to-morrow afternoon, for which a complete telegraphic service has been arranged. Local sport will not be neglected and there will be a full account of the Midland Football League game between the Brintons and the Bethany teams. Much interest is being taken in the first appearance of the Britishers and as the Bethany team tied the Y.M.C.A. last Saturday, a fine game may be expected. Football enthusiasts will find the story of the game in the Examiner's sporting edition.

Followers of any line of sport will find just what they are looking for in the extra. There will be no need of waiting for Monday's papers, as everything will be covered in the special issue which will be off the press at 7:30 o'clock. The newsboys will have the extras on the street at or shortly after that hour, or they may be secured at the ffice.

Don't fail to get a copy of the Examiner's big sporting edition. It will be packed full of good things and will be well worth securing.

RATEPAYERS WILL HAVE CHANCE TO ACQUAINT THEMSELVES WITH THE CONDITIONS OF NEW BY-LAW

The ratepayers will be given every opportunity of acquainting themselves with the conditions of the Purity Ware, Limited, by-law. The Council has passed the by-law, and thereby has gone about as far as possible, and now the Board of Trade has taken it up, and on Tuesday, May 18th, the by-law will be discussed in detail at a public meeting to be held in the Council Chamber. The citizens entitled to vote will be given an opportunity to give their assent to the by-law or to refuse it, on June 1st. It is the duty, therefore, of every ratepayer to thoroughly understand the conditions of the by-law.

The members of the Council have done their best to safeguard the city's interests, and without exception all those who have been interviewed in regard to it are satisfied that the proposition is a good one and will strengthen the city's industrial standing.

Ald. Buller this morning was speaking of the by-law, and the Company itself and stated that he did not think the people were acquainted with the situation at all. He considers that it is becoming stronger than ever and in order that the conditions will be thoroughly understood he would like to see a capacity house at the meeting of the Board of Trade on Tuesday night.

The question will be discussed by Ald. Gillespie, the new President of the Board. He, as Chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, has been very closely in touch with the promoters of the Company, having visited New York, and is thoroughly capable of speaking on the by-law and of answering any questions which may be presented by ratepayers. The Purity Ware, Limited, being accepted the Rolling Mills are sure to be erected here, according to the statements of the men behind the Company.

Who Is To Be The Sovereign Grand Master Of The Order?

When the Grand Orange Lodge of British North America meets in Peterborough in a couple of weeks there may be some lively doings affecting the internal economy of the Orange Order.

[illegible] Sovereign Grand Master, Dr. Sproule, M.P., has for the past two years or more been desirous of resigning, owing to the pressure of the work and his inability owing to private and parliamentary duties to devote all the time necessary to the Order.

The difficulty of finding a successor acceptable to a majority of the members has, however, barred the way to Dr. Sproule's resignation. Lt.-Col. Scott, K. C., of Walkerton, is in the direct line of succession, being Deputy Sovereign Grand Master.

Mr. Essery, of London, Grand Master of Ontario West Orange Lodge has been mentioned by some as a likely candidate, one of the London papers supportoing him, but he has taken office for another year in Ontario West, and that puts him out of the running.

It is, however, now asserted that Col. Sam Hughes, M.P., has decided to accept nomination for the position, and should Dr. Sproule also run a very lively fight may be anticipated.

Beyond the fight for office, the coming session of the Grand Lodge may decide that the Orange Order should take in the future an independent line in politics and nominate candidates of its own in several constituencies for the Dominion Parliament as well as for the local legislatures.—Port Hope Guide.

Cemetery Directors Make Annual Trip And Are Much Pleased

The directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Co. made their annual spring visit to the cemetery yesterday afternoon at four o'clock and found the beautiful grounds resplendent in their new verdure and buds. The Superintendent, Mr. Frank Wise, has everything looking in its best form, and in another month, when the flowers are in full bloom, the beauty of the place will be increased immeasureably. Mr. Wise was instructed to make some exterior improvements to the chapel, to paint the various buildings, and to take peremptory steps to collect all monies now due. The directors are very pleased with the condition of the grounds and with the splendid manner with which they have received attention at the hands of the superintendent.

Only Coloured Cheese Is Made By Factories In Peterborough District

The opening meetings of the various cheese boards throughout the country have shown in some districts that a large percentage of white cheese was being manufactured. On enquiry it has been learned that this is only the case where the Boards are known as white or mixed. With the latter the prevailing price determines whether the output will be coloured or white. The Peterborough Board is coloured and nothing but coloured cheese is made in this district. Even in the Old Country markets it is known that the Board is coloured. It is expected that all the factories will be represented at the initial meeting of the Board.

OUR SUPPLY OF SAILORS

Canada's great lakes and her long coasts and coast shipping serve a treble purpose. They are an important element in our commerce; they constitute an admirable training school for a Canadian or a British navy, and they furnish first rate material. The sailor folk of the Maritime Provinces make among the best sailors or material for marines in the world. Bucknam Pasha is a specimen. The bluenoses are not content with forging ahead of other Canadians in church, and state, and university, but they show the way in getting preferment in naval matters. Bucknam Pasha, vice-admiral of the Turkish navy, is a born Nova Scotian and his first experience in sailing was on the great Canadian lakes. By virtue of his Bluenose brains, and Bluenose pluck, he got ahead till to-day he occupies one of the most important positions in the, not insignificant, navy of regenerated Turkey. Canada breeds great sailors.

The sailors and fishermen sailors of the Dominion of Canada number about 75,000, more than half as many as the British navy employs.

NEGLECTING THE NEEDFUL.

Sir James Whitney and Dr. Pyne, his titular Minister of Education, have got out a book on etiquette—teaching children the right "hold" in a waltz and how to use a finger bowl; but they haven't taken steps to introduce technical education into our schools. Now, etiquette is not to be disparaged; politeness, courtesy, etc., are valuable ornamental assets; but, of not much use in turning a steel shaft or building a steam boiler, or designing a highway or railway bridge. Ontario is largely an industrial province and a great majority of its school children will take mechanical employment, or occupy positions allied with industrial operations, as their calling in life, or become engineers, railway builders, or follow other of the numerous callings brought into play in the development of a country like Ontario, rich in all sorts of resources. To be at their best our future mechanics and allied professional men should grow up under the influences and advantages of technical education, should have its principles rubbed in from kindergarten up. But our Education Department fights shy of our great lack in our educational curriculum. Sir James Whitney grows hot under the collar at the slightest "invasion of provincial rights" and hurls the dictionary in cyclopean chunks at the heads of the invaders; but in the matter of technical education, he meekly surrenders the most momentous provincial right we possess, shirks responsibility, and calls on the Dominion Government to invade provincial rights by providing for technical education in Ontario. The Dominion Government is specifically prohibited from dealing in the slightest way with education; that is a matter reserved for the provinces alone. The Dominion Government has no more right to interfere in the matter of technical education, than it has to issue tavern licenses or amend the Municipal Act. Sir James Whitney and Dr. Pyne should assume and live up to their duty of providing for technical education. By their failure they are neglecting the needful.

Zeal and duty are not slow,
But on occasion's forelock watchful wait.—Milton

A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE

Gypsy Smith, the English evangelist, is cutting a wide swath in Toronto. He certainly has plenty of material to work upon, for "Toronto-the Good" has a few unregenerate sinners. If we judge by the newspaper reports he has made a deep impression upon the reporters. Their reports read like sermons with more unction in them than usually goes to the building of a journalistic story. If Gypsy Smith can bring about the conversion of a newspaper reporter, we can well believe the truth of the hymn that tells that "while the lamp holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return." But that recalls the possibility that the most promising convert "may return" to his old way of life. The Toronto Star is arguing the question whether or not Gypsy Smith's work will last. The question can be unequivocally answered by "no." The Divine power working through him can be permanent. The only real reform in life, in the domain of religion, temperance or any other form of morality, is founded on principle. Emotional religion, emotional temperance, emotional honesty, or emotional patriotism, is not the real thing. Emotion, like beauty, is only skin deep. Principle is rooted in the heart, and becomes a part of its fibre. Principle remains, emotion evaporates, and often leaves a nasty residuum, that is the emotional religious convert after a few days, weeks or months—never years—of spasmodic piety, relapses and becomes essentially worse than before. Religion is not a matter of feeling any more than honesty is. It is something that must penetrate and saturate the soul, and bring forth fruits meet for repentance. Christ's example, the true guide, consisted in doing. The religion that cannot be translated into a daily life of good works is as spurious as an imitation half dollar made out of a pewter ale cap. There may be, according to the theologian, no merit in good works. Their only value is as evidence of a good heart, of a good life, of a good character.

BROW-BEATING BARRISTERS

The Montreal Witness thus aptly criticises the lawyer who forgets that he is a gentleman when examining a witness:

"Whatever may be the etiquette of a coroner criticizing the Bench, the whole country will hail the courage of the Winnipeg coroner for having boldly denounced that gigantic crime of our modern courts of justice, the brow-beating and public slandering of witnesses. It is a matter of common remark that a lawyer, whatever his standing at his club, frequently ceases to be a gentleman or, indeed, anything better than a torturing savage when he has an innocent victim in the witness box who has no other relation to the case in hand than that of being supposed to be able to throw some light upon it. An honest citizen comes into the box, not by his own choice, but ordered there at the mere will of any lawyer, in the name of the King, and once there, is considered in the presence of one of His Majesty's judges, who represents the rights of the citizen, as a fit subject for the rack and the thumb-screw at the pleasure of an inquisitor who has by habit grown callous to all human feeling and to the most sacred of human rights; for to steal a man's reputation is a greater crime than to rifle his pockets."

PREACHING AND PRACTICE

The Canadian Courier thus refers to the appointment of J. Hilliard Carnegie, M.P.P., East Victoria, as distributor of law stamps at Osgoode Hall

> Just what value Mr. Carnegie's experience in farming will be to him in the distribution of law stamps is not apparent, but no doubt he will make a creditable officer of the Crown, as creditable as any other politician. The men now at work in Osgoode Hall are thus plainly told that strict attention to duties and long and faithful service does not count with Sir James Whitney's government as compared with long and faithful party service.
>
> If Mr. Borden intends to make civil service reform one of the planks in the Conservative platform at the next general elections, he should at once get to work on the Ontario wing of his party. Their conversion would be in order if the public is to believe that the Conservatives are any more in earnest than the Liberal Opposition previous to 1896. Mr. Borden might also take the question up seriously with Mr. McBride, Mr. Roblin and Mr Hazen, and point out that as their supreme chief he has declared for the abolition of the "spoils" system. Apparently these gentlemen have not heard of the Halifax platform.

What does the Courier expect? Does it go the length of thinking that its Conservative friends intend at this late day beginning to practise what they preach? In British Columbia, New Brunswick, and Manitoba, the Conservatives have the power to inaugurate civil service reform, and in these quarters we hear nothing about it. At Ottawa they have no power and civil service reform becomes a great Conservative principle to be put in practice—by their opponents. Let these men get into office and the memory of Conservative statesmen will become a blank in the matter of civil service reform.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hamilton ought by this time to be behind the village stage, "when the convenience of a comparatively few can operate to obstruct legislation for the welfare of the whole community," says the Hamilton Herald, in discussing a proposed by-law to prohibit dogs running at large between March 15 and October 15. Citizens of Peterborough who have lawns and gardens think and feel that Peterborough should have passed the village stage long ago.

BRITISH DEFENCE

In his budget speech in the British House of Commons, Hon. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, anticipated Conservative criticism to the effect that the money raised under the budget would be deverted to expenditures on "demagogic" social reforms, and to the neglect of providing protection from national peril. Upon this matter, Mr. George said:

Whatever be the cost, no great country can afford to shirk its responsibilities for the defence of its coasts against every possible invader. We all value too highly the immunity which this country has so long enjoyed from the horrors of an invaded land to endanger it for lack of timely provision. I can assure honourable members, if they still have any suspicions lurking in their minds that any member of this Government or of this party proposes in an ill-judged fit of parsimony to risk even for an hour so precious a national treasure, they can dismiss from those unworthy suspicions entirely from their minds. Such a stupendous act of folly would, in the present temper of nations, not be Liberalism, but lunacy.

We do not intend to put in jeopardy the naval supremacy which is so essential, not only to our national existence, but, in our judgment, to the vital interests of Western civilization. It would also be an act of criminal insanity to throw away £80,000,000, which is so much needed for other purposes, on building gigantic flotillas, merely to encounter mythical armadas. That is why we propose only to incur this enormous expenditure when the need for it arises.

We must ensure the complete security of our shores against all real dangers, but we cannot afford, rich nation as we are, to build navies against nightmares.

That is much too expensive an operation. To throw away millions of money when there is no need for it, purely to appease an unreasoning panic, would be to squander resources essential to our safety in time of real danger.

However, as it may be necessary to make arrangements for laying down all the eight Dreadnoughts on April 1, 1910 so as to complete them by April, 1912, the financial proposals which I shall submit to the Committee will be of such a character that we can pay for them without resorting either to additional taxation or to the vicious expedient of a loan.

Should it, on the other hand, be discovered that our fears are groundless, and that this precipitate Dreadnought build is unnecessary, then the money will find its uses either in further endowment of our social programme for the benefit of the masses of the people or in giving the much-promised relief to the local ratepayer.

What the Government have to ask themselves is—Can the whole subject of further social reform be postponed until the increasing demands made upon the national exchequer by the growth of armaments has ceased? Not merely can it be postponed, but ought it to be postponed? Is there the slightest hope that if we defer consideration of the matter we are likely within a generation to find any more favourable moment for attending to it? I am pessimistic.

Is it fair, is it just, is it humane—more, is it safe, to subject such a multitude of our poor fellow-countrymen and countrywomen to continue in endurance of these miseries until the nations have learned enough wisdom not to squander their resources in huge machines for the destruction of human life? (Ministerial cheers.)

THE INSURANCE ACT.

The Ottawa Free Press of May 12th, thus refers to the Insurance Act of the present session whose legislative history it says "marks an epoch in the history of the House of Commons."

It should certainly make a valuable precedent in that there was a measure which affected so many of the most vital commercial interests of the country, and yet it was possible for it to be discussed, first in full committee where every man interested had a chance to be heard and afterwards in a sub-committee as to whose success in dealing with a difficult question there can be no doubt, and the result will be that when the Insurance bill is reported back to the House, as it will be probably to-morrow, all interests will have been safeguarded, all those who wished to be heard will have had an opportunity to present their views, and it is to be hoped that little time of the House itself will be wasted in discussion of a measure which has been so fearlessly and so thoroughly thrashed out in committee, regardless altogether of party issues.

It may be remembered that, at the beginning of the present session, the Free Press urged the reference of not only all controversial bills to sub-committees, but also that the estimates should themselves be sent to a special committee for consideration and report. In view of the experience of the insurance bill there can be no possible room for doubt that if the Government were to adopt the principle of referring all important bills, as well as the estimates, to special committees, valuable time could be saved. In each case, a Minister would be present, just as Mr. Fielding has attended the sittings of the Insurance bill committee, and in this way time could be saved, not only upon the estimates but upon important Government bills.

There is no doubt that the time is coming, rapidly, when all the important Government business of the session will be referred to committees at an early stage in each session; and all that can be hoped is that the experience which Mr. Fielding has had with the Insurance bill will convince the Premier and his colleagues of leaving as much of the routine work of the House to committees as is compatible with the idea of Parliamentary responsibility.

Had the estimates for the year been referred to a special commmittee in the manner in which the Insurance bill was referred, Parliament would not to-day be face to face with the condition that, while every member is eager to get home, there are millions upon millions of the estimates yet to be passed.

And if the success of Mr. Fielding and Mr. Miller in the matter of the Insurance bill have no other result than to impress upon the House of Commons the need for a reform of the procedure of Parliament, their work will not have been in vain.

Anything which can check the flood of speech in the House itself is of value; and no better way has yet been devised than to refer all important measures to committees, where they can be discussed at leisure, and where much more attention can be given to the details than is possible in the chamber itself.

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth in the uterus. The doctors said it was a tumor, and could not be removed, as it would cause instant death. They found that other organs were affected and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in. After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Turkish troops at Erzeroum are said to be on the verge of mutiny.

The United States Senate yesterday voted for a duty of 25 cents a ton on iron ore.

Wilfred Bishop, clerk in the Ottawa postoffice, has been arrested on a charge of stealing letters.

The French Chamber of Deputies yesterday endorsed the Government's attitude with regard to the postal strike.

A. W. Maguire, Hamilton, a well-known flour and feed merchant, committed suicide yesterday, because of business troubles.

Great activity prevails at the Sydney, N.S., mines, and, as wages are good, it is believed the men are loath to throw up their hands and strike.

Elmer Pennock, a medical student at Queen's, went suddenly insane at Brockville and attempted to kill his mother. He was committed to the asylum.

In their presentment yesterday at the Victoria Assizes, the grand jury lamented that so many cases of petty larceny were found in the jail, and advocated flogging as a deterrent.

Edward Boisseur of Toronto has entered suit at Springfield, Ill., to recover $27,500 on a note given P. J. Kieran of the Fidelity Funding Co. by the Benedictine Sisters of Nauvoo, Illinois.

Kung Kain Chao, the new Chinese consul-general for Canada, sails by the Empress of Ireland from Liverpool for Canada on June 18, accompanied by his wife and family and secretary.

Hon. L. P. Brodeur accused the Ontario Minister of Public Works of breach of faith in the House last night for publishing the fisheries regulations in the treaty between Canada and the United States.

Won't Let Her Go Home.

Clinton, Ont., May 14.—The people of this town are indignant at the action of United States immigration officials in refusing to allow a woman, who had been visiting her old home here, after a residence of some years with her husband in New York State, to return to her husband.

Mrs. W. Hamm, the daughter of Joseph Cooper, of this town, married two years ago and went to live in Rose, N.Y. In the fall of 1907 she came to visit her parents, and remained some months, returning to her husband with no interference. This spring she again came to Clinton, and was here two months, but on returning on May 7 she was stopped at Suspension Bridge, and refused admittance to the United States.

The case has been taken up with the authorities in Washington.

Catches Runaway Husband.

Windsor, Ont., May 14.—A Pittsburg despatch says that Mrs. Elizabeth Templeton of Windsor yesterday had her husband, A. H. Templeton, aged 37, and Eleanor Walcott, 38, for whom he is said to have deserted his wife, arrested. The Walcott woman claims to have been regularly married to Templeton.

Seventeen years ago Templeton married Elizabeth Dicken in Windsor. Two years later he disappeared and she heard nothing further of him until about two months ago, when she received information that he had married again.

Lighted by Wireless.

Omaha, May 14.—The lighting of the big auditorium by electric impulse from the wireless tower at Fort Omaha, six miles away, was a novelty to which visitors at the Omaha electrical exposition were treated.

The method used was developed by Dr. F. H. Millener, experimental engineer of the Union Pacific Railroad, and is the same as was used by him several months ago in operating a motor car at a distance. Dr. Millener had the co-operation of the United States army signal corps. The show will be lighted by wireless each night.

Seized 800 Pounds of Fish.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., May 14.—A new inspector sent by the Canadian Fisheries Department to this part of the St. Lawrence river in response to recent complaints that Americans have been illegally fishing and shooting in Canadian waters made several hauls confiscating the property of some Americans alleged to be poachers. Among other things seized were several boats and 800 pounds of fish.

To Be Dyspeptic Is To Be Miserable.

Dyspepsia is the prevailing malady of civilized life. It is largely due to gross errors in diet, over-eating, too free indulgence in stimulants and over-taxing the stomach with indigestible food, eating too rapidly without chewing the food sufficiently, indulging in hot biscuits, pastry, pickles, confectionery, etc.

Constipation, headache, heartburn, sour stomach, distress after eating, belching of wind, faintness, and fullness and distention of the stomach are a few of the many distressing symptoms of the poor, weary dyspeptic. Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the stomach, stimulates the secretion of the saliva and gastric juice to facilitate digestion, removes acidity, purifies the blood, and tones up the system to full health and vigor, and thereby cures dyspepsia and all its tributary diseases.

Mr. Amos Sawler, Gold River, N.S., writes:—"I was greatly troubled with dyspepsia, and after trying several doctors to no effect, I commenced taking Burdock Blood Bitters and I think it is the best medicine there is for that complaint."

Lawyer Charged.

Woodstock, May 14.—Alfred Hall, a Haileybury lawyer, has been brought to Woodstock by the local authorities on a charge of fabricating evidence and misleading the High Court, in that he produced a certain affidavit to the court purporting to be signed by one Davidson, who was supposed to be prosecuting a local suit.

Davidson declared that he had never signed nor authorized the signature of the affidavit. The magistrate reserved his decision pending the settlement of certain legal points, which will be referred to the Attorney-General. J. W. Curry of Toronto appeared for Hall, who is a former resident of this county.

In Deadly Current.

Brantford, May 14.—Frank Leddetter, coachman, having driven a party to a dance here Wednesday night, had a remarkable escape from death on Alfred street. A wire across the trolley of the street railway broke down, and the driver and his team of horses were enveloped in a loop made by a live wire carrying 2,200 volts. One of the horses was electrocuted, and the other was laid out.

Leddetter had one arm badly burned in taking hold of one of the horses' heads.

Cage of Monkeys Cremated.

Jeffersonville, Ind., May 14.—A boy last night threw a lighted match into a cage of seven trained monkeys at the tail of the parade of a circus, and, as the cage was littered with straw, the monkeys were burned before they could be released.

Foul Play Is Suspected.

St. Thomas, May 14.—That William Tomlinson was murdered in the city and dragged to the ravine on the outskirts, where his body was found last Friday, is an opinion now held by Crown Attorney McCrimmon.

It is said the post-mortem shows injury to the man's body, as if he had been kicked to death, but the doctors refuse to divulge their findings, and Provincial Detective Greer will say nothing. Coroner Guest is supposed to be responsible for the outside police assistance, but he declines to state his reasons for suspecting foul play.

Robbery could scarcely be the motive, as Tomlinson had two weeks before been discharged from the M.C.R. and owed a bill at his boarding-house.

It was at first thought he was drowned, but there was no water in the lungs.

Mr. Foy's Police Force.

Toronto, May 14.—The Attorney-General's reorganization scheme for the provincial police system is nearly completed, and will be announced shortly.

The organization will have a most comprehensive field, touching upon the work of several departments. In addition to the ordinary pursuit of crime there will be the enforcement of the license laws and the maintenance of law and order in the unorganized districts of New Ontario.

Gets Off With Fine.

Brantford, May 14.—H. Nyagarias, one of the Blue Lake Italians implicated in the charge of destroying live stock and indiscriminate shooting, was fined $10 by Mayor Patterson of Paris yesterday, who ordered that the Italians be deprived of all firearms in their possession.

One witness said the Sabbath proceedings among the colony were like a continuous roar on a battlefield. The Italians claimed they were merely shooting birds.

Upset Lamp Starts Big Fire.

Edmundston, N.B., May 14.—Fire in the Queen's Hotel, due to a guest upsetting a lamp, destroyed the hotel and several nearby buildings. The man who caused the fire had a narrow escape, being rescued by John Soney, the proprietor, who was badly burned.

Woman May Have Drowned.

Ottawa, May 14.—Mrs. MacLaren of Portage du Fort, Quebec, has been missing since Sunday, and it is believed that while temporarily deranged she wandered down to the river and drowned herself.

Needs Preachers for Emigrants.

London, May 14.—The Bishop of Calgary, who has just arrived here, wants 40 clergymen for his diocese; the church organization there is being overwhelmed by the inrush of emigrants.

Brighten Up

Not only does it take longer to put poor paint on your building than good paint, but you have to do it oftener. Divide the cost of painting your building into three parts and two of them go to the painter. The third part pays for the paint. If you get paint that will last 6 years you can afford to pay more for it than for paint that lasts but 2.

Sherwin-Williams Paint is the highest quality and most satisfactory paint made. We control the most important raw materials from which it is manufactured, make and refine our own linseed oil, and in many other ways safeguard the quality of all S-W. Products. Navigation Laws Which Every Motor Boat Owner Should Know

The Custom Regarding the Right-of-Way—Regulations as to the Use of Lights, Whistles and Signals and the Significance of Buoys.

OTHER INFORMATION GIVEN

For the benefit of owners of motor boats and other small craft the following from the Canadian navigation laws, with which every navigator of a motor boat should familiarize himself, are given.

Any boat propelled by machinery comes under the designation of a steam vessel. Boats driven by gasoline, kerosene, naptha, and electric launches rank as steam vessels under the laws of navigation.

The starboard side of a vessel is the right-hand side looking forward.

The port-side is the left-hand side looking forward.

The weather side of a vessel is the side on which the wind blows.

The lee side is the side furthest from the wind.

Right of Way.

Right of way is the custom of allowing one class of vessel the privilege of holding a course while another class has to give way.

Steam vessels (which include motor boats) must give way to sailing craft and row boats.

Two steam vessels (or motor boats) meeting head on shall steer to the right and pass to the left.

If two steam vessels are approaching each other in an oblique direction the vessel which has the other on her starboard (right) side shall keep out of the way.

If two vessels are pursuing the same course the one overtaking the other must keep clear.

When a steam vessel and a sailing vessel are proceeding in such directions as to involve the risk of a collision, the steam vessel shall keep out of the way of the sailing vessel.

When, by any of these rules, one of two vessels shall keep out of the way the other shall keep her course and speed.

Every boat which is directed by these rules to keep out of the way of another boat, shall on approaching her, if necessary, slacken her speed, or stop, or reverse.

Lights.

Every boat must be equipped with lights at night. This applies as much to a row boat and canoes as to larger craft, and must never be neglected. Failure to carry the required lights make the boats, even down to the canoe and row boat, liable to seizure and confiscation. The Canadian Customs authorities have received orders to enforce the law rigidly.

Power boats must show a green light on the starboard (right) side, a red light on the port (left) side and a white light at the bow. These may be in the form of a combined lantern showing a red, a green and a white light.

Row boats and canoes must carry and show a white light.

Whistles and Signals.

All power boats must be equipped with a whistle, or at least with a horn that can be heard at a distance.

Whistle signals consist of one, two and three short blasts.

One blast indicates the vessel is steering to starboard. Two blasts that she is steering to port. Three blasts that the vessel is going astern.

A danger signal, or signal of distre ss i,sgiven by four short quick blasts of the whistle.

Buoys and Their Significance.

In passing buoys marking shoals, if going up the river keep a red buoy on starboard (right-hand) side and a black buoy on the port (left) side. A buoy painted red and black indicates that it may be safely passed on either side. When entering a buoyed harbour keep red buoys to starboard, black buoys to port side.

A white buoy merely indicates a shoal, and if the navigator is in strange water he should proceed cautiously until he has ascertained the channel.

It is the duty of every navigator of a power boat to familiarize himself with the rules of navigation, and to observe them at all tmes. By doing so he not only gets a greater pleasure from this exhilarating sport, but also reduces to a minimum the possibility of accidents.

Small Streams Near Havelock Being Stocked With Trout

Belmont Trout Club Secures Lease of a Creek—Salmon Trout in Two of the Lakes—Other News.

MR. JAS. THOMPSON'S MINES

Havelock, May 14.—The Belmont Trout Club, composed of twelve charter members, have leased a creek south east of this place for a private trout preserve. The stream, which is about two miles long, has been stocked with fry and the members of the Club expect some good fishing in a few years.

Salmon Trout for Lakes.

Dr. Holdcroft, representing the Fish and Game Club, has secured a consignment of 100,000 salmon trout fry for distribution in Oak Lake and an equal number in Belmont Lake.

Are Going to Cobalt.

Mr. Jas. Thompson, M. P. P., who is largely interested in a silver mine claim in Cobalt, is arranging to demonstrate to a party of about 20 the advantages and prospects of the mine, on the 24th of May. A number of local people will form part of the delegation, and the remainder will consist of gentlemen from Norwood, Keene and Peterborough.

Was it Fred Varty.

A young man named Vardy, from "the front," blew into town on Thursday last, and proceeded to awaken the populace to the fact that he had arrived. The plan that he adopted has often been tried before, and generally results disastrously for the one who tries it. Vardy was having a high old time when the "police force" swooped down upon him and gathered him in. He was sober next morning, and after contributing $1 to the village exchequer was given his freedom.—Bancroft Times.

Protect the Trout.

The Dominion Goverment has sent the local Fish Club 10,000 speckled trout fry which have been deposited in Plateau Creek during the past week. We have been informed that youngsters have been catching large numbers of small trout this Spring and destroying them, thereby offsetting the good work of re-stocking this splendid trout stream. Parents are responsible for the actions of their children even to catching undersized trout and unless this practice is stopped at once a conviction will be made. According to the fishery regulations all trout six inches or under in length can not be taken.

PILL POUNDERS GIVE DELIGHTFUL AT HOME

Entertained a Large Number of Their Friends at Foresters' Hall, Simcoe Street Last Evening.

One of the most enjoyable of the dances that have been held this year was that given by the Pill Pounders last evenings in the Foresters' Hall Simcoe street. There were about one hundred in attendance and the time was spent most pleasantly in an excellent and well arranged programme of dances. Mr. H. Nichol presided at the piano in his usual capable manner. Supper was served at midnight, after which the dancing was kept up for an hour or two.

The secretary, Mr. H. McCaffrey and the committee in charge are to be congratulated on the success of the affair.

NEGLIGENT DOG OWNERS IN COURT

A number of dog owners were summoned to the police court this morning charged with neglecting to take out tags for them. The police are making a careful canvass of the city and any who have been negligent in this respect are being brought to court. Nearly every one who received a summons hurried to settle the matter, but in addition to having to get a tag, had also to pay the costs.

Magistrate Dumble intimated this morning that the next ones to appear before him would not be dealt with so lightly. The police are continuing their canvass and in a few days, another large number will appear.

Those Wishing To Take Part In "The Toys Awake" Meet To-morrow

A number of the ladies of the city met Mr. Ford and Miss Adams, the producers of "The Toys Awake," the great spectacular children's play in which over two hundred of the young people and children of the city will take part, in the parlours of the Oriental hotel, this morning and discussed the preliminary arrangements for its presentation here at an early date. It is to be given under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society. Great interest was manifested by those present.

A business committee consisting of Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. R. F. McWilliams, Mrs. W. H. Hill and Mrs. E. L. Goodwill will act in connection with Mr. Ford and Miss Adams in making the affair a success. The first meeting for selecting the characters will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Collegiate Assembly Hall and all those who desire to take part should be on hand as early as possible. A number of the leading ladies of the city will act as patronesses. Their names will be printed as soon as the list is completed.

An idea of what this grand entertainment will consist is given in another column of to-day's paper.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES.

A meeting of the Board is called for Monday afternoon at 3:30. A full attendance of members is desired.

A meeting of importance and interest to all Association members and others who though not members, are in sympathy with the work, is called for Tuesday evening next.

We would urge the girls of the city to make a special effort to be present at this meeting, on Tuesday, the 18th, at eight o'clock.

"THE TOYS AWAKE," SPECTACULAR MUSICAL PLAY TO BE GIVEN HERE

Under the Auspices of the Children's Aid Society—Will be Presented Early in June—Classes for Rehearsals are Now Being Formed.

A BEAUTIFUL FAIRYESQUE

"The Toys Awake" is the name of a beautiful play to be presented here during the early part of June, under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society and under the personal direction of Professor Ford and Miss B. Adams, who are the sole producers of it. Mr. E. L. Goodwill, secretary of the Children's Aid was in Toronto on Wednesday and there made the negotiations with the above persons for its presentation here.

"The Toys Awake" is a most elaborate and spectacular play, and one in which there are from two to three hundred children take part and about fifty adult persons, in the principle roles. The story is taken from an old German legend. In brief it is told as follows:

The toymaker, of Nurenburg, has a large number of sons who are also toymakers. One of them has a desire to see the toys becoming alive and is told by his father that they will. through the agency of the Fairy Queen and her fairies the boy's wish is realized and on the anniversary of the Queen's birthday the toys are brought to life.

During the action of the play which lasts a little over two hours, characters both fantastical and picturesque are introduced. Gorgeous costumes and magnificent scenery combine in making the most wonderful effects that have ever been seen on a stage. It is given in a prologue and two acts and the scenic environments are the same throughout. The prologue opens with the coming of the Fairy Queen and the wakening of the toys. The first act is the arrival of the court, including ambassadors, Grecian maidens, Canadian girls, and various others, and the second is the entertainment of the court. The latter includes toy songs, speeches, dances and choruses, altogether making up a most pleasing programme. The comedy elements is supplied by persons representing such characters as HappyHooligan, Humpty Dumpty, Topsy and other grotesque creatures. There is no real musical score with "The Toys Awake," catchy, tuneful numbers being introduced according to the judgment of the diretors.

The whole production is one of great magnificence and should not fail to attract large houses. Peterborough is indeed fortunate in having it given here and when the worthy object for which it is being presented, is considered, it ought to meet with unanimous approval and hearty co-operation of all. It has been given over fifty times and judging from the flattering reports accorded it by newspapers it has been enthusiastically received on each occasion by crowded houses. Professor Ford trains the principles for the dialogue parts while Miss Adams looks after the children preparing them in the dances and choruses. Mr. Ford before taking up his present work was with the Chateauqua school as organizer and manager. Miss Adams is a graduate of the National School of Elocution and Oratory, of Philedelphia, and of the Alma Ladies' College, St. Thomas.

Their entertainment is aways given under the auspices of a church or charitable organization. It is no doubt a grand spectacle and should be well supported.

Peterborough Fast Acquiring Good Showing Of Automobiles

Apparently the automobile is finding an increasing number of patrons in the vicinity of Peterborough, and during the coming summer they should be as commonplace as drays. Auto owners are growing to a considerable percentage of the population at least in comparison with their showing a year or two ago. The machines are purchased now, not only for pleasure, but for sport. There have been rumours of late regarding a particular car which has been doing a few "stunts" and has been responsible for stories about the owner's driving ability. It is understood that there are a number of machines going to Lakefield this year, and with the local machines augmented by those of tourists, the town should be well tainted with gasoline fumes during the next few months.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, May 14.—London sent higher quotations this morning and this market opened strong with advances from ¼ to 1 point general. The strength was maintained during the first hour with transactions on a large scale, particularly in the coalers, Del. & Hudson selling as high as 200. The bears thought they detected some good selling and made a vicious drive at prices shortly after 11 o'clock, forcing the list about two points lower. It looked then as though the London market had been rigged up from this side. A period of intense dullness followed the break and at noon the market was at a standstill. A rally finally set in, and prices gradually rose again, the oversold condition again asserting itself.

LOCOMOTIVE CRUSHED BENEATH HUGE BOULDER

C. P. R. Locomotive Is Crushed Beneath Huge Boulder.

TRAIN NARROWLY ESCAPES

While Traveling Along Mountainous Section of Line Between Mattawa and Kippewa Passenger Train Is Almost Forced Over a Precipice by Huge Rock Slide—Freight Train Telescopes Another.

North Bay, May 14.—A serious accident occurred on the Kippewa branch of the C.P.R. between Mattawa and Kippewa. That no casualties occurred is almost miraculous.

The railway runs north from Mattawa to the foot of Lake Temiskaming, and winds its way through the Laurentians, along narrow ledges far above the Ottawa river, and through many huge rock cuttings.

As the passenger train north, heavily laden, was passing through a particularly dangerous section, where the road bed clings to the mountain side, with the river many feet below, a five-ton rock crashed down the declivity, wrecking the locomotive, but fortunately not forcing the train over the precipice. Passengers were severely shaken up by the sudden stop, but not seriously injured.

So tightly was the engine wedged by the immense rock that dynamite had to be utilized to clear the wreckage.

At Woman river, on the C.P.R., 200 miles west of North Bay, a freight train telescoped another freight standing at the station, smashing up several cars and seriously injuring Conductor Lavie of Chapleau, who was in his van when the crash came.

English Capital for Prince Rupert.

Vancouver, B.C., May 13.—Moreton Frewen, a distinguished English capitalist and representative of English capital, which will become heavily interested in the Grand Trunk Pacific townsite at Prince Rupert, is now off to Montreal to consult with President Hays of the Grand Trunk relative to the establishment of some large industrial undertakings at the Pacific terminus. Frewen is in a hurry, because he has to be back in Vancouver in time for the commencement of the Prince Rupert auction sale. Exactly what his plans are, he declares he is not prepared to state till he has had another meeting with Hays. It is reported, however, that several millions of dollars are involved.

To Invest In Millions.

Vancouver, B.C., May 14. The investment of two million dollars in the halibut industry with Prince Rupert as a base is planned by a wealthy English syndicate recently organized. Sylvester Swettenham, brother of Sir Frank Swettenham, who is associated with business enterprises in which the banking house of Glyn Mills & Co. is concerned, has reached here on a mission in connection with the proposed enterprise. He also plans to establish numerous salmon canneries along the Skeena river.

Train Wreck Near Prescott.

Prescott, May 14.—The Montreal-Brockville local G.T.R. passenger train, commonly known as the Moccasin, ran into the rear end of the way freight standing on the main up track Wednesday night. One of the trainmen severely sprained his arm and several of the passengers were badly shaken up. Fire completed the destruction of the passenger engine, the caboose and a couple of freight cars.

Beautiful Gardens Sinking.

Vienna, May 14. Grave danger exists that the beautiful gardens and conservatories of Baron Alfons de Rothschild, situated at Hohe Warte, near Vienna, may disappear owing to the threatened landslide, due, it is supposed, to excavations which have been carried to an excessive depth. The gardens, situated at a great height, are probably the finest horticultural sight in Europe.

May Share In Huge Fortune.

St Thomas, May 14.—If only a missing marriage certificate could be found Mrs Donald Darrach's claim to a share of a $52,000,000 fortune would be sustained. She is one of the fifty descendants in America of William Fortner of Scotland, whose fortune is estimated as above.

Was Troubled With Weak Back For Years.

Could Not Perform Household Duties. Doctors Attended Without Avail.

Mrs. Arch. Schnare, Black Point, N.B., writes: "For years I was troubled with weak back. Oftentimes I have lain in bed for days, being scarcely able to turn myself, and I have also been a great sufferer while trying to perform my household duties. I had doctors attending me without avail and tried liniments and plasters, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was about to give up in despair when my husband induced me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after using two boxes I am now well and able to do my work. I am positive Doan's Kidney Pills are all that you claim for them, and I would advise all kidney sufferers to give them a fair trial."

Doan's Kidney Pills are a purely vegetable medicine, realizing quick, permanent relief, without any after ill effects. A medicine that will absolutely cure Backache and all forms of Kidney and Bladder Disease.

A medicine that strengthens the kidneys so that they are enabled to extract the poisonous uric acid from the blood and prevent the chief cause of Rheumatism.

TUNISIAN STRIKES PART OF ICE FLOE

Allan Liner Is Victim of Iceberg in Atlantic Ocean.

SHE PUTS INTO ST. JOHN'S

Accident Similar to That Which Overtook Lake Champlain a Few Days Ago Forces Vessel to Go In For Overhauling — Passengers Will Be Tranferred to St John and Montreal via Sydney, C.B.

Montreal, May 14.—A marconigram was received yesterday by the Allan Line from Captain Fairfull of the Tunisian, stating that that vessel had suffered an accident almost similar to that which recently befell the Lake Champlain and that he had been compelled to put into St. John's, Nfld., for safety. The Tunisian, while steaming slowly, inward-bound, through heavy field ice, struck an unusually heavy mass, and started a plate under her forepeak. The broken plate caused quite a heavy leak, and Captain Fairfull considered it his duty to head at once for St. John's, which was only sixty miles distant. The vessel will be overhauled there, and if it is found that she has sustained serious injuries the passengers will be forwarded to Port Basque by rail, thence by the Reid Newfoundland Co.'s boats to Sydney, where they will be taken by special trains to St. John, N.B., and Montreal. If the Tunisian has to go into dry dock the passengers booked for her sailing from Montreal on the 21st instant will be transferred to another of the Allan boats. This is the third accident the Allan boats have suffered since the opening of navigation, the Corinthian and Siberian having both met with mishaps.

QUEEN NO SUFFRAGETTE.

In Message She Indicates That She Doesn't Want a Vote.

London, May 14.—Queen Alexandra is evidently not in sympathy with the female suffragists. Princess Louise yesterday opened the Women Nurses' Congress at Liverpool, and in a little speech said: "I have a message for you from the Queen. She has the fullest sympathy with you in your work. She feels that this is the work which women can do. Some women nowadays try to be like men, but this is the thing that men can't do, and it, therefore, is here that we feel superior to anybody else."

The Queen's attitude is the more interesting because her daughter, Queen Maud of Norway, sent a message of sympathy to the International Suffragists' Congress, which met a few weeks ago in London.

BIG AWARD MADE.

Ontario Government Lets Printing Contract for Five Years.

Toronto, May 14.—Between $20,000 and $30,000 is the tidy sum which the Whitney Government will save the people of the province on the new contract for the public printing, which was awarded yesterday to the Methodist Book Room and E. H. Harcourt & Co.

From this and other recent occurrences it would appear that this is a great year for the Methodists and also for the people, for on April 20 the Government gave the contract for printing the new school readers to the T. Eaton Co., prominent Methodists, and made a saving to the people of the province estimated at $500,000 for the first year and $125,000 for the remaining years of the contract.

For the past ten years the Government printing has been done at a cost of $80,000 to $90,000 a year. The new contract is for $60,000, so that, as it has five years to run, commencing on July 1 of this year, the province will be the gainer by at least $100,000 in that time.

It is understood that the tenders were remarkably close in the totals, though large divergencies were shown in the figures for particular items. Six firms sent in tenders, though only one tendered for the whole contract.

The printing contract is divided into five sections, of which the first four are awarded to the Methodist Book Room and the fifth to E. H. Harcourt & Co.

MEN FALL A MILE.

Three Lose Their Lives In the Deepest Mine In the World.

Detroit, May 14.—A special from Calumet, Mich., last night says: Death which was swift and sure, but none the less terrible, came to three miners at the Red Jacket mine here yesterday afternoon when the ground upon which they were at work suddenly gave way, precipitating all three into a yawning abyss. For a distance of 6,000 feet the shaft runs down into the very bowels of the earth, and through this opening the unfortunate men were shot as though impelled by a mighty catapult.

The bodies were crushed into an unrecognizable mass of blood and splintered bone. The men were all foreigners. Their names are: Louis Rossi, Lewis Mustonen and Zech Benjamin.

The shaft of the Red Jacket mine is famous all over the world as the deepest working mine in existence.

SUGGESTS STEP TO UNIFY EMPIRE

Col. Sam Hughes Wants an Imperial Parliament.

POWER BILL IN THE SENATE

Conmee's Measure Is Discussed and Given Second Reading In Upper House—Col. Hughes Wants an Imperial Body to Discuss Defence and Diplomacy—Colonel Withdraws His Resolution.

Ottawa, May 14.—Few Parliamentary days at Ottawa have furnished so many and such varied subjects as was the case yesterday. All of the questions discussed were of importance and the Ministers were kept on the alert, furnishing information for members who will in a few days return to their constituencies.

On motion to go into supply Col. Sam Hughes moved a resolution advocating closer union with the Empire. He thought there should be a small Imperial Parliament, with perhaps an Upper House. The representation might be based on population, except as regards India. He would not draw the color line.

Mr. Fielding remarked that the member for Vancouver would not agree to that.

Col. Hughes: What the member for Vancouver complained of is the policy of the Government which allows people of an oriental nation, who do not become Canadian citizens, to establish themselves on the Pacific coast to the detriment of Canadian citizens.

Mr. Lemieux: What about immigrants from India?

Mr. Hughes said it was not to Hindoo immigrants, but to foreigners, that the Government was kow-towing.

Col. Hughes said this Imperial Parliament should discuss Imperial problems, such as defence and diplomatic relations, while local Parliaments would retain their present status. It would secure the maritime supremacy of Britain and make her so powerful as to command the supremacy of nations.

He hoped the Premier and leader of the Opposition would consult together regarding Imperial federation.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier congratulated Col. Hughes on the lofty views he had expressed. However, it was too late in the session to deal adequately with a matter of such importance. He suggested that the resolution should be withdrawn.

Col. Hughes complied.

George Bradbury of Selkirk introduced the question of the depletion of Manitoba fisheries. He affirmed that lakes had been depleted by great American companies through connivance between officials in the west who were influenced by American interests. Millions of pounds of white fish and sturgeon had been taken from the lakes. Settlers had protested. Icelandic fishermen who had been brought to this country to fish the lakes were starving. So also were Indians. The firms were now extending their operations to lakes of Saskatchewan and the north.

Hon. Mr. Brodeur said the reports showed that there was no depletion of the fisheries of Manitoba.

In the Senate yesterday, on motion by Senator Watson, for the suspension of the rules relating to the Ontario & Michigan Power Co., protests were made by Senators Landry, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Senator Lougheed against it being railroaded through. There had been great objection to the bill in the Province of Ontario, and in the Commons, it was noted.

Senator Watson said the Senate had two years ago passed this same bill in a more radical and far-reaching form.

Senator Dandurand said the suspension of the rules would only enable the bill to get in one day. At this stage of the session those who advocated the bill were anxious to get in all the time possible.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell asked if the Prime Minister had received from Sir James Whitney a telegram protesting against approval of the waterways treaty with the Senate rider. If, as reported, the reply of the Government would be that the original treaty was satisfactory, but that the amendment was not satisfactory, the country would approve of that reply.

The Senate sat well into the morning hours and passed the second reading of Conmee's bill and the Canada Life bill. These bills now go to committee.

Zam-Buk SAVED HIS HAND!
WHEN TORN BY TROLLEY ROPE.

DANGERS OF NEGLECTING A SORE.

NEVER neglect a cut or sore, however trivial it may appear. Mrs. B. E. Bedwell, of 337, Provencher Avenue, St. Boniface, Winnipeg, had a small sore on the second finger of her left hand. She thought it would get right unaided, but it didn't. Instead, blood-poisoning set in. She says:—"I then tried poultices and an ordinary salve. These, however, did not have the desired effect, and, as the finger began to fester, I had to call in a doctor, who lanced it. Despite his care, however, it again festered, and the ointments, liniments, and other preparations which the doctor gave me seemed absolutely unable to bring about any relief. We were told of a case similar to my own in which Zam-Buk had effected a cure when everything else had failed, and we, therefore, decided to give Zam-Buk a trial. It only needed a few days to show the wisdom of this step. The blood-poisoning and inflammation were reduced, and the pain became less acute. In under three weeks from first commencing with Zam-Buk the finger was quite sound again."

WORKING men and women throughout the Dominion find that Zam-Buk is the greatest boon they can have as a healer of accidental cuts, burns, and bruises, as well as skin diseases. Mr. H. G. Purchase, conductor on the Toronto Street Railway, tells how this great herbal balm benefited him when he met with his accident.

The trolley pole of his car slipped off the live wire, and the rope was caught in the standard. Purchase held on to the rope until his hand was pulled up to the top of the car. There it was held, and the rope, pulled through his fingers by the force of the moving car, tore and lacerated to a shocking extent three fingers, tearing several pieces of flesh completely away. Zam-Buk was applied, and eased the pain very quickly. Writing to this effect, Mr. Purchase says:—

"I had previously had experience of the healing power of Zam-Buk, and the way it soothes cuts and injuries. I, therefore, bound the fingers in Zam-Buk, and it was most gratifying the way in which this balm soothed the pain. Two days after the accident the wounds were closed, and new skin was beginning to form over the top. Each day I dressed the wounds with Zam-Buk, and I am now back again at work with the hand as sound as ever. To look at it you would never know it had been so terribly torn and lacerated.

"I do not think there is anything to equal Zam-Buk as a healer of skin injuries and diseases."

WHAT YOU SHOULD USE ZAM-BUK FOR.

Zam-Buk cures pimples, skin-eruptions, burns, cuts, piles, festering ulcers and sores, blood-poisoning, salt rheum, prairie itch, ringworm, bad leg, diseased ankles, old wounds, eczema, and all skin-diseases. All Druggists and Stores sell at 50c. box, three for $1.25, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

SEYMOUR WINS THE MARATHON BY LESS THAN ONE LAP IN VERY FAST TIME AT ROLLER RINK

Beat a Field of Seven Starters by About Eighty Yards in 1.52---Race Was Hard Fought All the Way---A Battle for First Place Was Interesting---Parrington Got Second Place.

The twenty-six miles 385 yards in one hour fifty-two minutes is some Marathoning. That is what the long distance men did at the Auditorium Roller Rink last night, but don't get uneasy you followers of St. Yves' and company, it was on roller skates that the stunt was done. The Marathon record is 2.37, held by Siret of France, so that the skaters beat that mark by three quarters of an hour.

Jack Seymour won the event after a most exciting struggle all the way, beating Percy Parrington by a little less than a lap or about eighty yards. The two battled all the way, and for the last eight miles skated together, Seymour one lap to the good. Parrington sprinted at the 26th mile and managed to cut down his lead to less than a lap, but he could not overcome it.

There were seven starters in the field that Mayor Rush started sharp at 9.10. The entrants were Jack Seymour, P. Parrington, M. Kenneally, B. Clute, E. Edgar, Smith and F. Lundy. The bunch started off at a tremendous clip, Kenneally and Clute cutting out a terrific gait. They soon set up a lead of several laps and held it for eight miles, but the effort was too much for them, and they soon came back to the rest. Lundy and Edgar, the two smallest starters, were taken out of the race in the sixth mile but the rest hung on. In the eighth Seymour took the lead and was never headed.

He increased the pace and went away from the others in jig time until he was four laps ahead of Parrington, while the others were rapidly dropping, the fast early pace taking it out of them. The first ten miles were covered in forty-two minutes.

About the fifteenth mile Smith retired after making a great fight to stay up with the leaders, leaving four in the race. Parrington cut loose with a sprint that gained a lap for him on Seymour and then when the latter had to leave the track to fix a skate he gained two more, leaving only one lap separating the two. Parrington glued in behind Seymour and stayed there for the rest of the race. He tried a sprint at the end of the 24th mile but could not get away, and fell back to his old place until the last five laps, when he sprinted again, this time gaining a little. It was a fine race all the way, and the small crowd present found it highly exciting. It is just as much so as a walking match and it has the advantage that the men are going much faster.

The official scorer gives third place to Ben Clute, although Kenneally and some of the crowd claim that the latter was entitled to show money However, it was very close between the two of them all the way. The track was twenty laps to the mile, so that the skaters had to circle the rink 525 times.

HARRISON JUMPED TO FOURTH IN SECOND NIGHT OF THE GRIND

Peterboro' Ped Gained Eleven Laps on Blake on Tuesday and is Fifteen to the Good on Slater---Is Feeling Fine and Should Get a Good Piece of the Prize Money.

Jim Harrison greatly improved his standing in the Milwaukee grind on Tuesday night. When he started in at eight o'clock for the second night's walk he was in eighth position, but at the end of the three hours he had climbed up into fourth position, covering twelve more laps than he had done on Monday. Blake finished nine laps ahead of Harrison on Monday night, but the Peterborough ped. went after the coloured walker on Tuesday and succeeded in gaining back all that he had lost, and then took the lead, winding up two laps ahead of Blake. Tom Slater also fell back rapidly, and at the end of the second three hours was fifteen laps or over three quarters of a mile behind Harrison. The Peterborough man is certainly making a fine showing in such fast company, and should easily get a piece of the money. He is holding his own in the short hours, and when the long grind comes on Sunday to finish up with he will be right in line, as steady walking does not bother Harrison very much.

Writing to the Examiner, Harrison says of the walk: "I am doing pretty fair in the race just now, and jumped from eighth position into fourth on the second night. The pace was hot on Monday, and it being the first time that I have had my foot on a track since I raced Blake in Peterborough in February, it gave me a hard time of it."

Sweaters Have Arrived For Junior And Senior O. H. A. Teams

The coat sweaters and sweaters for the members of the Peterborough and Intermediate O H A tams have arrived and will be presented to the players at a meeting to be called shortly, at which representatives of the different sporting organizations of the city will be present for the purpose of taking steps to form an athletic association to govern all branches of amateur sport in this city. For some time the proposal has been under discussion by those who have the interests of clean sport at heart, and who have come to a conclusion that all lines of athletics will be benefitted by having them under the control of one central body. In this way there will be less danger of friction, the matter of financing will be facilitated, the atheletes of the city will be united in one big association so that all sports will be stimulated.

The presentation of the sweaters will form a suitable occasion at which to discuss the project.

Both sweaters and coats are very handsome, being woven in blue and white, and they will form a fitting remembrance of a season, which, if not marked by any championship, was still highly successful, all things considered.

DOINGS IN BIG LEAGUES.

Jersey City had a tremendous batting bee at the expense of three Toronto pitchers yesterday, and as a result trimmed the Maple Leafs 12 to 1, sending them back into third place. The Swarm had no less than fifteen hits, the swats including four homers, a triple and four doubles. Centre-fielder Moeller was the star performer, getting three home runs, a double and a single. McGinley started to pitch but was relieved in the seventh by Hickey, who lasted two innings, and then gave way to Connolly, who got his in proper fashion, six runs being scored by Jersey City in the ninth. Ford, whom the Skeeters secured from the New York Americans, had the Torontos at his mercy, holding them to four hits of which First baseman Houser got two. Only for a pass in the fourth, followed by Houser's single the Leafs would have been blanked.

Royals Blanked Grays

[illegible] Montreal shut Providence out 6 to 0. [illegible] pitched for Providence and was good until the ninth when the Royals landed on him for a triple, double and two singles, counting four times. Yeager's all round work was the feature.

Poor Baltimore

The luckless Baltimore team were bumped again yesterday, Buffalo beating them 4 to 1. McCloskey was driven from the slab by the Herd, but saved a shutout for his team before he left by slashing out a homer. Taylor pitched for Buffalo.

Went Seventeen Innings

In the American League yesterday Washington and Chicago played a remarkable game going seventeen innings to a 1 to 1 tie, the game being called on account of darkness. White pitched the whole seventeen for Chicago and held the Senators to six hits, the Washington men getting only one in the last ten innings. Washington used four pitchers, Gray, Johnson, Burns and Hughes. The Sox got 13 hits. The Sox had men on second and third with one out in the seventeenth but couldn't score.

Three For Boston

Boston made it three straight from Cleveland yesterday, old Cy. Young being easy for the Bean Eaters, who registered 17 hits and eight runs against the veteran. Morgan held the Naps to five hits and one run. Cleveland's fielding was poor.

Tigers Drop One.

The Highlanders managed to take one from Detroit yesterday, Catching Suggs weakening in the eighth, they drove him out of the box scoring six runs. Detroit hit Manning hard, but could not get them bunched, the Highlanders winning 6 to 4.

The St. Louis-Philadelphia game was called on account of rain.

Pirates Win

In the National, Pittsburg won a hard game from Philadelphia, beating the Phillies 6 to 4. The Pirates took a winning lead in the seventh on three hits, a base on balls and errors by Osborne and Bransfield. The Phillies drove Willis out of the box in the eighth, but Leever, who succeeded him held them safe.

Thirteen Innings Game

Boston won a thirteen innings game from Cincinnati yesterday. Starr's batting was responsible for the victory. Roth created some excitement by slugging Umpire Cusack. Other players were involved and three of them were chased.

Cubs Lose Again

The Giants beat the Chicago Cubs again yesterday, bunching their hits on Kroh. Matthewson held Chicago safe. Hoffman's double and Tinker's single averted a blank for the Cubs.

Homer Won Game

Kustus' home run in the sixth won for Brooklyn over St. Louis by 2 to 1. It was a pitchers' battle between Lush and Rucker.

PAT McDONOUGH SIGNING UP NEW LACROSSE TEAM FOR "CHI" REGAN IS ON THE LINE-UP

Special to The Examiner.

Toronto, May 14.—Pat McDonough, the well-known lacrosse player, has been in Toronto for some time, engaged in looking up a practically new team for the Shamrock Lacrosse Club of Chicago. Pat is now a full-fledged manager, and naturally looked to Ontario for new material. As soon as he finished playing hockey in Fort William he came east to find the men. For the most part he has picked men who were disqualified at one time or another by the C. L. A. for "professionalism," and now has all he wants

The following are his new players: A. M. Regan, who played with Beaverton the year they were thrown out and also with Peterborough; Billy Marshall, who was with Hamilton Senior C. L. A team last season, Cooper, of Fort William; Hughie Anderson, with Beaverton in 1906-7, Con Marrin, late of Barrie, and Art Pickering, brother of Harry Pickering, of the Tecumsehs. These men will play their first exhibition game in Chicago on May 31. Their League, the National Lacrosse Association, opens on June 15th.

McDonough announces his line-up as follows:

Goal—Jim Byrne.
Point—Wm. Marshall
Cover Point—Art Pickering.
First defence—A. M Regan.
Second defence—Pat Kelley.
Third defence—Wm. Gilligan.
Centre—Cooper or L Taylor.
Third attack—Con. Marrin.
Second attack—Neil Masterson.
First attack—Pat McDonough.
Outside home—Art Leader.
Inside home—Hughie Anderson.
Spares—Wright, Irwin, Gougeon.

There are two Chicago and two St. Paul teams in the League this year.

Last year McDonough played with the Torontos up until the middle of July, when he went back owing to sickness, but afterwards he and Lady Taylor went to Chicago, where they played an important part in the landing of the championship for their team. Masterson is a Cornwall boy and played hockey for a while in Port Hope. Wright is an old Galt boy It may be seen that the team is really an All-Canadian aggregation, and Pat says the majority of those who go to see the games are Canucks. Billie Cavanagh, the Illinois centre, is an old Peterborough hockey and lacrosse player.

On May 24th the STEAMER MAJESTIC will leave Lakefield on arrival of morning train, making trip around lake, returning to connect with last train for Peterborough. On Tuesday, May 25th the STEAMER will leave the lake in time to connect with the 4.40 train for the City. On Tuesday, May 25th, the STEAMER STONEY LAKE will leave the Wolfe Street Wharf at nine o'clock with freight and passengers for Stony Lake points.

Old Nesting Place.

A good story is told of a couple of young ladies from Westwood who were coming to Norwood one day last week to do some shopping. After they had driven some distance one of them thought she felt something picking at her feet. Lifting the robe she was surprised to find under the seat of the buggy, a hen and a newly laid egg.—Norwood Register.

LOCAL BASEBALL

There seems to be some question as to whether the Intermediate League games will be played on the Riverside Park. There has been no arrangements made with the park management and as there is the footballists, the lacrosse team and probably an independent baseball team, it looks as if the "Intermedes" will have to hike elsewhere. This matter will be considered this evening.

• • •

Jack Pilling will represent Park St. to-night at the meeting of the Intermediate League and will make a strong appeal for the admission of the Park St. Baptist team. As far as can be learned all the teams are satisfied to take in the Park St. team, but this will mean that the schedule will have to be rearranged. There is some opposition to this, but the former first bagger of the Petes should be able to impress the opposition with the desire of the new nine to get in with the bunch.

• • •

Len Dobson will back with Bill Metherall's team and will undoubtedly be put at short stop, filling Kendry's shoes. Dobson's experience with the Lindsay City League should make him a valuable man to the Big Chief.

• • •

"Lajole" Derocher will be found at the helm of the T. A. S. bark, and judging from the success the team met with last year, there should be something doing soon. Leo made good and with the hearty assistance of the players should make things interesting when the dust begins to fly in league affairs.

• • •

It is rather amusing how some of the players and managers will laugh at the Kindergarten outfit as they call it. These are the men that need watching. Tactics of the knocking kind of course are good for the league's assistance? It makes the basis feel sound and strong, and it does not create any dissatisfaction? The league is not dependent upon any one team for its existence, nor any two for that matter, and knocking will not win the good will of the other teams.

• • •

The Intermediate Leaguers are again reminded of the meeting to-night in the Y. M. C. A. It is desired that the business be transacted with despatch. The questions to be discussed are the schedule, the application of Park Street Baptist Church team, grounds, and other questions. It is the intention to revise the constitution at an early date. The teams are reminded of the two-dollar guarantee fee.

STORY OF THE MILWAUKEE WALK

The Milwaukee Wisconsin says of the second night of the walk:

The killing pace set by the walkers in the seven-night race for the world's championship Monday night at Schiltz park, was resumed last night and at the finish of the three hours W. A. Hoagland, the recognized champion of hikers, was still in the lead with three laps to his credit over his nearest rival, George Brown, the Auburn, N. Y., youthful racer. Hoagland and Brown both set a fast pace from the start and practically kept this up for the entire evening, but Hoagland by numerous sprints managed to gain two laps over Brown and his one lap on Monday puts him three full laps ahead of Brown.

Al Corey, the French walker, who kept right up with the fast pace set by the leaders on the first night, did not show up as well last night, but he walked a creditable race nevertheless with his more experienced competitors in walking. This is Corey's first attempt at walkng, being a distance runner. Corey covered 39 miles and 15 laps for the two days of walking, and is third in the standing.

Jim Harrison, the old time star, walked wonderfully last night, the veteran covering 38 miles and 11 laps for the two days. West and Blake, the colored boy, and Van Tasseel, the Milwaukee youth, also walked well.

There was an unusually large crowd on hand and they cheered the walkers vociferously at every sprint. The walking last night of Van Tassel, especially, made a hit with the crowd, the Milwaukean at numerous times walking past the leaders at a furious pace.

The crowd let out a terrific howl when Hoagland, the champion, ran away from the field and practically gained two laps on Brown, who held him down to a single lap during the first night's walking.

Oddy, an old-time walker, who was etnered in the race and who covered 18 miles and 5 laps Monday night, did not walk last night on account of a bad shoulder. Oddy fell down Monday night and hurt this member to such an extent that walking was out of the question last night.

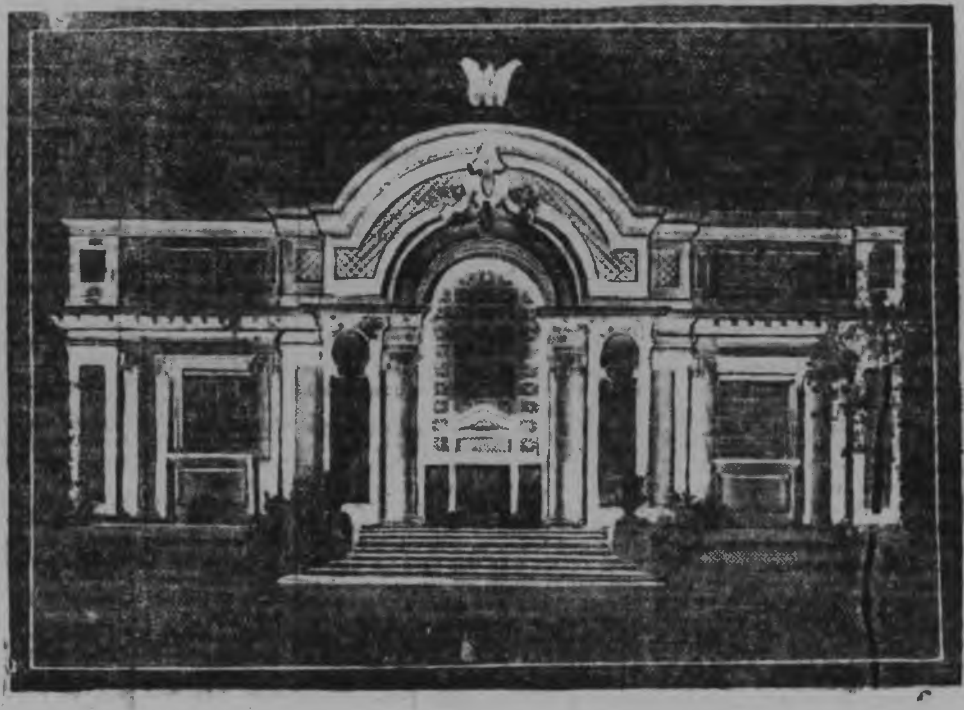
WHERE THEY NEVER "DOUSE THE GLIM"—SEATTLE.



EUROPEAN BUILDING AT SEATTLE EXPOSITION, SHOWN AT NIGHT, WITH ALL LIGHTS ON.

One think those folks out in Seattle expect to open the easterner's eyes with this summer will be the lighting. The whole Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition will be blazing with lights.

The picture shows how the European building, one of the first to be completed and installed with the electric light bulbs ooks at midnight. It shows how the grounds of the Exposition city will shine at nights like fairyland.

Seattle only really got on to the electric game about 10 or 15 years ago. When they started, though, they went fast.

First someone discovered Snoqualmie Falls up in the mountains, a beautiful cascade with a drop of about 8[illegible] feet, previously known only to hunters and forests rangers. Then the promoters got busy, and the contractors.

In a couple of years the startled woodland cascade was providing light for Tacoma and Seattle, and running their street car and power houses, not to mention a number of private plants. When the main plant was first completed, the company covered most of the walls of their big building in Seattle with small electroliers.

"We got so much current that it's as cheap to use it up as to keep it stored," was the expanation made at the time.

The Electric building, sitting on a hill, ablaze with light, was a landmark far down Puget sound. It gave the cue to the exposition managers, which is now being worked out

JAPAN HAS ITS TROUBLES OVER GRAFT

Nine Members of Parliament Have Been Placed Under Arrest.

Tokio, May 15th.—Nine members of the Lower House of the Diet have been arrested.

The nature of the charges against them is withheld, but they are thought to be connected with the recent Japan Sugar Company scandal, the investigation of which showed the accused to be guilty of a number of questionable transactions. The disclosures caused a drop of from fifty to sixty points in the price of the Company's stock, and many holders have been ruined.

It is generally believed that the investigations also demonstrated the existence of bribery in the Diet. All the arrested members belong to the dominant political party.

A concert given by first-class talent under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Sodality of St Peter's Cathedral will be held in St. Peter's School, Monday, May 17th. In addition to a fine programme there will be put on a little two-act comedy entitled "My Aunt's Heiress" with clever principals. Admission 25c. 2d-111

RAILWAY BILL WITHDRAWN.

London, May 15th.—It is announced that the Great, Northern, Great Central, and Great Eastern Railway Companies have decided after the fullest consideration, not to proceed further with the bill providing for their working union.

The object of the bill promoted by the three companies was to bring a working union for the purpose of preventing overlapping and thereby effecting economies in expenditure. As a matter of fact, the companies, apparently anticipating the ultimate sanction of the scheme, amalgamated some of the branch offices in London and introduced other changes to which material economies were attributed at the last half-yearly meetings.

There was considerable [illegible] the [illegible] as [illegible] great railway trust.

Forecasts Good Weather, But Says Storm Period Due On 21st

Washington, D.C., May 15th.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent 17 to 21, warm wave 16 to 20, cool wave 19 to 23. This was expected to bring a great rise in temperatures, to cause radical weather events with very little rain and generally good crop weather.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about 21, cross Pacific slpoe by close of 22, great central valleys 23 to 25, eastern states 26. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about 21, great central valleys 23, eastern states 25. Cold wave will cross Pacific slope about 24, great central valleys 26, eastern states 28.

The special features of this disturbance will be warmer, better crop weather and not much rain. It will cause severe storms on the Pacific slope and at the same time the preceding disturbance will be causing severe storms in eastern sections.

I warn all persons on Northern Pacific slope, northeastern Pacific ocean, eastern Provinces of Canada and eastern states that dangerous storms may be expected within a few days of May 21. All the planetary forces are, and have been for a month, in electric touch with the earth, and only small disturbance is necessary to touch off a very dangerous storm.

In a few localities some errors have occured in my forecasts but in most sections the forecasts were largely successful. My forecasts for vicinity of Washington, D.C., were about 70 per cent. good. I have not heretofore made forecasts regularly for this section.

There are 30 or more well defined weather cycles and I am now able to make useful forecasts for all sections of the country. One difficulty remains to be overcome. These cycles overlap each other and it is difficult to determine where one cycle quits and another begins. I am experimenting on this problem and giving it intense study. When it is conquered, the weather problem will have been solved and I hope to accomplish this ere the year closes.

Our national weather bureau is losing prestige. The magazines are giving it a terribly black eye. They do not oppose the weather bureau but its management. Chief Moore is in hard luck and I do not envy him his position. Our weather bureau is at the end of its career as a useful government department unless is succeeds in improving its work. I do not want to be the chief of the weather bureau but I do aspire to success in formulating a new system of weather forecasting that will make our weather bureau more popular with the people. If it can succeed in this I will have reached the zenith of my ambition.

HUSBAND'S RIGHT TO ABUSE HIS WIFE

London, May 15.—A wife who complained at the Marylebone police court that her husband used abusive language to her, was informed by Mr. Plowden that this was one of a husband's privileges.

"You must put up with it," the magistrate told her. "Better an abusive husband than no husband at all."

"But I have had so many years of this kind of thing," she protested.

"I cannot give you any redress," Mr. Plowden replied. "You must expect a certain amount of abuse in this world."

MAKES ASTONISHING CURES

Mi-o-na Tablets Cure Dyspepsia by Promptly Removing the Cause, or Money Back.

There is just one way to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles, trivial or serious and that is to tone up or put energy into the stomach walls, so that they will be able to properly mix or churn the food.

Mi-o-na tablets quickly arouse the stomach from its inaction and in a short time it is able to do its work properly.

Harry Dodd, of Bridge street, Hastings, Ont., says: "For seven years I had suffered and spent much money doctoring, but [illegible] no avail. I could eat but very little, as the food would ferment and sour, making gas, which caused serious heart depression. I was in constant misery, sour gas would belch from my stomach, I was fatigued and weak and had no ambition. I did not feel like going anywhere or seeing anyone. There was a constant dull pain in the pit of the stomach. I was unable to sleep, was nervous, restless and would awake more tired than on going to bed. I tried Mi-o-na and soon found relief, and in less than six weeks Mi-o-na had completely cured me."

Sophy of Kravonia

ANTHONY HOPE

Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda"

Copyright, 1906, Anthony Hope Hawkins

"For a moment we thought it was our own men," said Rastatz, continuing his account, "and the colonel shouted, 'Don't fire, you fools!' But then they cheered, and we knew the Volsenian accent—curse them! 'Sheepskins again!' said the colonel, with a wry kind of smile. He didn't hesitate then; he jumped up, crying: 'To the barges, to the barges! Follow me!'

"We all followed. It was just as safe to go with him as to stay where you were. We made a dash for it and got to the bank of the river. Then they rose out of the ditch in front of us—and they were at us behind, too—with steel now. They daren't shoot for fear of hitting their own people in our front. But the idea of a knife in your back isn't pleasant, and in the end more of our men turned to meet them than went on with the colonel. I went on with him, though. I'm always for the safest place if there's one safer than another. But here there wasn't, so I thought I might as well do the proper thing. We met them right by the water's edge, and the first I made out was the witch herself, in sheepskins like the rest of them, white as a sheet, but with that infernal mark absolutely blazing. She was between Peter Vassip and a tall man I didn't know—I found out afterward that he was the Englishman Dunstanbury—and the three came straight at us. She cried, 'The king, the king!' and behind us we heard Lukovitch and his lot crying, 'The king, the king!'

"Our fellows didn't like it, that's the truth. They were uneasy in their minds about that job of poor old Mistitch's, and they feared the witch like the devil. The heart was out of them. One lad near me burst out crying. A witch and a ghost didn't seem pleasant things to fight. Oh, it was all nonsense, but you know what fellows like that are. Their cry of 'The king!' and the sight of the woman caused a moment's hesitation. It was enough to give them the drop on us. But the colonel never hesitated. He flung himself straight at her and fired as he sprang. I just saw what happened before I got a crack on the crown of the head from the butt end of a rifle which knocked me out of time. As the colonel fired Peter Vassip flung himself in front of her and took the bullet in his own body. Dunstanbury jumped right on the colonel, cut him on the arm so that he dropped his revolver and grappled with him. Dunstanbury dropped his sword, and the colonel's wasn't drawn. It was just a tussle. They were tussling when the blood came flowing down into my eyes from the wound on my head. I couldn't see anything more; I fainted. Just as I went off I heard somebody cry 'Hands up!' and I imagined the fighting was pretty well over."

The fighting was over. One scene remained which Rastatz did not see. When Colonel Stafnitz, too, heard the call "Hands up!" when the firing stopped and all became quiet, he ceased to struggle. Dunstanbury found him suddenly changed to a log beneath him. His hands were already on the colonel's throat, and he could have strangled him now without difficulty. But when Stafnitz no longer tried to defend himself he loosed his hold, got up and stood over him with his hand on the revolver in his belt. The colonel fingered his throat a minute, sat up, looked round and rose to his feet. He saw Sophy standing before him. By her side Peter Vassip lay on the ground, tended by Basil Williamson and one of his comrades. Colonel Stafnitz bowed to Sophy with a smile.

"I forgot you, madame," said Stafnitz.

"I didn't forget monseigneur," she answered.

He looked round him again, shrugged his shoulders and seemed to think for a moment. There was an absolute stillness, a contrast to the preceding turmoil. But the silence made uncomfortable men whom the fight had not shaken. Their eyes were set on Stafnitz.

"The prince died in fair fight," he said.

"No. You sent Mistitch to murder him," Sophy replied. Her eyes were relentless, and Stafnitz was ringed round with enemies.

"I apologize for this embarrassment. I really ought to have been killed. It's just a mistake," he said, with a smile. He turned quickly to Dunstanbury: "You seem to be a gentleman, sir. Pray come with me. I need a witness." He pointed with his unwounded hand to the barn.

Dunstanbury bowed assent. The colonel in his turn bowed to Sophy, and the two of them turned and walked off toward the barn. Sophy stood motionless, watching them until they turned the corner; then she fell on her knees and began to talk soothingly to Peter Vassip, who was hard hit, but, in Basil Williamson's opinion, promised to do well. Sophy was talking to the poor fellow when the sound of a revolver shot—a single shot—came from the barn. Colonel Stafnitz had corrected the mistake. Sophy did not raise her head. A moment later Dunstanbury came back and rejoined them. He exchanged a look with Sophy, inclining his head as a man does in answering "Yes." Then she rose.

"Now for the barges and the guns," she said.

"Pray come with me; I need a witness."

They could not carry the guns back to Volseni, nor, indeed, was there any use for them there now. But neither were monseigneur's guns for the enemies of monseigneur. Under Lukovitch's skilled directions (his wound proved slight) the big guns were so disabled as to remain of little value and the barges taken out into midstream and there scuttled with their cargoes. While one party pursued this work Dunstanbury made the prisoners collect their wounded and dead, place them on a wagon and set out on their march to Slavna. Then his men placed their dead on horses. They had lost three. Five were wounded besides Peter Vassip, but none of them severely; all could ride. For Peter they took a cart, from the farm, to convey him as far as the ascent to the hills. Up that he would have to be carried by his comrades.

It was noon before all their work was done. The barges were settling in the water. As they started to ride back to Volseni the first sank. The second was soon to follow it.

"We have done our work," said Lukovitch.

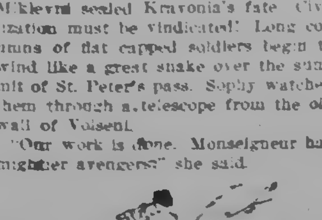
And Sophy answered, "Yes."

But Stafnitz's men had not carried [illegible] of their commander back. They left it in the barn, cursing him for the trap he had led them into. Later in the day the panic stricken lock keeper stole out from the cellar where he had hidden himself and found it in the barn. He and his wife lifted it with cursings, bore it to the river and flung it in. It was carried over the weir and floated down to Slavna. They fished it out with a boathook just opposite Suleiman's tower. The hint to Captain Sterkoff was a broad one. He reported a vacancy in the command and sent the keys of the fort to General Stenovics. It was Sunday morning.

"The colonel has got back just when he said he would. But where are the guns?" asked General Stenovics of Captain Markart. The captain had by now made up his mind which turn to take.

But no power ensued to Stenovics. At the best his fate was a soft fall—a fall on to a cushioned shelf. The cup of Kravonia's iniquity, full with the prince's murder, brimmed over with the punishment of the man who had caused it. The fight by the lock of Miklevni sealed Kravonia's fate. Civilization must be vindicated! Long columns of flat capped soldiers began to wind like a great snake over the summit of St. Peter's pass. Sophy watched them through a telescope from the old wall of Volseni.

"Our work is done. Monseigneur has mightier avengers!" she said.



Chapter Thirty-three

VOLSENI forgave Sophy its dead and wounded sons. Her popularity blazed up in a last fierce, flickering fire. The guns were taken; they would go to Slavna; they would never batter the walls of Volseni into fragments. Slavna might be defied again. That was the great thing to Volseni, and it made little account of the snakelike line which crawled over St. Peter's pass and down to Dobrava and on to Slavna. Let Slavna—hated Slavna—reckon with that! And if the snake or another like it came to Volseni? Well, that was better than knuckling down to Slavna. Tonight King Sergius was avenged, and Queen Sophia had returned in victory!

For the first time since the king's death the bell of the ancient church rang joyously, and men sang and feasted in the gray city of the hills. Thirty from Volseni had beaten a hundred from Slavna; the guns were at the bottom of the Krath; it was enough. If Sophy had bidden them, they would have streamed down on Slavna that night in one of those fierce raids in which their forefathers of the middle ages had loved to swoop upon the plain.

But Sophy had no delusions. She saw her crown—that fleeting phantom ornament, fitly foreseen in the visions of a charlatan—passing from her brow without a sigh. She had not needed Dunstanbury's arguments to prove to her that there was no place for her left in Kravonia. She was content to have it so; she had done enough. Sorrow had not passed from her face, but serenity had come upon it in fuller measure. She had struck for monseigneur, and the blow was witness to her love. It was enough in her and enough in little Volseni. Let the mightier avengers do the rest!

She had allowed Dunstanbury to leave her after supper in order to make preparations for a start to the frontier at dawn. "You must certainly go," she had said, "and perhaps I'll come with you."

She went at night up on to the wall, always her favorite place. She loved the spaciousness of air and open country before her there. Basil Williamson found her deep in thought when he came to tell her of the progress of the wounded.

"They're all doing well, and Peter Vassip will live. Dunstanbury has made him promise to come to him when he's recovered, so you'll meet him again at all events. And Marie Zerkovitch and her husband talk of settling in Paris. You won't lose all your Kravonian friends."

"You assume that I'm coming with you tomorrow morning?"

"I'm quite safe in assuming that Dunstanbury won't go unless you do," he answered, smiling. "We can't leave you alone here, you know."

"I shouldn't stay here anyhow," she said, "or at any rate I should be where nobody could hurt me." She pointed at a dim lantern fastened to the gate tower by an iron clamp, then waved her hand toward the surrounding darkness. "That's life, isn't it?" she asked.

"If I believed that I could go to monseigneur, I would go tonight—nay, I would have gone at Miklevni. It was only putting my head out of that ditch a minute sooner! If I believed even that I could lie in the church there and know that he was near! If I believed even that I could lie there quietly and remember and think of him! You're a man of science; you're not a peasant's child, as I am. What do you think? You mustn't wonder that I've had my thoughts too. At Lady Meg's we did little else than try to find out whether we were going anywhere else. That's all she cared about. And if she does ever get to a next world she won't care about that. She'll only go on trying to find out whether there's still another beyond. What do you think?"

"I hardly expected to find you so philosophically inclined," he said.

"It's a practical question with me now. On its answer depends whether I come with you or stay here—by monseigneur in the church."

Basil said something professional—something about nerves and temporary strain. But he performed this homage to medical etiquette in a rather perfunctory fashion. He had never seen a woman more composed or more obviously and perfectly healthy. Sophy smiled and went on:

"But if I live, I'm sure at least of being able to think and able to remember. It comes to a gamble, doesn't it? It's just possible I might get more; it's quite likely—I think it's probable—I should lose even what I have now."

"I think you're probably right about the chances of the gamble," he told her, "though no doubt certainty is out of place or at least one doesn't talk about it. Shall I tell you what science says?"

"No," said Sophy, smiling faintly. "Science thinks in multitudes, and I'm thinking of the individual tonight. Even Lady Meg never made much of science, you know."

He pointed at the smoky lantern. "That's not life," he said, growing more earnest, yet smiling. "That's now—just here and now—and, yes, it's very smoky." He waved his hand over the darkness. "That's life. Dark? Yes, but the night will lift, the darkness pass away. Valley and sparkling lake will be there and the summit of the heaven kissing hills. Life cries to you with a sweet voice."

"Yes," she murmured, "with a sweet voice. And perhaps some day there would be light on the hills. But, ah, I'm torn in sunder this night. I wish I had died there at Miklevni while my blood was hot." She paused a long while in thought. Then she went on: "If I go, I must go while it's still dark and while these good people sleep. Go and tell Lord Dunstanbury to be ready to start an hour before dawn and do you and he come then to the door of the church. If I'm not waiting for you there, come inside and find me."

He started toward her with an eager gesture of protest. She raised her hand and checked him.

"No, I've decided nothing. I can't tell yet," she said. She turned and left him. He heard her steps descending the old winding stair which led from the top of the wall down into the street. He did not know whether he would see her alive again, and with her message of such ambiguous meaning he went to Dunstanbury. Yet curiously, though he had pleaded so urgently with her, though to him her death would mean the loss of one of the beautiful things from out the earth, he was in no distress for her and did not dream of attempting any constraint. She knew her strength—she would choose right. If life were tolerable, she would take up the burden. If not, she would let it lie unlifted at her quiet feet.

His mood could not be Dunstanbury's, who had come to count her presence as the light of the life that was his. Yet Dunstanbury heard the message quietly and quietly made every preparation in obedience to her bidding. That done, he sat in the little room of the inn and smoked his pipe with Basil. Henry Brown waited his word to take the horses to the door of the church. Basil Williamson had divined his friend's feeling for Sophy and wondered at his calmness.

"If I felt the doubt that you do, I shouldn't be calm," said Dunstanbury. "But I know her. She will be true to her love."

He could not be speaking of that love of hers which was finished, whose end she was now mourning in the little church. It must be of another love that he spoke—of one bred in her nature, the outcome of her temperament and of her being the woman that she was. The spirit which had brought her to Slavna had made her play her part there, had welcomed and caught at every change and chance of fortune, had never laid down the sword till the blow was struck—that spirit would preserve her and give her back to life now and some day give life back to her.

"You assume that I'm coming with you tomorrow morning?"

He was right. When they came to the door of the church she was there. For the first time since monseigneur had died her eyes were red with weeping, but her face was calm. She gave her hand to Dunstanbury.

"Come, let us mount," she said. "I have said goodby."

Lukovitch knew Dunstanbury's plans. He was waiting for them at the gate, his arm in a sling, and with him were the Zerkovitches. These last they would see again. It was probably farewell forever to gallant Lukovitch. He kissed the silver ring on Sophy's finger.

"I brought nothing into Kravonia," she said, "and I carry nothing out except this ring which monseigneur put on my finger—the ring of the bailiffs of Volseni."

"Keep it," said Lukovitch. "I think there will be no more bailiffs of Volseni, or some prince not of our choosing will take the title by his own will. He will not be our bailiff, as monseigneur was. You will be our bailiff, though our eyes never see you, and you never see our old gray walls again. Madame, have a kindly place in your heart for Volseni. We shan't forget you nor the blow we struck under your leadership. The fight at Miklevni may well be the last that we shall fight as free men."

"Volseni is written on my heart," she answered. "I shall not forget."

She bade her friends farewell and then ordered Lukovitch to throw open the gate. She and the three Englishmen rode through, Henry Brown leading the pack horse by the bridle. The mountains were growing gray with the first approaches of dawn.

It was probably farewell forever to gallant Lukovitch.

As she rode through Sophy paused a moment, leaned sideways in her saddle and kissed the ancient lintel of the door.

"Peace be on this place," she said, "and peace to the tomb where monseigneur lies buried."

"Peace be on thy head and fortune with thee," answered Lukovitch in the traditional words of farewell. He kissed her hand again, and they departed.

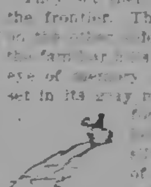
It was high morning when they rode up the ascent to St. Peter's pass and came to the spot where their cross track joined the main road over the pass from Dobrava and the capital. In silence they mounted to the summit. The road under their horses' feet was trampled with the march of thousands of men who had passed over it in an irresistible advance on Slavna.

At the summit of the pass they stopped, and Sophy turned to look back. She sat there for a long while in silence.

"I have loved this land," at last she said. "It has given me much, and very much it has taken away. Now the face of it is to be changed. But in my heart the memory of it will not change." She looked across the valley, across the sparkling face of Lake Talti, to the gray walls of Volseni and kissed her hand. "Farewell, monseigneur!" she whispered very low.

The day of Kravonia was done. The head of the great snake had reached Slavna. Countess Ellenburg and young Alexis were in flight. Stenovics took orders where he had looked to rule. The death of monseigneur was indeed avenged. But there was no place for Sophy, the queen of a tempestuous hour.

They set their horses' heads toward the frontier. They began the descent on the other side. The lake was gone, the familiar hills vanished. Only in the eye of memory stood old Volseni, still set in its gray [illegible]. [illegible] rode forth from Kravonia [illegible] sheepskins and her silver ring, the last queen of Kravonia, the last bailiff of Volseni, the last chosen leader of the mountain men. But the memory of the red star lived after her [illegible] monseigneur [illegible] avenged him. [illegible] her [illegible] the face of other women [illegible] and how the red star glowed in sorrow and in [illegible] and in clash of arms, promising to some glory and to others death. In the street of Volseni and in the cabins among the hills you may hear the tale of the red star yet.



At the summit [illegible] Sophy turned to look back.

To the unconquerable heart life stands unconquered. What danger had not shaken not even sorrow could overthrow. She rode into the future with Dunstanbury on her right hand, patience in his mind and in his heart hope. Some day the sun would shine on the summit of heaven kissing hills.

Comfort and Convenience

If you have never experienced the pleasures of living in a "Sunshine" heated house, let us tell you that it is a comfort and convenience which is fully appreciated.

For an average of seven tons of coal to an eight-roomed house, an even temperature of sixty-five to seventy can be kept up from October to April. Once a is started there is no work attached to its operation beyond placing in coal twice a day, and drawing out ashes and filling water pan every other day. Chains on a pulley fixed in the hall, or room above the cellar, answer the respective requirements for:—Burning Up, or Closing Off.

Sunshine Furnace

No caretaker is necessary, no engineer has to be called in. No precautions, beyond following directions, are necessary.

If you can run a stove (and who cannot) you can run a Sunshine Furnace.

IS APPOINTED TO SUCCEED POPE

Assistant Provincial Secretary Mulvey Goes to Ottawa.

ARMSTRONG IS MOVED UP

As Result of Creation of Secretaryship of External Affairs for Canada Under Secretary of State Pope Is Promoted, Thos. Mulvey Takes His Place and Armstrong Gets the Provincial Job.

Toronto, May 15.—Thomas Mulvey, K.C., Assistant Provincial Secretary, has been offered and accepted the position of Under Secretary of State at Ottawa, which at the present time is filled by Joseph Pope, C.M.G. Mr. Pope has been given another appointment in the public service, as Under Secretary of the Department of External Affairs.

Hon. W. J. Hanna made the announcement yesterday afternoon. He said:

"Mr. Mulvey a few days ago received an offer of the position of Under Secretary of State at Ottawa at a salary very much in advance of the salaries paid deputies here. After talking the matter over with me, he decided to accept—his new duties to commence on the first of June next. "We are all very sorry," he said, "to lose Mr. Mulvey, but we congratulate the Government at Ottawa on having secured one of the best officials in the public service to-day."

THOMAS MULVEY, K.C.

S. A. Armstrong, inspector of public charities, will succeed Mr. Mulvey as deputy. He will, as well, continue in his present position as inspector until the fall, devoting himself in the future as he has in the past to the management of the estates branch of the Department. Mr. Armstrong's reputation for personal charity and good works render him eminently fitted for the post he has so well filled for some years.

Mr. Mulvey goes to Ottawa with a distinguished academic and departmental record behind him. He is a graduate of St. Michael's College and Toronto University. He studied law under the late Walter Barwick, K.C., was called to the Bar in 1889, and was made a King's counsel in 1902. In 1903 he received the appointment of Assistant Provincial Secretary. In this capacity Mr. Mulvey has had charge of several important matters for the Government. The present Companies Act is the result of his work. In the celebrated case of C.P.R. v. Ottawa Fire Insurance Co. he was counsel for the province. He also acted for the province before the Parliamentary committees at Ottawa, opposing the co-operative companies bill and Dominion power transmission bill, succeeding in both.

THE TREATY MAY BE REJECTED

Sir Wilfrid Replies to Critics of Government's Attitude.

RESENTS ONTARIO'S PART

Strong Disapproval of Rider to Proposed Pact With United States May Cause Its Refusal by the Government—Premier Roasts Sir James Whitney For His Interference In the Matter.

Ottawa, May 15.—The Opposition were afforded an opportunity in the House of Commons yesterday to express their views upon the waterways treaty as ratified by the United States Senate, and the discussion, which was followed with close interest by the Prime Minister, disclosed a sense of strong dissatisfaction with certain features of it, particularly those relating to St. Mary's river at Sault Ste. Marie, the St. Mary's river and Milk river in Alberta and the Niagara river.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier defended the personnel of the commission, declaring that it was preposterous to say that the men were appointed because of their political influence. The commissioners had been entrusted to make a division of the waters of the St. Lawrence basin and everyone had to admit that they had made a fair division. As regards Niagara, some held that they should have got more, but under a treaty it was impossible for each party to get all that it wanted. Concerning the St. Mary and Milk rivers, the Americans contemplated putting at the head of those streams an immense reclamation works, where water would be stored and would be available during all the summer months. Mr. Magrath and his constituents would have the benefit of it.

Sir Wilfrid did not care to express an opinion at present on the whole treaty for obvious reasons, but the Senate amendments had caused delay in the ratification. Two things were to be considered: (1) What were the physical conditions to be affected by it? (2) The amendment was not as clear and as lucid as one would wish. He had not made up his mind regarding the treaty as it stood now, but he was very glad to have the views of those who had spoken.

In conclusion, Sir Wilfrid criticized recent actions of the Government of Ontario. He did not think that Ontario's interference was well taken. He could understand the protest regarding the Conmee bill, but when they interfered in the Canada Life legislation, they went altogether beyond their authority. The same applied to the waterways treaty. Sir James Whitney and Hon. Mr. Hanna might offer their opinions, and great weight would be attached to them, but interference was a different thing.

Mr. R. L. Borden promptly declared that the province had riparian rights on the St. Lawrence, and the Ontario Government would be false to every duty they owed to the people if they did not speak while yet there was time.

The Premier had destroyed his own argument when he had told them that the members of the commission had been instructed to consult with the members of the Ontario Government. Ontario was further justified because the treaty called for legislation which must be enacted by the various provinces, where these rights come into question.

The debate was opened by Mr. Magrath, who said the Canadian Government had taken three years to appoint three commissioners, and then found two of them in the corridors of its own Departments at Ottawa. The American Government originated ideas, pushed negotiations with celerity and appointed eminent authorities; the Colonial Office in London also showed energy and despatch, while the Ottawa Government moved only when prodded by the Colonial Office. The upshot was that the American commissioners were appointed two years before the Canadian section was completed and several of the Canadian appointments showed that the patronage system had been at work, while no special technical experts were appointed. The Canadian section, therefore, were dominated by better men.

He criticized the Government for yielding to the Americans when they refused to include the St. John's river and the Americans had ignored the subject of the transmission of electric energy, though set for discussion.

The Canada Life Co.'s bill went through the banking and commerce committee of the Senate yesterday morning without hindrance.

In the afternoon the Senate committee discussed the Conmee power bill for an hour. R. G. Code, K.C., representing the Ontario Government, made a strong protest against the expropriation clauses of the bill as a distinct invasion of the province's rights.

Senator Dandurand asked why the promoters did not go to the Ontario Legislature instead of coming to Ottawa. F. B. Carvell, M.P., appeared for the promoters.

The Thessalon and Northern Railway Bill was reported, Mr. Code first entering protest as an invasion of provincial rights, as did also L. A. Globensky, K.C., for the Quebec Government.

One Fruit of Local Option.

Grimsby, May 15.—Summons have been issued by Magistrate Kidd for the appearance of three men, who are believed to be selling liquor illegally. The wet stuff has been brought in here in such quantities lately by men who come down from Hamilton, that decent citizens are disgusted with the present state of affairs, and the fighting and nightly carousing on the streets.

Four Fatalities.

Prince Rupert, B.C., May 15.—Through the premature explosion of a blast at Smith Bros.' G.T.P. camp, Alex. Watts of Marysville, Tenn., and A. Montegrin, were blown up and instantly killed.

Two Montegrins were drowned in the Skeena while bringing a boatload of powder down the river.

Why Bass' Barley Wine

Should be Taken by Invalids and Delicate Persons.

Bass' Barley Wine
THE KING OF TONICS
Bass & Co.
BURTON

The claim is often made that stout and porter are recommended by doctors to persons in delicate health.

Do you think that any doctor would advise a delicate woman to eat heavy indigestible food?

Yet it's just as absurd to ask her to take stout or porter when she is in delicate health.

The person who can digest stout or porter, even in small quantities, isn't in need of a tonic.

Because either of these, owing to the constant fermentation that's going on in them, can only be assimilated by persons with healthy digestions.

It's true that stout and porter contain nourishing and tonic properties due to the barley malt and hops.

It's also true that they contain a certain percentage of alcohol which aids digestion.

But, if the stomach is taxed to offset the effect of the fermentation, how can it assimilate the nutritive and tonic principles of stout or porter?

Bass' Barley Wine contains, in a condensed form, more nutritive and tonic properties than can be found in the finest stout or porter.

But it differs from either of these in being absolutely free from fermentation.

Bass' Barley Wine is matured for three years in casks until all fermentation is removed.

In it you have all the nutritive principles of the barley malt and hops, fully preserved, but in a palatable form that the most delicate stomach can readily digest.

Bass' Barley Wine can be digested when the stomach cannot assimilate any other tonic.

Bass' Barley Wine is sold at one price—30c—

WOULD YOU CONVICT— ON CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE?

GUILTY?—THE TRAGEDY OF THE HOUSE IN GREEN STREET

A TRUE STORY

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

DELANCEY NICOLL, formerly District Attorney of New York county, says— "I see no danger in circumstantial evidence that is not fully provided for in law. There have been very few cases in which innocent persons have been convicted on circumstantial evidence, and very few in which innocent persons have been convicted on direct evidence.

"Circumstantial evidence is good evidence. Direct evidence, of course, admits of perjury. Circumstances very seldom lie. There is no rule to be laid down as to whether circumstantial evidence or direct evidence is better. It depends entirely upon the case. Whichever may be chiefly relied upon, the fact stands that the accused has every chance. No jury will convict unless guilt is proved beyond a reasonable doubt."

THE grimy house in Green street, Chicago, slouching to premature decay, bowed by faulty construction and ill usage, held the trace of many a sordid secret behind its three storied, weather beaten façade. Along its sagging stairs and muddy hallways passed strange faces of the world that wakes to life with the travesty of a smile in the glitter of the streets at night. Side by side, in its narrow rooms, huddled simple poverty and the lying semblance of wealth; yet it was not crowded, in the sense of a tenement. The sun seldom filtered through its windows, save where a shutter hung awry. Hopeless, cheerless, it knew its unrewarded virtues and its unrebuked vices, its rare moments of laughter and its frequent flashes of violence.

Sharp words, blows, oaths, echoes of quarrels, floated through its passages at intervals. There was none to remark or to inquire. Its tenants were not too curious concerning either its periods of turmoil or of silence.

A woman awoke from sleep at some time approaching midnight in the middle of May, 1891, on the third floor of the Green street house, filled with a terror that caught her at her throat like poisonous fumes and left her trembling and choking where she lay. From below, on the second floor, came a subdued, sinister sound. She had slept through many an uproar, or, waking, had given it never a thought. But there was something in the hammering and scuffling beneath that struck primitive, unreasoning fear into her.

How long she lay there listening she could not have known exactly, although she afterward was ready enough to cling to an estimate. But some time later the noise ceased, and when she had summoned the courage she tiptoed to her door and opened it.

The hall was lighted from a flaring gas jet. Her door commanded a view of the stairs to the floor below and part of the hall of that floor. She saw no one, heard nothing further for some time. In the dead and middle of the night, while her frightened breathing alone broke the quiet and the gas flame flickered, the minutes passed again unnoted.

Suddenly a door in the lower hall within her field of vision was flung wide and a man stepped out. She recognized him instantly. It was George Painter, a shiftless worker at odd jobs, who lived with a woman known as his wife in three rooms to which this door gave access. His face showed drawn and yellow in the gas light as he glanced along the hall and up the stairs. She could see his shoulders rise and fall like one who strives for breath. He was without hat or coat. She drew back into her room as he came to the foot of the stairs and called:—

"Is any one up?"

She made no answer. After a short pause the man strode quickly back into his home, closing the door after him. The woman returned to her post of observation. Once more the door below was flung open and the figure of the man appeared. She did not retreat this time and he caught sight of her.

"Has any one been to my rooms to-night?" he asked, with a break in his voice and an agitated manner. She replied that she thought not.

"Somebody Has Killed Alice."

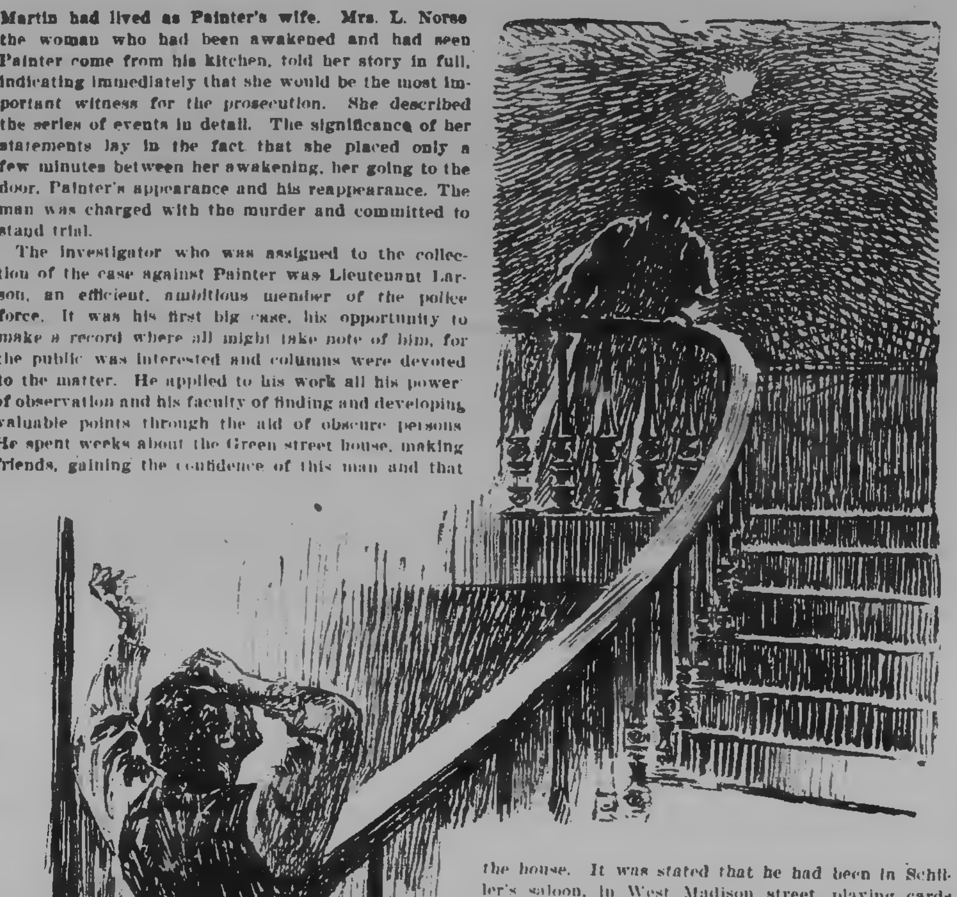
"God!" he shrieked, throwing his arms above his head, "somebody has killed my Alice!" He turned and ran down the stairs to the street, while the woman, her fear once more strong upon her, locked her door and crept to her bed.

Half an hour later Painter returned with Policemen Donovan and O'Day. He led them to his flat, where a hasty preliminary examination showed that foul murder had been done within two hours. The door on the hall opened into the kitchen. To the front of this was the bedroom of Alice Martin, the common law wife of Painter. To the rear of it was Painter's bedroom, which gave in turn upon a rear entrance. The kitchen and the rear bedroom were in usual condition. In the front room was evidence of a fearful struggle.

The body of Alice Martin, partly clothed, lay upon the floor. The bed coverings and the wall were spotted and stained. Chairs had been broken and a table overturned. No weapon, so far as could be discovered, had been used, only the bare muscular hands of the assailant. The victim had been choked and beaten to death, beaten against the floor [illegible] the wall. There were no finger prints, no tracks leading from the room, none of the more common clews in such cases. Such was the essential outline of the murder.

These were the happenings of Sunday night, May 17. On Monday morning the Coroner held his inquest. Mrs. Laura [illegible] and others testified that Alice Martin had lived as Painter's wife. Mrs. L. Norse the woman who had been awakened and had seen Painter come from his kitchen, told her story in full, indicating immediately that she would be the most important witness for the prosecution. She described the series of events in detail. The significance of her statements lay in the fact that she placed only a few minutes between her awakening, her going to the door, Painter's appearance and his reappearance. The man was charged with the murder and committed to stand trial.

The investigator who was assigned to the collection of the case against Painter was Lieutenant Larson, an efficient, ambitious member of the police force. It was his first big case, his opportunity to make a record where all might take note of him, for the public was interested and columns were devoted to the matter. He applied to his work all his power of observation and his faculty of finding and developing valuable points through the aid of obscure persons. He spent weeks about the Green street house, making friends, gaining the confidence of this man and that woman, prying, questioning, listening, adding daily to his list of witnesses, slowly building up his formidable structure of circumstances.



"GOD!" HE SHRIEKED, THROWING HIS ARMS ABOVE HIS HEAD.

He found two or three habitués of the place who were willing to swear that Painter customarily beat his wife, that quarrels between them were of frequent occurrence. He found one woman who declared she had heard the prisoner threaten Alice Martin with death. Another stated that Painter had thrown her down stairs. Others came forward, after having been seen by Larson, and said that Painter had lived as a parasite upon Alice Martin, driving her into the streets and wresting from her the bread of shame.

The detective obtained an inkling to the position to be taken by the defence and set himself to combat it. He ascertained that Mrs. Norse was sure of her estimates as to the periods of time that elapsed between the events of the night and confirmed her in them. He searched Painter's home with painstaking application to the veriest details and was rewarded with an important discovery. This was an overcoat bearing stains which, it was established by experts, had been caused by blood. He gathered statements from those who had seen the prisoner on the night of the murder that the man had been wearing this very overcoat.

When Larson had finished the case for the prosecution was complete. The motive, essential in the eyes of the law to all circumstantial evidence cases, was supplied by the perpetual quarrels in which the couple had indulged and the man's demand upon the woman for money. The possible plea of an alibi could be met by the testimony of one who saw the prisoner at the scene of the crime almost immediately after it had been committed. There was the tangible proof of his guilt in the blood stained garment which he had worn that night. The State's Attorney was content.

His Amazing Trial.

Several days were necessary to obtain a jury, and the taking of evidence began on February 1, 1892. Painter was defended by Theodore G. Case and Thomas S. Hogan. W. S. Elliott, Jr., Assistant State's Attorney, conducted the prosecution. Judge Clifford presided.

The trial lasted a week. The defence sought to prove that the murder had been committed some hours before midnight, when Painter was absent from the house. It was stated that he had been in Schiller's saloon, in West Madison street, playing cards and drinking. The prisoner's explanation was as follows:—

He had come home and had entered the Green street house by the rear stairway, in accordance with his habit. He had stayed in his own room, which opened on this stairway, had taken off his hat and coat and had thrown himself upon the bed to read. Hearing no sounds from the woman's room, he had grown uneasy, had passed through the kitchen and had found Alice Martin dead. Yielding to sudden panic he had rushed into the hall and had asked if any one was up. The thought occurring to him that the woman might still retain some life, he had returned to find her almost cold and had again rushed into the hall, this time seeing and speaking to Mrs. Norse on the upper landing.

The case for Painter, apart from the attempt to establish an alibi, hung chiefly upon the fact that when he came up to the two policemen in the street and hurried with them to the house they did not notice stains upon his clothing or hands. When he was arrested the following day no stains were discovered on his person. The only directly incriminating piece of evidence in this connection was the overcoat, which had not been produced by Larson until some months after the murder. Professor Ewell testified that it was impossible to determine whether the spots on the overcoat were six weeks or two years old.

The significance of this part of the defensive story was well brought out and strongly emphasized. It was shown by expert testimony that it would have been impossible for the murderer to leave the scene of the crime without bearing marks of its commission unless he had carefully removed them immediately. There were no indications that cleansing had been resorted to. Indeed the very strength of the prosecution rested upon the point that Painter had been seen to come from his flat just after the sounds of violence had ceased, a position which did not admit any delay on his part.

Painter took the stand in his own defence. He told his version of the affair in a straightforward manner, explaining all his actions on the night of the murder and proving a strong witness for himself. But the preponderance of the testimony, if not of evidence, was against him in the minds of the jury. After retiring they took a number of ballots, finally bringing in a verdict of guilty and fixing the penalty as death. In the solemn moment, when Judge Clifford, about to pass sentence upon the prisoner, asked him the prescribed question, Painter, pale but firm, arose and said in a calm voice,

"Judge, I did not kill that woman."

At this point there began one of the most remarkable fights for the life of a convicted man in the history of criminal jurisprudence. Thrice Painter was snatched from the gallows, twice by a scant few hours, and in the last few moments of his life came a final agonizing respite, the result of a painful accident.

Motion for a new trial was denied and Judge Clifford set the hanging for June 24, 1892. The attorneys for the defence appealed to Governor Fifer for pardon or clemency, but he refused to interfere. They then applied to the State Supreme Court for a writ of supersedeas. The matter went over until the last day, and on the night of June 23 Judge Bailey granted the writ. The case was not argued before the Supreme Court, but the attorneys filed a brief which was considered in due course. In the decision the sentence was affirmed and Judge Clifford named the date of the hanging, for the second time, as December 15, 1893.

Friends to the Rescue.

Painter had been active in local politics and had some friends who came to his aid in his dire need. Other lawyers were retained, among them Major Blackburn. Luther Laflin Mills became independently interested in the case and lent his services. Governor Altgeld granted a hearing and a respite was asked that another application for a new trial might be made. The Governor refused at first, but later, when it was insistently represented that important new evidence had been discovered, he consented.

His decision was made on December 14, the day before that set for the hanging. A heavy storm had swept the State and nearly all the wires were down between Springfield and Chicago. It seemed for a time that the man must perish with hope at hand, but late at night a message to the Sheriff was forced through by a roundabout route and again Painter was saved. The third date for the execution was set at January 12, 1894. Desperate efforts were made to obtain a new trial, but before the courts were passed upon it again was necessary to obtain a reprieve from Governor Altgeld. He granted it, and a fourth date, January 26, was named.

One of the last attempts of Painter to clear himself of the crime in the eyes of men was made while he was confronted with inevitable death. It was a statement of his view of the case, written in his cell and given to Clerk Rice for publication after his execution. In this he called "Almighty God to witness that he spoke the truth," and began with the words, "I am innocent." This declaration, composed in admirable style and alive with poignant feeling, contained his story of his life. Summarized, it ran after this fashion:—

George H. Painter was born in Brooklyn in 1855, his father being a Methodist minister. He learned the trade of machinist in South Norwalk, Conn., and later he conducted a drug store in Brooklyn, which he sold. He moved to Chicago and for a time owned a laundry in Halsted street. His wife came with him, and, "after eleven years of happy married life," contracted consumption and died.

He met Alice Martin, who came to Chicago from Minneapolis, and she became his common law wife. They had lived together for a year and a half up to the time of the murder. He loved Alice Martin and their relations were of the pleasantest nature until he discovered that she was not faithful to him. Then he became despondent and took to drink. At times they patched their difficulties and then a breach would come again. He never threatened her with death, although he struck her once following the discovery of her infidelity. She continued to betray his trust and he continued to drink.

On the night of the murder he was in the West Madison street saloon. He came home and discovered the body of the woman, as related by the defence at the trial. The case against him was partly unfortunate circumstance and partly the product of clever manufacture. He accused the witnesses who had testified to having heard him threaten the woman with death and to having seen him throw her down stairs of perjury.

He pointed to the fact that Lieutenant Larson had collected most of the evidence, and declared that the policeman's ambition had spurred him to a point where he was willing to help railroad an innocent man to his death for the glory of a conviction. He emphasized once again that his clothing had been free from blood, and cast suspicion upon the manner in which the stains had come to be on the overcoat. In conclusion he declared that a combination of perjured testimony and faulty circumstantial evidence had brought him to his end.

To one who visited him in prison while he was awaiting the outcome of the hopeless struggle made on his behalf he elaborated his defence.

Painter's Defence.

"I have not been a good man, but I am not a murderer," he said. "They say I lived on Alice Martin, that I drove her to her shame and took the money away from her. It is a lie. It was the great sorrow of my life that she would not be true to me. When she was herself she was a good woman. When she drank she became a fiend, and then she betrayed me. And when she was unfaithful it bit into my heart and I tried to forget the wretched life in liquor. That was the round for months. It was horrible, but remember that I still loved her, as I do this minute, I take God to be my judge.

"I accepted money from her on just one occasion. I needed it and she willingly lent it to me. Need I admit this if it were otherwise? The sum amounted to several dollars and I took it.

"They say I used to beat her. It is a lie, and those who swear to it are perjured in the sight of heaven. Again, there is this much truth in it. I struck her once. She had been false again; she was hateful, bitter. I was in drink, and when she sneered at me, taunted me, I struck her. I have never ceased to repent of it. This is the sum of my transgression. For this they will hang me."

Painter was a large man, of great strength and good appearance, and he put all the force of his mental and bodily vigor into his words. He was remark*ably intelligent. He felt his position keenly,* fought against it desperately. Life was sweet to him, the more in that he had a mind sensitive enough to suffer intensely. He knew people and things. He had culture. He rebelled in every fibre against the threat of death.

While loophole after loophole was being closed against him he made an extraordinary proposal to the Court. About this time a famous paralytic "fakir" was exposed by a physician. He was a criminal who simulated a helpless condition to escape punishment for his acts, and was so expert that for months it was impossible to prove that he was feigning. Finally he was carried to an operating table and placed under an anaesthetic. As he was returning to consciousness, while his brain was still dimmed by the drug but was struggling toward its awakening, the table was tipped. In falling the man, not yet able to discipline his faculties to the part he had imposed upon himself, instinctively spread out his contracted and supposed paralyzed limbs.

Painter seized upon this incident. He begged that physicians be allowed to experiment upon him; that he be placed in some degree of stupor and questioned as to the murder at a time when his inmost thoughts might be revealed. He also asked that hypnotists use him as a subject in the same way.

"May it not be that a mesmerist can induce a mental condition in me that will cause me to tell whatever secrets I possess?" was his query. "Let the State take note of this for the chance of saving an innocent life. I am ready and eager to submit to all tests."

But the Court would not take cognizance. Hypnotism and the psychological effects of drugs held no part in legal matters. His petition was refused.

After Governor Altgeld granted the reprieve in December that gave the defence its second opportunity to put in a plea of fresh evidence Painter's attorneys advanced a set of affidavits that gave a new turn to the case. It was suggested that "Dick" Edwards, at that time serving a life sentence in Texas for the murder of a woman, knew something of the matter. Edwards was credited with the killing of three other women, and was believed to have been in Chicago at the time Alice Martin was strangled. A remarkable fact was that Edwards murdered Mrs. Hattie Hynes, in Denison, Texas, on May 17, 1892, exactly a year after the killing of Alice Martin.

The description of Edwards fitted that given by Mrs. Augusta Roth and May Slattery of a man they had seen about the Green street house. It was fairly well established that the Martin woman had entertained other men in the flat during Painter's absences. The two women went further. They swore that the man they had seen with Alice Martin was called "Dick" and that they had seen him in the house just prior to the time the murder must have been committed.

Goes to the Governor.

Mrs. Roth, the housekeeper, stated that Painter and the woman were her tenants for two months and that "Dick" was a frequent visitor, always when Painter was away. She said that she saw "Dick" and Alice Martin in Green street on the evening of [illegible], and that she heard "Dick" say, "Give me that money or I'll fix you so that you'll never be able to give Painter any more money." Another witness, Buckley, swore that "Dick" entered the Green street house that night.

With a mass of affidavits of this tenor Painter's attorneys carried the fight before the Governor. After a long conference the Executive announced that he believed no wrong had been done in the conviction. He pointed out that Edwards, so far as was known, had shot his victims and had never strangled them. But he granted the final reprieve to January 26 for the presentation of further evidence.

The defence fired its last shot. Richard Roche, still well known throughout the country in sporting circles, was brought forward. He swore to an affidavit stating that on the night of the murder he was in a certain notorious resort in Chicago when Edwards, whom he knew, came in with his hands and clothing covered with blood. He asked the man where he had been and Edwards replied, the statement read, that he "had given a woman a trimming in Green street."

Governor Altgeld brushed this affidavit aside as unworthy of consideration. He declared that it was worthless on its face, since no guilty man would come fresh from a murder to a public place and exhibit the stains he bore. He said the evidence showed that Painter had beaten the woman as often as five times a week. It was usually so, he remarked, with a man who lived on money he compelled a woman to earn. From that moment it was apparent that Painter must hang, but the prisoner did not cease to protest his innocence to any one who would listen, finally drawing up his posthumous statement.

The execution of George Painter was attended by one of the most terrible incidents that ever took place in that grim home of horrors, the Cook County Jail. Many there were who throughout had believed the man wronged, but the hardiest of those most firmly convinced of his guilt were not proof against the shock of superstitious doubt that swept upon the community when the facts of the last scene were made known. The weaker saw a judgment therein.

It was in the north corridor of the jail, from which the prisoners had been removed, following custom, and placed three and four in a cell through the other parts of the building. About a hundred persons filled the seats facing the gallows. An hour before the time set for his hanging Painter was led upon the scaffold, his arms manacled behind his back.

He began to talk, and as he talked he wrought himself into a whirlwind of prayer, appeal, passionate regret and impotent revolt against his fate. With nods of his head he indicated individuals in the crowd. He addressed men by name—politicians, persons he had known intimately, to whom he had loaned money and who had loaned money to him, with whom he had walked arm in arm. He demanded to know why they had come to look upon his degradation, his death. At times his voice, the voice of a powerful man, rose to a wailing scream.

"I don't want to die. I won't die! I am innocent!"

Again he spoke calmly, recalling some personal incident to the mind of an acquaintance, sitting white faced below him. He was one of the few men who had suffered capital punishment in the jail who stood in no need of stimulants to support them at the end. He was in possession of all his faculties. He argued, discussed, feverishly but fluently. He was talking for life, talking against death, his mind still alert for one more chance of escape, sharply bent upon sensing its consciousness, its vitality, to the last second.

Then the Rope Broke.

"Gentlemen," he began, "I see some friends here to-day—some good friends. O God, forgive them! A friend of mine who would come here to see me die—it hurts me. The brotherhood of humanity has taught better things. Men have sought death because they thought there was an advancement in the future life. To-day I hate death. I don't want to die. If I killed Alice Martin, the woman I dearly loved, the woman I loved so much I would almost have committed a crime for her, I pray this minute—my last on earth—that the eternal God will put me in eternal hell.

"If there is one man among you who is an American I say to him on his soul—on his soul, I say—see that the murderer of Alice Martin is found."

Toward the last of that hour the little group of men who, brought to the place by duty or by curiosity, had listened to the torrent of words sat quivering. To every one of them it was as if a jagged blade had hacked upon his nerves. Each was keyed to the snapping pitch by one of the most trying experiences of his life. No one moved a muscle. There was scarce a breath in the corridor.

The hour struck. The execution officials came forward. Painter declared his innocence for the last time and was silent. The attendants quickly adjusted the white shroud that covered him from neck to heels, the rope under his left ear and the long, white cap that draped upon his shoulders. The pause of a second and the trap was sprung.

At the instant that the slamming report of the swinging door against the under side of the scaffold rang out the white figure bounded into the air, there was the twanging crack of yielding hemp and Painter fell to the concrete floor of the corridor, almost on the knees of the newspaper men in the front row. The rope had snapped.

A gasp came from the hundred watchers. If one of them had started from his seat or had voiced the cry that rose to his throat there must have been a disastrous panic at the cost of lives in the narrow, winding, iron lined corridors of the jail. In the condition bordering on frenzy to which every one of them had been worked the matter stands for wonder, but all sat fast.

The sheeted figure on the floor partly raised, once, twice. A red stain showed and slowly grew about the edges of the draped cap. Deputy sheriffs, running from behind, threw themselves upon the condemned man, forced him to a prostrate position and half dragged, half carried him back of the scaffold, up the stairs to the trap again.

This time the emergency rope was used, almost as thick as a [illegible]. The officials adjusted it while Painter, once more and most terribly respited, knelt limply, his head on one side, the stain on his shroud widening, while the tortured group, with pinched faces and shattered nerves, still watched. It took sixteen minutes for Painter to strangle to death when the trap was sprung again. On the first occasion every prisoner in the jail had rattled his cell bars and cried out in the awe inspiring protest and demonstration that no number of guards can ever prevent. Instinctively they knew that something had gone wrong.

When the report of the swinging door rang out again there was complete silence.

* * *

Luther Laflin Mills, who successfully prosecuted the Cronin case and was one of the best lawyers in the country, had been intensely interested in the trial and conviction of George Painter. To his trained legal mind here was an instance in which the machinery erected for the protection of society had operated to bring about the execution of an innocent man. He believed much of the evidence was false, either wilfully perjured or the outcome of misapprehension.

He repeatedly pointed out the fact that the circumstances were capable of the defence's construction, consistent either with guilt or with innocence, and that the rule of law declares in such instances for acquittal. After the hanging he announced that he would devote a year [illegible] an attempt to establish Painter's innocence.

During that period he made an exhaustive study of the case and the matter was never far from his mind. He conducted an investigation of his own, quietly examining the men and women who had appeared as witnesses and [illegible]. At the expiration of the year he stated that the question loomed as large as it did [illegible] Painter's [illegible], and that he had been able to make no progress.

Shortly before the death of Mr. [illegible] he told an intimate friend that he was still convinced that Painter had no share in the murder of Alice Martin, and that he had fallen a [illegible] to the [illegible] of circumstantial evidence.

Officially and [illegible] George Painter stands among the guilty. Yet [illegible] who knew the man, and notably the [illegible] lawyer who undertook the most [illegible] defence, have clung to the belief that he was innocent.

ENGLAND

An extraordinary story was told at Chester Asylum, recently, concerning the death of Edward Rigby, a boot repairer of Hoylake. His widow stated that for some time he had been worried by bad trade, and although he had always professed to be an Atheist, he began to talk continually on religious matters, and insisted on the siying of grace and prayers. "As sure as I put my hand into the fire there is a God," he said to her one day, and put his hand in the fire as he spoke. It was badly burned. He was badly burned. He was removed to the asylum, and there died from lockjaw caused by the burn.

Frank Clark, "the king of tramps," arrived in London, the other day, on his seventh tour round the world. Ex-newsboy of New York and able-bodied seaman, Clark, has had the wandering fever since 1883, and, according to his own statement, has covered 250,000 miles. "This is my seventh tour of the globe, and when I reach home again I am going to publish a book on my travels," stated Clark. "Norway and Sweden will be my next destination, after which I shall make first for Russia, and then for the East."

Caroline Carpenter, 81, a widow, was fined £2 13s. at Leominster, recently, for making false representations in order to obtain an old age pension. She received 5s. on January 1, but her solicitor caused her to return the order book and pension. She had capital invested amounting to £2,000, but lives in apparent poverty, working in the fields for 2s. weekly.

For two months a London syndicate has been carrying on diving operations in quest of a treasure-laden Spanish Galleon which is sunk in Porthleven Bay, Cornwall. Mr. H. Rivers Malet, a member of the syndicate, who has himself carried out the diving, states that he is confident that he has located the wreck buried in sand.

The farmers of the Enniskerry district of Wicklow are greatly perturbed by the presence of a marauder who lurks in a mountain cavern and sallies forth at night armed with a Winchester rifle. A local farmer who was recently awakened by a noise on his premises searched his hayloft, and was nearly frightened out of his wits by the discovery that he was standing on someone buried beneath the hay. The stranger took advantage of his surprise and escaped.

Developments of a sensational nature are impending in Belfast in connection with the recent discovery of enormous defalcations in the Belfast City rates department. A public firm of accountants, with whom the Corporation have placed their books, after only a few days investigating, discovered that an assistant collector, who has confessed to embezzling £6,500, and for whose arrest a warrant is in force, had twice previously embezzled smaller sums.

The Waterford Corporation has unanimously passed a resolution suggesting to the Chancellor of the Exchequer "that all bachelors over thirty-five years of age be taxed, as there are plenty of ladies available to join in wedlock with suitable bachelors, and as these gentlemen do not contribute what we consider a fair proportion of their income to the present taxation."

Irish emigration to America, which has been on the decline for some years, shows signs of renewed activity this spring. The Cunarder Ivernia embarked 731 emigrants at Queenstown on a recent voyage a record for and corresponding sailing for three years past, and it is estimated that the week's total was over 2,000.

SCOTLAND

Some excitement was caused one afternoon recently among Greenock holiday makers by an accident which occurred at the Albert Esplanade, Gourock. A little girl between four and five years of age was playing at the bathing pond, and was in the act of walking along the side, when she slipped and fell into the water. She was in imminent danger of being drowned when a seven-year-old boy pluckily went to the rescue, and at considerable risk to himself succeeded in getting her out of the pond.

Serious damage was done by a fire which occurred late the other night at No. 1 pit of the Kirkwood Colliery, near Coatbridge, through the upsetting of a lamp in the engine-house. The only person in the workings at the time was the man in charge of the pumping arrangements, and he was with great difficulty brought to the surface. About 160 men will be thrown out of employment until the damage is sufficiently repaired to enable working operations to be resumed.

At Hamilton recently, before Hon. Sheriff Cassels, George Rutkowski, of Blantyre, and John Mutt, of Fallside, Russian miners, were tried for having assaulted a fellow countryman, after quarrelling over a game of cards, and stabbing him on the neck and arm, back and breast with a knife. They were found guilty, and sentenced to 60 days imprisonment, with hard labour, and recommended for deportation at the expiry of sentence.

For some time past lambs have been missed from the folds around the hill district of Spott. An camination of footmarks on the snow, and also no the bare patches, has led to the general belief that the lambs have been carried off by foxes. For some time past foxes have been fairly numerous on the moors, and the severity of the weather has probably compelled them to come further down the hills in quest of food.

A GUARANTEE OF SAFETY.

Most of the "soothing" syrups and powders advertised to cure the ills of babies and young children contain poisonous opiates, and an overdose may kill the child. Baby's Own Tablets are sold under the guarantee of a government analyst that they contain no opiate or harmful drug. They can be given with absolute safety to a new born child. They cure all those minor ailments originating in disordered stomach or bowels. Mrs. F. THE BACON SITUATION.

From Farm and Dairy.

With a view to ascertaining just what the present state of the bacon situation is, from the standpoint of the producer, Farm and Dairy is corresponding with a large number of pork producers. Early reports that have come to hand indicate that the bacon industry is in a state even worse that we had feared.

Some correspondents have placed their estimate on the number of hogs in their district this year as compared with last at one-third. Other estimates range from this up to 60 and 75 per cent.

Answers to the question "Have you raised hogs at a profit this past year?" have been varied. They range all the way from an emphatic "No" to a positive "Yes," with the great majority recounting their profits as being very small and these having been obtained only through judicious feeding and by having recourse to pasture, sugar beets, mangels and home grown grains. It is interesting to note that those who have not made profits on hogs during the past year have relied principally on mill feeds. The most optimistic replies have been received from those farmers raising pure bred hogs, where they have been able to sell their stock for breeding purposes.

WHERE PROFITS ARE MADE.

Those who figured out a profit on their past year's operations in producing pork, invariably have had recourse to home grown feeds and have relied principally on roots in winter and rape and other pastures in summer. Many of these also have had skim milk, buttermilk or whey. The reports clearly indicate that if one would produce pork at a profit, these cheaper feeds must be relied upon and must be produced in greater abundance. Practically all are optimistic as to future prices for hogs. They rely for the most part on the present great scarcity of hogs to keep up prices. The present being the time to seed the crops that will produce pork more cheaply, those counting on producing hogs this present year should not fail to take advantage of, and seed part of their acreage to, rape for summer pasture and roots, either sugar beets or mangels for winter feeding.

PROSPECTS FOR HOGS.

In reply to what they considered the prospects are for hogs, many answered that unless some definite standard could be arranged as to prices, the outlook is gloomy. Others, however, looking to the immediate future, frankly state that if fed right, hogs are a paying department of the farm. The general opinion was that there is no profit in buying millfeed at present prices and that to feed such to hogs is simply money lost. One correspondent from Leeds Co. stated that it would require an expert feeder to make a profit and that there is no hope for an increase, but rather only a decrease in production for some time yet.

SUGGESTIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT.

Suggestions made towards bringing about an improvement in the bacon industry, brought out much interesting matter. Mr. W. F. Hambly, Norfolk Co., Ont., thought that more information was needed on the proper breeding and feeding of hogs, that the prices should be paid according to the quality of the hogs produced, that the short, fat, thick, Yankee, corn-fed hog should be kept out of our markets if possible, and that all Canadian bacon for export should be branded as Canadian grown. Another correspondent thought that the only way to improve the bacon industry was to get after the railroads and millers, as they are the parties who are making the profits, and as present prices farmers cannot buy mill feeds to feed to hogs and thereby make anything.

Mr. Owen Congler, of Leeds Co., suggests that buyers will have to discriminate in prices and pay more for bacon hogs than for hogs of lard type, and states that he for one is going out of raising the bacon hog and will turn to the fat type which he considers can be produced more cheaply. Mr. J. L. Dunkin, of Oxford Co., writing on the prospects for the industry, stated that it all depended on the prices we get and past experience shows that there is no means of knowing this. One thing was clear, however, that if they were to stay in business, something would have to be done to get the prices uniform so that they would not go down to from three to five cents a pound as soon as our herds are decreased, even a little. Were a commission of Canadian farmers to visit Denmark this year to investigate conditions and practises there, the results of their trip would be certain to be followed closely by our Canadian hog raisers and should be productive of much good. Watch later issues of Farm and Dairy for condensed reports prepared from those being furnished to us by our correspondents.

VENTILATED ROOT CELLAR.

From Farm and Dairy.

Will you kindly explain the best method of building a root cellar and ventilating the same in order that we can keep mangels, turnips, etc., in such a condition that they will not rot? A. B., Dunham, Que.

The right kind of a wall is stone but cedar posts will answer very well and may be expected to last 12 or 15 years. Roof might be made the same way. A good way is to construct wall under the driveway in the barn, using old railroad rails for support and making the roof of cement.

Where cellar is located roots can be easily filled in from above and good ventilation may be obtained by leaving a few holes three or four inches in diameter around the bottom as inlets and corresponding holes as outlets for warm air at the ceiling. Where a stone walled root house is built as a cellar or partly under ground, a good system of ventilation is as indicated in the diagram below where air goes down the shaft at "A" and into roots at "B", leaving cellar at "C" and striking cold air at "D."

If desired a lattice work box might extend across under roots, and so permit of fresh air going up through roots right across root house. Care will need to be taken to partly close inlets in very cold weather.

Former Norwood Young Man Honoured By Appointment

Rev. William White is Chosen as First Canadian Protestant Bishop to China — Parents Reside in Norwood — Important Missionary Position.

EARLY YEARS IN NORWOOD.

The success of one of Norwood's former boys was referred to in a recent isue of the Norwood Register. Rev. William White has been appointe Bishop of the Anglican Synod of the Canadian Clergy in China. He is the first Canadian Protestant Bishop in China, and his appointment to that high and honourable office was recommended by the Board of Missions.

The Register refers to him as follows:

Rev. Mr. White is an old Norwood boy, and a graduate of the Norwood High School. He is the eldest son of Mr. Henry White, of this village, and is yet under forty years of age.

Before entering College, Mr. White clerked for a couple of years for Mr. E. P. Cuffe, of this place, who was then in business in Tweed, and afterwards served as assistant secretary to the Y.M.C.A. in Ottawa. Graduating from Wycliffe College in 1897, after a brilliant course, he was ordained and put in a year as curate to Rev. T. R. O'Meara, at Trinity East, Toronto. He then entered the foreign field, going out to Fuh-Kien, China.

As bishop Rev. Mr. White will have under his direction a staff of Canadian clergy. He will have his headquarters in Honan.

His wife is a Miss Ray, of Watford, Ontario.

To the Editor of the Norwood Regisfer.

Sir:—As all your readers are fully aware, the Reverend William C. White, a former Norwood boy, has been appointed by the House of Bishops of the General Synod of Canada to the bishopric of the newly formed Missionary Diocese in China. This appointment forms an epoch in the history of the Missionary work of the Church of England in Canada. Hithetto our Missionary clergy have worked in connection with dioceses of the Church in England or of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States. For the first time our Missionary Society has assumed charge of a distinct diocese with a bishop of its own. The people of Norwood have thus a two fold matter for congratulation. Not only has our fellow townsman been appointed to the highest order of the Episcopalian ministry, but he is also the pioneer bishop of this new departure which will be ultimately followed in Japan and elsewhere. Norwood has given to the Church of England her first foreign Missionary Bishop. The members of Christ Church congregation have thought that the village should show her appreciation of this honour done to her fellow townsman by making him some appropriate gift of congratulation. The idea is that we should present him with a gold pectoral cross, such as is worn usually by bishops as a badge of office. The probable cost would be about thirty-five or forty dollars including an appropriate inscription. May I therefore ask that any who are like-minded with ourselves in this matter would communicate with me so that preliminary steps may be at once taken to open a subscription list. Of course we do not wish to bind ourselves to the actual gift suggested, a meeting of subscribers later on would make the final determination.

Yours very truly,
Edgar W. Pickford.

REV. WILLIAM WHITE
Appointed Bishop of the Anglican Synod of Canadian Clergy in China.

"HOW TO REFUSE A MAN"---HIS IDEA.

"I don't konw much about girls," remarked Mr. A. Good Fellow to his friend over their after-theatre supper the other evening; "at least, not as much as I think I know about some things, but I read an item in the apper this morning that made me think I wasn't such an awful piker after all.

"It's one of those alleged heart-to-heart talks to the fair sex about the only thing that interests them - men And if there were any women in this wide world who read that piffle without laughing at it they're either old maids who never had a chance to find out the truth for themselves, or much-ly-and-many-times-married women who read it just to see how such a thing is done by women who are foolish enough to do it.

"The little gem to which I refer was on 'How to Refuse a Man,' and was written in that 'cuddle-up-beside-me-closer' attitude that these writers of women's articles affect toward their readers.

"The getaway was something like this: 'To refuse a man with kindness and consideration, girls, often requires tact possessed only by a genius or an experienced woman of the world. When a man is in love with a girl he is not always willing to accept 'no' for an answer, or take the hint given him not to propose.' As I said before, bo, this girl business is a road that I don't know much about, but the little information that I have picked up here and there about its slippery places gave me ground to question that idead decidedly. Now, take that thought of refusing a man with kindness and consideration. Did you ever hear of a man being refused that way? Not that the girl wasn't trying her best to do so, perhaps, but the man is usually so altogether to the mushy-mush that the girl could swat him with a brick and he couldn't feel it. And, again, did you ever hear of a girl handing a fellow a refusal instanter? No, sir; nine out of ten times it's the old story of the cat playing with the mouse.

"A little further down I ran into this: 'It sometimes happens that, despite her efforts to prevent him, he proposes and is refused. Then frequently he accuses her of having flirted with him.' Now, on the level, will a girl try to prevent a man proposing to her? These writers who hand out dope for the women would wear out every pen they own in denial should the suggestion be made that if the girl wants to prevent that proposing she could do it effectually and decisively by not seeing him. Though she's accused of it or not, ain't it the truth. Mabel, that the girl — she of the tender heart—has been flrting with him all the time, or the fellow couldn't possibly get up nerve to propose. 'When such an accusation is made,' the article continues, 'the girl should exercise self control not to loose her temper and remember that the man is really suffering.' Tender little thought isn't it, bo!

"When I ran into the following I passed up the article in dismay: "There is nothing more galling to a man who has jus' been refused than to hint that you are perfectly willing to be a sister to him; etc.' Well, that almost put me to the mat for the count. The idea of a girl refusing a man and passing up the opportunity to wear the sad, sympathetic Ethel Barrymore look that pastes him one in the jaw with the right hand, hauls him to his feet and smoothes his hair with the left—and then pastes him again I'll bet you my shirt there isn't a girl living who can turn down a proposal without going in for sympathetic heroics calculated to let the man see what a treasure he would have gotten in the way of a kind heart—if he only had won her. They just can't d oit!

"So, what's the use of giving advice on questions of this sort to women when every last one of them is going to run her own matrimonial affairs exactly as she jolly well pleases without any heart-to-heart writer butting in! The think that got me most, though, is whether these same writers think that any woman will really be chump enough to take what they say, seriously, and, least of all, follow it!"

OUR GAME FISH A VALUABLE ASSET

Lure Wealthy Tourists in the Summer—British Columbia's Experience.

This is the title of a pamphlet lately issued by the Government of British Columbia. It is handsomely gotten up and beautifully illustrated, showing the habitat of the various species of game fish. The is being widely distributed in the United States and elsewhere. Among the natural resources of that province the commercial fish, such as salmon, halibut, etc., rank among those of first importance, but next to these are the game fish, which have come to be recognized by the pople there as an exceedingly valuable asset, on account of the large sums of money spent in the country every season by tourists attracted thereby, whose numbers are increasing every year. The authorities there are now taking active measures to thoroughly enforce the regualtions for game fishing in order to protect the numerous lakes and rivers from being depleted by illegal methods.

The Province of Ontario has equal, if not superior attractions for wealthy tourists in our thousands of small lakes and rivers to the north and west of us, but the general public have so far been slow to recognize the value of these to the whole community. Though we have good laws on the Statute books to protect the waters, they have hitherto been practically a dead letter through totally ineffective administration. There are several hundred local fishery overseers throughout the province appointed for this purpose, but most of them seem to think it their duty to overlook illegal fishing rather than to bring the guilty to book, and thus allow foolish people to kill the goose which would lay for them the golden egg.—Belleville Intelligencer.

GROWING CELERY.

From Farm and Dairy.

Henry J. Fisher, (aged 12), Northumberland Co., Ont.

We had a fine crop of celery last year and I am going to tell how we grew it. We had upwards to 500 plants and it was first-class celery.

The first thing we did was to prepare a small plot for growing the seeds early in the spring. When the plants grew up about three or four inches high we transplanted them to another place. We took the plow and made a ditch about one foot deep, where we intended to have the celery. Then we put about two inches of manure in the bottom and covered it with a little earth. When they were transplanted, we put boards over the top of them to keep the sun off the plants until they caught root and could stand the heat of the sun. After we got the boards on we took two or three pails and put a little water on, enough to moiston the soil. When it gets five or six inches high, we took a horse and stone-boat to draw two large milk cans of water; then we poured it on the plants. We put water on about every night in a dry time.

As soon as the stalks and leaves start to spread apart we hold the plant up snug while another person shovels dirt and puts it around each plant to keep it from rusting. When it gets a little taller we bank it up and keep doing so until it is time to bring it in.

It is about the first of November when we start to bring it in; it is as green as grass. We take a horse and a stone-boat to bring it in. While one digs each plant out separately with the shovel the other puts in on the stoneboat in rows with all the dirt the roots will hold. When we get a load on we take it to the house and put it in the cellar. We carry dirt in pails or in boxes to put on it in the cellar. When we put it in it is always put in in rows and put dirt on up to the leaves. Every row is put in, in the same manner until we get it all in. After it is in the cellar about three or four weeks, it starts to bleach and gets crisp. We have celery yet (April 1st) and it is keeping well. The name of the celery that I am writing about is the Winter Triumph.

Cream Defined.

From Farm and Dairy.

Cream is simply an emulsion of fat in milk serum. We may have much, or less cream, from milk, but we can only have so much fat from the same quantity of milk whether we get much cream or less. By creaming milk in the old fashioned way, we get a part of the fat out, sometimes more or sometimes less. By nature's method of creaming, the light part of the milk or fat comes to the top by the natural gravitation of the earth. In coming up, it brings a part of the milk serum with it. In methods where this principle is used for creaming only, about three-quarters of the fat is recovered from the milk. Sometimes there is not one-half of it gotten out, especially in hot weather when the milk sours rapidly.

On the other hand, with the cream separator, we get practically all of the fat out We can have a rich cream or poor cream just as we like. —James Stonehouse, in an address at a creamery meeting in Brooklin, Ont.

AMBEROL RECORDS for The EDISON PHONOGRAPH

The greatest improvement in sound-reproducing instruments was made when Mr. Edison invented Amberol Records for the Edison Phonograph

No one thing has added so much to the pleasure of the Edison Phonograph as a Record which plays more than four minutes, and reproduces the melody or voice so clearly and perfectly that the illusion almost defies detection.

Edison Amberol Records are the same size as the ordinary Edison Records. They can be played upon any Edison Phonograph by the addition of an attachment which any dealer can supply and any dealer can affix.

Longer selections are now available for the Edison Phonograph than have ever been available before for any sound-reproducing machine, and these selections are better given.

No Edison Phonograph outfit is complete without the attachment to play Edison Amberol Records.

You can hear these new Records at any dealer's. Learn about the attachment and equip your Phonograph with it today. If you haven't an Edison Phonograph, you can now buy one which plays both styles of Records—the two-minute and four-minute.

We will be glad to send to anyone, however, a booklet describing the new attachment, describing the Amberol Records, giving a list of the music now available on these Records and giving all the other information necessary to make it possible for you to get more than twice as much enjoyment out of your Edison Phonograph as you are now getting.

We Desire Good, Live Dealers to sell Edison Phonographs in every town where we are not now well represented. Dealers having established stores should write at once to

RHEUMATISM Strikes the Heart and then Kills

Causes: A run down condition of the system, poisoned blood, and Uric Acid. The joints become clogged with irritating secretions and grow stiff. Every movement tortures and racks the sufferer. Cure is not possible until the blood is purified. The most potent blood purifier is Ferrozone. It is a perfect solvent for Uric Acid and an antidote for all other poisons liable to cause inflammation or Rheumatic Pains. But Ferrozone doesn't stop here. It provides the enfeebled sufferer with an abundant supply of pure, invigorating blood. This quickly results in more strength with which to fight the disease, starts a rebuilding of the system, ends in a permanent cure. Mr. Thos. Egan, of 92 Pearl Street, New York, suffered so intensely from Rheumatism that his friends believed he could not recover. "The Rheumatism," writes Mr. Egan, "crippled me for four years. It seemed to run to the joints, which swelled and caused dreadful pain. I wasn't able to walk and my strength rapidly decreased. My heart became so weak I had to be bolstered up in bed. I was at my wits' end when I heard of the wonderful cures of Ferrozone. Twelve boxes cured and I am now strong and perfectly well." There is no better remedy. Severe tests have proved it superlative to all others. If you want the BEST and most scientific treatment for Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, or Sciatica, use Ferrozone. No case too chronic. Price 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50. Sold by all druggists.

A PAGE OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

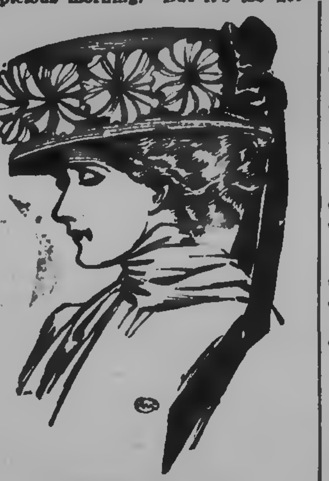
THE GLASS OF FASHION

Smart New York Women Use Triple Full Length Mirrors.

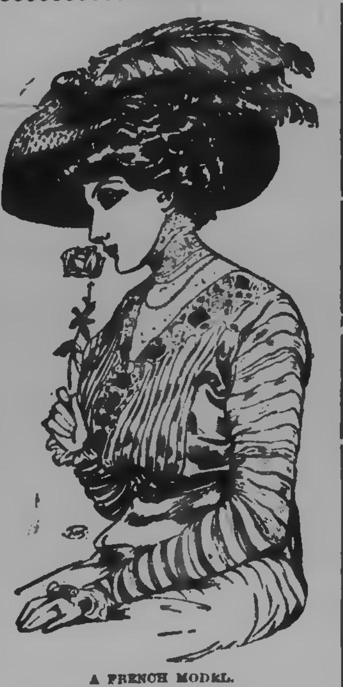
THE FLOWER TRIMMED VEIL.

Spring Hats Bring Teeth and Nose Into Prominence and Play Hide and Seek With Wearers' Faces—Models More Eccentric Every Day.

Dear Elsa—Dick has just given me an Easter present that is going to be the comfort of my life. Yes; I know that in the proper sequence of things I should have been so delighted and surprised (I bought it myself) to find the gift in my dressing room on Easter morning, but the truth is I just couldn't wait a day longer without a peep into my full length triple mirror, for that's the present I should be receiving on Sunday morning, April 11. I do wonder, though, what I really will find beside my breakfast plate on this auspicious morning. But it's too horrid of me even to auto-suggest the idea of another gift. Still, I would give Dick a jolly good hug if he remembered how I liked that— No; I won't even tell you what it was. It's too grasping—in fact, piggish—of me.



IN BRONZE GREEN STRAW.



A FRENCH MODEL.

But to describe this mirror. Every woman nowadays who goes in for dress as a fine art—and most all New York women do—are obliged to own one of these glasses. When fashions are so freakish one cannot run the risk of appearing in a more outlandish guise than Mme. la Mode intends one should. One does not feel safe in being assured by one's mirror that she is well put up from one vantage point. She must be sartorially perfect from every angle. Now, this is exactly what the triple mirror does for you. And if used faithfully—sounds like a patent medicine ad., doesn't it?—at each dressing you know to a certainty whether you turtle your neck or carry it gracefully poised, whether your Dominican gown with its penitential lines makes you resemble Friar Tuck in his monk's robe or whether your Psyche would meet the approval of the early Greeks. As for your hat—why, a "chopping bowl" affair even has attractions viewed from the right angle triangle of a triplicate. You know what a vast difference the least difference in the adjustment of a chapeau means to femininity, exactly the difference between good looks and ugliness.

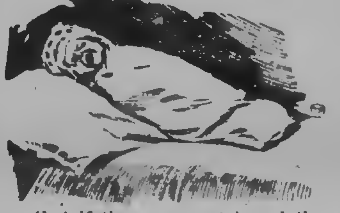
That awfully good manicurist I have told you about uses a triple mirror when she works with the hands of her patrons. In this glass she shows them how to avoid unsightly poses of the hands that are seen by their neighbors at card table or dinners.

The way I'm booming these mirrors will probably lead you to suppose that I have the agency for disposing of them. Unfortunately this luck goes to a Fifth avenue firm. But I am crazy over the thing and just sporty enough to risk seeing myself as others see me. Of course I'm not often satisfied with the result; but, as Browning says, the possible best is a comfort to achieve.

And talking of Browning reminds me of Dick's latest piece of impudence. You know, dear, we have just organized a literary club in our neighborhood, and the other afternoon I found Dick home when I came from the last meeting. "Well," he asked cheerfully, looking up over the top of his paper, "what was the topic under discussion by the club this after-

How Babies Are Dressed In Italy.

This photograph of an Italian child about six months old shows the way in which all Italian babies are wrapped round with a kind of bandage many yards long, their arms and legs being so tightly bound that they cannot move them. The Italian women say that if they were not bound thus the children would not grow up straight. A Strand writer adds, "In a small village I visited about forty miles from Genoa among the mountains they were most astonished to see an English baby without any of these extraordinary wrappings."



Apple Superstition.

The ruddy winter apple is much used as a lover's test. Roman lovers used to take an apple pip between their fingers and thumb and shoot it up to the ceiling. If the pip reached its destination it was regarded as a sign that their love was returned. Another method once much used was to throw the pip into the fire, uttering the beloved one's name. If the pip burst with a loud report it was a good sign, but the love would not last long if the pip burst silently.

Many rustic lovers used to place the pips upon their closed eyelids. If the pips dropped when their eyes were opened it denoted unfaithfulness. Swiss maidens often follow the following custom: They buy an apple from an aged widow—the uglier she is the better—and eat half of it with a salted herring just before the mystic hour of midnight. The other half of the apple they place beneath their pillow, and prophetic dreams are sure to follow.

TABLE NAPKINS.

An Amusing History of This Very Indispensable Article.

Curiously enough, the table napkin, now deemed almost indispensable, was first used only by children and was adopted by elder members of the family only about the middle of the fifteenth century. In etiquette books of an earlier date, among other sage pieces of advice for children, are instructions about wiping their fingers and lips with their napkins.

It seems that the tablecloth was long enough to reach the floor and served the grown people in place of napkins. When they did begin to use napkins they placed them first on the shoulder, then on the left arm and finally tied them about the neck. A French writer, who evidently was conservative and did not welcome the napkin kindly, records with scorn:

"The napkin is placed under the chin and fastened in the back, as if one was going to be shaved. A person told me that he wore his that way that he might not soil his beautiful frills."

It was a difficult matter to tie the two corners in the back, and it is said that thence originated our expression for straitened circumstances, "Hard to make both ends meet." This custom led to the habit shown by waiters of carrying a napkin across the left arm.

Napkins became popular in France sooner than in England. At one time it was customary at great French dinners to change the napkins at every course, to perfume them with rosewater and to have them folded a different way for every guest.

About 1050 Pierre David published a "Maistre d'Hostel," which teaches how to wait on patrons properly and how to fold all kinds of table napkins in all kinds of fancy shapes.

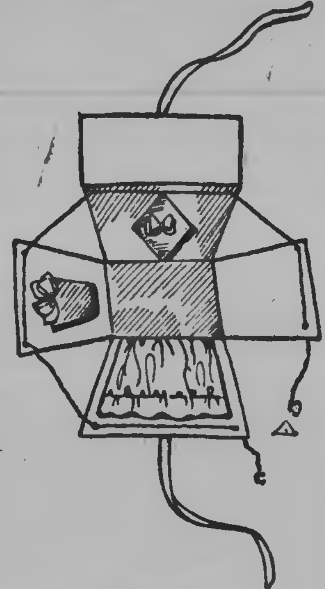
The shapes were square, twisted, folded in bands, in the form of double and twisted shells, single shell, double melon, single melon, cock, hen and chickens, pigeon in the basket, partridge, pheasant, two capons in a pie, hare, two rabbits, sucking pig, dog with a collar, pike, carp, turbot, miter, turkey, tortoise, the holy cross and the Lorraine cross.

GOING AWAY GIFTS.

Set of Cushions For Steamer Chair. Folding Workbox.

Of the making of bags there would seem to be no end in these days of revived interest in practical needlework, and some recent productions in this line are worthy of special reference. A few of them are here pictured, fashioned from denim or cretonne in striking looking floral patterns.

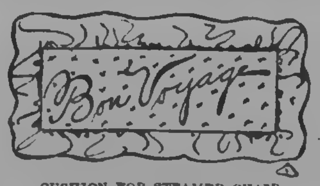
The laundry bag made of heavy denim in a serviceable shade of blue differs from the usual collection of such receptacles by reason of the extension piece at the back, which permits of the bag being hung against the wall for its full width. This is a practical arrangement and effectually discounts the old time laundry holder with a drawstring at the top.



FOLDING WORKBOX.

There are two new workbags in flowered cretonne—one in the shape of a fetching little chafing dish apron, with a hoop handle, and the other the conventional shirred type except for the outside pocket, which is an added convenience.

The regulation steamer cushion, with its familiar "Bon Voyage" inscription, has not lost prestige, but it is supplemented by a set of cushions connected by straps of self material and designed for the back and seat of the chair, with loops to slip over the frame at the top. These cushions may be folded up when not in use and occupy but a small space in the trunk.



CUSHION FOR STEAMER CHAIR.

The folding scrap basket has been the boon of the traveler, and now comes a folding work box or basket covered with cretonne in a pretty design. The customary pockets and straps are attached to the basket, and the illustration shows the basket folded and open.

TOO MANY WOMEN SUFFER IN SILENCE

When the Blood is Weak or Out of Order Disease is Inevitable.

Many women go through life suffering in silence—weak, ailing and unhappy. The langour and bloodlessness of girls and young women, with headaches, dizziness and fainting spells; the nervous ailments, back pains and failure of strength of wives and mothers; the trials that come to all women at the turn of life, are caused usually by impoverished watery blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People have helped more women to the joy of good health and robust strength than any other medicine in the world. These Pills actually make new, rich, red blood, which reaches every part of the body, feeds the starved nerves, strengthens every organ, and makes weak girls and women bright and well. Mrs. A. Eagles, Dundas, Ont., says:—"I am writing this letter out of gratitude to let you know the great benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me. From the time I was a girl I suffered from weakness and fainting spells—was always doctoring but it did not help me. As I grew older I seemed to grow worse. My blood seemed literally turned to water. Sometimes I would faint as often as twice in a day. I suffered from indigestion. I could not walk upstairs without stopping to rest on the way, and my heart would palpitate so violently as to produce a smothering sensation. I grew so weak that people thought I was in consumption. I was in this dreadful condition when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were brought to my attention and I began taking them. The first sign of benefit I noticed was an improvement in my appetite. Then I began to grow stronger; the colour began to return to my face; the fainting spells disappeared and gradually I was brought to a condition of more perfect health than I had every enjoyed before This is what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me, and that they have been of lasting benefit is proved by the fact that it is several years since they restored my health, and I have remained strong and well ever since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a cure for all troubles due to impure or watery blood, such as anaemia rheumatism, neuralgia, headaches and backaches, indigestion, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis, etc. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A NEW SOCIETY.

The Prevention of Cruelty to Parents Organization.

"I'm going to form a new society—a society for the prevention of cruelty to parents," said a young matron. "Everybody and everything is protected nowadays—children, horses, dogs, cats, immigrants—but parents aren't looked after. They are left to fight their own battles. And the unkindness of some children! I lately visited—well, never mind the name, but they're young married people, and the husband's old father lives with them. He's a dear old man, but a little slow and deaf and fussy, as old people have a right to be. And the way that old man was poked into corners made me boil!

"I know a lovable old woman who lives alone, her children—four of them—scattered far and near, pursuing their own aims and thinking that they are very filial if they write their mother once a fortnight. I declare, it makes me admire the wisdom of an old bachelor I know. Some one pitied him because he was growing old, with no children about him. 'It's a bit lonely,' he said philosophically, 'but I'd rather be childless than to have, like some people I know, children who go their own ways and leave their parents alone in their old age.'"

Kitchen Stools.

Only the woman who owns a sizable kitchen stool knows the comfort of it. If she has two or three, so much the better.

They are not expensive articles, and therefore it does not strain the housekeeper's purse to provide her kitchen with enough of them to make work comfortable.

There should always be one to slip under the kitchen table. It should be high enough to put the worker in a comfortable position for using her hands. She will find herself using it hours during the day that otherwise she would have spent on her feet.

The laundress who knows how to take care of herself has a high stool with rungs for her feet, on which she may sit when she is ironing the light pieces. It will give her renewed strength for the next day's work.

Shapely Poached Eggs.

If you want poached eggs that have not spread out of shape in cooking stir the boiling water until it is whirling rapidly, then drop the egg in quickly and cook until set.

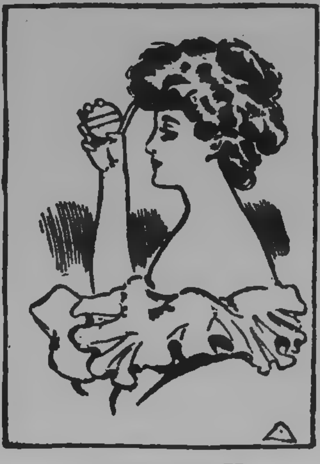
This keeps the eggs round and smooth, and if lifted carefully on a flat cake turner the egg will be as shapely as if it were cooked in a poacher.

In serving poached eggs use freshly toasted bread, thickly buttered, or, what is still better rounds of bread fried in butter like a crouton.

NEW SCALP SPRAYER.

With It Tonics Can Be Put on Head Without Spilling Them.

People who have used hair and scalp tonics to any extent and experienced the difficulty in saturating the hair without saturating the clothing and carpet as well will appreciate the scalp sprayer designed by a New York man. This device works on the principle of an atomizer. It consists of a base to which a ring is attached. In this ring is set a compressible rubber bulb, and leading from the bulb is a tube the end of which is adapted to fit the contour of the head and which is equipped with perforations.



NO BOTTLE TO SHAKE.

By placing this tube in the hair and pressing the bulb the tonic or perfume, or whatever the contents may be, is sprayed through the hair and over the scalp in such a way as to reach every point. Nor is there the muss attached to the old method of shaking an inverted bottle over the head, hitting the mark occasionally and decorating the wall paper at other times; also there is a saving in tonic, and the job is more complete.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY,

When one is dressed and it is inconvenient to wash the face an excellent lotion to have is 5 cents' worth of boracic acid dissolved in 10 cents' worth of alcohol. This is perfectly harmless, and by rubbing the skin well with this, applied with a handkerchief, every pore will be cleansed, and you will look and feel as well as if you had used the best soap and water. This is almost indispensable when traveling.

A poultice of witch hazel is often soothing to a muscular pain and is simply made. In a small saucepan put a square folded flannel cloth. Pour over this enough witch hazel to thoroughly moisten it. Heat and place the flannel cloth over the pain. Cover it with a dry flannel and pin a towel over it to keep it in place.

A girl will find one of the best processes of refreshing herself when tired is to wring out hot cloths and lay them over the eyes and forehead. A hot water bag does not act as a substitute for this, and the treatment is but little trouble. The simplest way is to have two cloths and a basin of hot water by the cloth. One cloth is in the water ready to wring out and replace the one on the head that becomes cool. Fifteen minutes is enough, and the improvement in the physical condition is marked. It is a wise plan to rinse the face in very cold water immediately afterward in order to prevent the skin from becoming flabby.

A woman whose lips are constantly cracked and sore should take an internal tonic, for undoubtedly her blood is too thin. External applications should be constantly used, too, because they are curative and soothing. Those lip lotions that are stringent are most beneficial because they dry the sores and hasten the healing beneath the surface. A well known specialist recommends that when there is the slightest eruption on the lips they should always be bathed with a weak solution of alum water before any other application is made.

MISSION BAND ENTERTAINMENT

Was a Great Success Last Evening—Held at St. John's Church.

The conclusion of the year's work of the mission band of St. John's Church was marked last evening by a most successful entertainment given under their auspices in the schoolroom. The hall was fairly well filled and the various numbers on the programme were enthusiastically applauded and in some instances encores were demanded. Previous to the opening selection, a sale of candy was conducted by the young girls.

Rev. Canon Davidson occupied the chair and in a few well chosen remarks, introduced the following programme:

Piano Duett—Cyril Devey and E Horsefield.

Vocal Solo—Mr. Chandler.

Dialogue—"Flora's Birthday." Mission band.

Piano Solo—Miss O'Dee Dutton.

Violin Solo—Miss Edwina Palmer.

Wooden Doll Drill—Miss Coventry's St. Y.M.C.A. class.

The success of the affair was largely due to untiring efforts of the Superintendent, Mrs. R. A. Dutton assisted by Miss Margaret English.

The entertainment was closed with the singing of the National anthem.

Miller's Worm Powders cure fits in children.—Wm. Madill, Druggist.

SERVIAN PRINCE WILL SHOOT

Vienna, May 15th.—Londoners will soon have an opportunity of making the acquaintance of the much-talked of Servian ex-Crown Prince George, for according to Belgrade reports he intends to visit London, and take part in an international shooting match there in June.

Prince George is an excellent marksman, and he often proved it by shooting cigarettes out of the mouths, or cards from the hands, of soldiers and servants. In only one instance is it known that he missed his aim, and the bullet pierced the soldier.

LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN.

The matter appearing in this space from time to time is furnished by the Temperance and Moral Reform League of this City, who have arranged for its Publication.

LEADING CATHOLICS AND PROHIBITION QUESTION.

The great victories being gained by the prohibition forces, not only on this continent but in the Old Land as well, are due largely to the splendid work of leading Catholic divines. If the Catholics and Protestants of Peterborough will unite in the present Local Option campaign as Catholics and Protestants have in other sections, it will ensure the carrying of Local Option at the polls next January.

Among the many Catholics divines who have done great work in the cause of temperance, probably no temperance reformer ever accomplished more good work than did the famous Fathew Mathew, who conducted the wonderfully successful temperance crusade in Ireland more than half a centur yago. After a life of earnest effort on moral suasion lines, two years before his death, he wrote as follows:

"The question of prohibiting the sale of ardent spirits and the many other intoxicating drinks which are to be found in our unhappy country is not new to me. The principle of prohibition seems to me the only safe and certain remedy for the evils of intemperance. This opinion has been strengthened by the hard labour of more than twenty years in the temperance cause."

Archbishop Ireland's Position

Arhcbishop John Ireland is known throughout Christendom as an earnest, progressive, and devoted worker for the good of humanity. In an address to the Minnesota Catholic Total Abstinence Union some years ago, he made the following strong statement:

"We thought we meant business years ago in this warfare, but I hope God will forgive us for our weakness, fo rwe went into the battlefield without sufficient resolition. We laboured under the fatal mistake that we could argue out the question with the rumsellers. We imagined that there was some power in normal 'suasion, that when we would show them the evil of their ways they would abandon the traffic. We have sen that there is no hop eo fimproving in any shape or form the liquor traffic. There is nothing now to be done but wipe it out completely."

Local Option in Orillia

Rev. Canon Greene of Orillia, is one of the most prominent Anglican clergymen in the Province of Ontario. He has lived for many years in the town of Orillia, and is thoroughly conversant with conditions there.

Speaking in Huntsville a short time ago, Canon Greene, by request referred to the enforcement of Local Option.

The Huntsville Forester quotes him as follows:

"Based upon the most careful and judicious enquiry, and upon information gleaned from sources thoroughly trustworthy, he was able to say that Orillia was prospering under Local Option. The effect upon business was declared by the business men themselves to be productive of a greater volume of trade, with a smaller proportion of unpaid accounts. It was shown also that licensed municipalities close at hand did not draw from Orillia merchants trade from within their circle.

"The hotel accomodation was better than ever before, meals were better, the houses were cleaner, and the travelling public better satisfied. Hotel men and clerks were more obliging and civil than under license, and so far as the finacial return was concerned, some of the houses had declared that they wer eable to make a splendid living from the table alone, without the revenue of a licensed bar.

"The police court returns gave ample evidence of the strict observance of the act. For the six months prior to May 1st, there were 47 cases of drunks and violations of the Liquor Act before the local magistrate. Since May 1st, the Local Option period—there had not been a single case of drunkeness up for adjudication until that time.

Does Local Option Prohibit

The opponents of Local Option claim that Local Option does not prohibit. They say that just as much liquor is sold in Local Option districts as there is where the open bar is permitted, but that it is sold on the sly. That this is not thecase is shown by the fact that wherever Local Option is carried, the sale of liquor is greatly reduced. The State of Michigan recently carried Local Option in a large number of counties. As a result a wholesale liquor dealers admit that their sales in those sections will be decreased by millions of dollars. Samual Klein, the wholesale liquor dealer in Cincinnati, Ohio, stated a at meeting of the Chamber of Commerce that the whiskey dealers in Cincinnati would loose $2,000,000 because 19 counites in Michigan had voted in favour of Local Option.

Great Liquor Centre

"Cincinnati is the great liquor centre of this country," he continued, "and it feels the prohibiton very keenly. We supply the larger part of the liquor used in the Wolverine State. I was particularly fortunate in having withdrawn some time ago from most of the counties that voted dry. However, there are other liquor houses that will loose big trade."

The following statements have been obtained from dealers who will suffer through the prohibitionists' victory in Michigan.

"Cincinnati's loss by Michigan having gone dry in many counties will be tremendous," said Charles H. Rosenthal. "These counties and the whole of Michigan, in fact, were considered a par tof Cincinnati's field. To say that some local houses that did business in these territories will suffer an annual loss of $50,000 is a very conservative estimate."

Will Cut Down Trade

"Mr. Rosenthal's statement as to the annual loss this city will suffer is correct," declared an officer of the Star Distilling Co. "We did business with these counties through our representative at Detroit, and would roughly estimate that the dry vote will cut down our trade $25,000 a year."

"Cincinnati sold two-thirds of the liquor used in Michigan," said another dealer. "The estimate of a loss of $2,000,000 to the Queen City is a fair one. Our company will loose many thousands a year, and I know of other companies that will loose from $25,000 to $50,000. But that is not all. Many of the saloonists who have been driven out will no whe unable to pay their bills and Cincinnatians will lose a tidy sum through this cause."

Liqour dealers in the city have been watching the fight between the "drys" and the "wets" in Michigan with much interest. It means much to them. The public of Cincinnati realizes the importance of the liquor interests in this city, as it is estimated that $50,000,000 is invested in liquor companies here."

If as much liquor is sold under Local Option as where the open far is permitted, why is it that when Local Option is carried the sales of the wholesale liquer dealers immediately show a great decrease? Will some of the opponents of Local Option in Peterborough please tell us?

WOULD AMEND THE CORONATION OATH

Mr. Asquith Believes in Altering Coronation Obligation.

REMOVE BAR TO CATHOLICS

Redmond's Bill In British Commons to Change Accession Oath by Removing Clause Objectionable to Catholics and to Allow Greater Power to Roman Religionists Passes Its Second Reading.

London, May 15.—A comprehensive bill for the removal of Roman Catholic disabilities and providing for an alteration in the accession oath taken by the British sovereign, was introduced by Wm. Redmond in the House of Commons yesterday.

The same opposition that hitherto has defeated any similar effort, however, again showed up to-day, in the form of a petition signed by 300,000 persons against the removal of Roman Catholic disabilities.

Premier Asquith spoke early in the debate and gave his cordial support to the objects of the bill. He declared that the exclusion of Roman Catholics from the Lord Chancellorship of Great Britain and the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland was unjustifiable on the grounds of either logic or policy.

Regarding the oath of accession the Premier said that this declaration was dated during the worst period of British history and the time had come to put an end to it.

The bill passed its second reading by a vote of 133 to 123, but as it is not a Government measure there is little prospect of finding time to pass it into a law at the present session.

The fact that a majority of the House of Commons voted in favor of the measure, however, is regarded as a great victory for the Catholics. Although similar bills have been debated on many previous occasions, this is the first time that one has passed its second reading.

Jesuits In Canada.

London, May 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the Commons, seconding the rejection of the Roman Catholic disabilities bill, A. C. F. Boulton said in recent times the Pope had claimed the right to interfere in the internal government of the British Empire. (Cries "No.") He referred to the Jesuits Estates Act passed in Canada in 1888. The Roman Catholic Church had been shown by what had happened in Canada to be not only a religious but also a political body.

The correspondence embodied in the preamble of the act as to the sale of the property of Jesuits showed that the Pope therein granted permission for the sale of land belonging to the crown. (Ironical Nationalist cheers and cries of "Oh.") Moreover the church had fulminated against one particular party of state in Canada, thereby interfering with politics.

Lord E. Talbot pointed out many Catholics there are in the colonies, and said it would be wise statesmanship to make a change in the declaration.

A motion for the rejection of the bill was defeated by 133 to 123, and the bill was then referred to committee of the whole House by 124 to 121.

Five Years for Lothane.

Kansas City, Mo., May 15.—Chas E. Nord, who courted by mail widows and heiresses in all parts of the world for the purpose of separating them from their money, and received more than 2,000 love letters from several hundred women, including two or three residing in Ontario, was sentenced yesterday to five years' imprisonment.

The prosecuting witness, Mrs. Carrie Hamilton, a Frankfort, Kansas, milliner, testified to having sold her home and her store and given Nord the proceeds.

Cardinal Logue Attacks A.O.H.

Dublin, May 15.—Cardinal Logue has issued a strong condemnation of certain practices of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

He says that in some places the Hibernian Society is a pest and practices cruel tyranny, its members indulging in drinking and dancing and compelling people by force to join their organization through threats of boycott and even personal violence.

He forbids the priests from this time on to give absolution to those guilty of such practices.

Is Bowling Gambling?

Welland, May 15.—I. Porter, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, was yesterday before a magistrate charged with permitting gambling on the premises, in that games "for the drinks" were played in the hotel bowling alleys.

It is understood the Attorney-General's Department instituted the prosecution. An adjournment until June 2 was made.

Stealing Eggs, Is Shot and Killed.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 15.—Caught in the act of stealing eggs from a car in the Adams Express warehouse, Frederick Zimmerman, a yard brakeman for twenty years, was shot and killed as he was trying to escape. The detectives claim that the bullet struck a rail, glanced up and entered the brakeman's body.

Woman Burned to Death.

Montreal, May 15.—Mrs. Terney Plumbo, 25 years of age, was burned to death last night at her home as the result of a lamp explosion. Mrs Plumbo apparently went into the kitchen to light a lamp, leaving her four children in front asleep. The lamp exploded, smothering her with oil, and a neighbor, hearing her cries for help, found her lying on the floor with her hair and clothing a mass of flames.

LORD GRANARD AS A KNIGHT OF ST. PATRICK

London, May 15.—Arrangements for the installation of Lord Granard as a Knight of St. Patrick have uneasily halted.

In accordance with the statutes of the ancient Order, the junior knight has a foremost place assigned to him in the ceremony of the investiture of a new brother.

It happens that the junior knight is Lord Pirrie. Perosnally there is nothing against him, except the fact that the well-known shipbuilding firm of which he is the leading spirit, whose success has been the foundation of his fortune, is not so old or so aristocratic an institution as the Order of knighthood.

The result was that when last year summons was issued to the knights bidding their attendance at the installation they with one accord began to make exense. Eventually Lord Aberdeen, at his wits' end, was compelled to conduct the ceremony in private.

Lord Granard is also a Liberal, actually a member of the Ministry, and his admisson to the historic Order would not be resented on personal grounds. He is an Irish landlord, eigth Earl, the title going back to the seventeenth century, a date reached by few of his peers.

But if, as is inevitable, the present junior knight is to be prominently in evidence during the installation, there is a prospect of the older knights declining to grace the ceremony by their presence.

FETED ON NEW BOAT

Mr. W. McIlroy Was One of the Guests at the Banquet on Board the Laurentic on Thursday of This Week.

IS A FINE STEAMER

Mr. W McIlroy, local steamship agent, was one of the guests at a most enjoyable banquet held in Montreal on board the steamer Laurentic, the latest addition to the White Star Line, which has just reached Canada on her maiden voyage from Scotland. The party, who were entertained by the officials of the Company, was composed of the different steamship agents of the Dominion, and they were a jolly bunch, who had a most delightful time as the guests of the Company. The new boat is a magnificent one, and forms a creditable addition to the "Ic" line.

ELEVEN GIRLS, 80 YEARS YOUNG, IN CLUB TO SPREAD SUNSHINE AS SHADES OF LIFE GATHER

MRS. SARAH GOTT, 89, — MRS. MARGARET DINSDALE, 83.

Cincinnati, O., May 15.—Eleven Cincinnati girls have formed a Sunshine clubs. Nothingstartling in that, you say?

But listen—all of these girls are at least 80 years old.

They are inmates of the Cincinnati Widows' and Old Men's Home. The passage of time has brought sorrow and privation to them. Checks that once bloomed with the roses of youth now are wrinkled and wan. The tired old eys gleam pathetically beneath the silvered hair, the feet falter, the hands tremble, the forms are weak and drawn, but the age-worn bodies bear hearts that will ever be young.

In the sunset of their lives, these 11 girls—they're girls in heart and spirit if not in years—would gladden the remaining days of their existence. They plan to spread joy among themselves—to live again the happy, carefree day of the girlhood which has passed in a girlhood that has come anew.

Mrs. Sarah Gott, who will be 90 the last of this month and whose going to have a big birthday party to celebrate it, is president of this unique girls' sunshine club. Mrs. Margaret Dinsdale, 83, is secretary.

'LUNGE GO UNHARMED

Shoals Around London St. Power House and Covetous Fishermen Forced to Refrain From Dropping a Hook or Spear.

ARE CLOSELY WATCHED

A shoal of 'lunge swimming in the vicinity of the London St. Power House are the talk of more than one fisherman around town. Not only are they talked about but these men have been seen gazing down into the water, their eyes bulging out with desire and the only restraining hand being that of the inspector, who is said to haunt the place in one form or another. Already one man has paid $10.00 for a dandy which he pulled out of its native element and others go up to the place to get a glimpse of the 12 and 15 pounders lazily swimming around, grinning up in safety at the covetous eyes above.

PURITY WARE LTD. IS BACKED BY STRONG FINANCIAL INTERESTS

More Intelligence of the New Industry Which is Proposed for Peterborough—A Question With Which Every Ratepayer Should be Familiar—A Resume of What Has Already Been Done—Important Conference Last Night.

OTHER TOWNS ARE AFTER IT

There is a proposition before the citizens of Peterboro concerning the conditions upon which a new industry will locate here. On June 1st it will be presented to the ratepayers in by-law form and in the meantime the aldermen intend to acquaint those qualified to vote with every detail they possess and which they themselves unanimously approve.

From the time the first news that the Purity Ware L'td were looking for a location in Canada until the night the by-law was passed in Council there was not the slightest mention made about it in the local press. This was in accordance with the expressed desire of the Manufacturers' Committee, the members of which were negotiating with representatives of the company. It was felt that nothing would be gained, and harm might be done by publishing the account of the progress made, step by step. If the negotiations were materialized and the affair brought to that point at which the public should be informed, then and not until then was anything to be said.

The Council, as already stated, are unanimously in favour of the by-law. Ald. Gillespie, Ald. Bradburn, and the city clerk visited the New York factory, which is connected with the Purity Ware L'td, and their report was considered entirely satisfactory and encouraging. So much so that the concluding steps were taken and the matter now remains with the ratepayers.

The Latest Intelligence

The Council has met representatives of the concern and have in every way gone into the matter and to a man are pleased with the industry. Last night the committee of the whole Council met five of the gentlemen who are interested in Purity Ware L'td, and a general talk over the by-law was entered upon. It was stated that the entire stock had been underwritten by a strong financial interest in one of the largest Canadian cities. The spokesman of the representation said that the gentlemen backing it had asked that their names be withheld for the present, at least until the by-law was passed. Their financial standing was of the highest.

Importance of Publicity

Ald. Hicks, Morrow, and in fact all the aldermen and Mayor Rush stated that they were sure the ratepayers would support the by-law, but an even greater confidence would be secured if the public could be given the names of the men who were behind the company. The reasons for retaining the names were explained to the entire satisfaction of the Council of this city, but upon further discussion the spokesman stated that he would divulge the names to Mayor Rush and Ald. Gillespie and if they upon investigation (which was said would not need to be minute) were satisfied with the strength of the financial interests behind the company they would state to the Council and the public the result of their enquiry. This was agreed upon.

To Spread Information

The members of the Council stated that they were assured the ratepayers would support what they had done, but they wanted to give the people facts in order to doubly reassure them [illegible] considered that the Mayor and Ald. Gillespie enjoyed the entire confidence of the rest of the Council and of the ratepayers and if they were satisfied with the financial strength of the men backing the company, everybody else interested would be satisfied.

A Public Meeting

As already announced the Board of Trade will hold a meeting in the Council Chambers on Tuesday next to discuss Purity Ware L'td, and every ratepayer who desires to acquaint himself with the details of the question upon which he is to vote, is invited to be present.

EAST CITY MAN POSSESSES DIAMONDS OF MUCH VALUE IN UNFINISHED STATE

Found Sixteen Years Ago by Mr. O. S. Ferguson, Hunter Street East, in Part of Ontario Known Only to Himself---Has Had Them Tested by Tiffany of New York---Discovered Them Most Incidentally One Evening---Has Received Many Offers For Them.

That there are diamond mines in Ontario has been stated ,but the fact is known only by one man, and that man is Mr. O. S. Ferguson, who has for the past five years conducted a tin shop on Hunter street, East. To have something in the neighbourhood of five hundred real, sparkling diamonds in his possession is the good fortune of Mr. Ferguson, and an Examiner representative the other day was shown several of these precious stones. They are at present mostly in their raw state, only two having been finished and are read to be set in a piece of jewellery. They shine very brilliantly and are fine samples of this precious stone. The unfinished ones are just as they were found, some being very small, while a number of them are as large as a quarter of a ninch in diameter. That they are diamonds, Mr. Ferguson has satisfied himself. Careful tests and examinations of them have been made by Tiffany of New York, and other prominent diamond dealers in the United States and in Toronto, and Mr. Ferguson has been assured that they are diamonds, and worth considerable money.

Discovered Years Ago.

Where the precious stones were located, the discoverer of them alone knows. He refuses to give any clue as to their location, but says that they were found some place in Ontario sixteen years ago. Mr. Ferguson was at one time engaged in mining, but it was not diamonds for which he mined. His discovery of the costly stones was, strange to say, not while making any search, but at a time when he little thought of finding such things. One evening, at sunset, he said, after he had finished his work, he stood for a while watching the crows picking up the little stones that, to him, presented a bright and glistening appearance. He picked up several and kept them, deciding to find out if they were of any value. They were evidently washed out of the ground by rain. Mr. Ferguson stating that he found them all on the surface, never having to turn a bit of earth. The diamonds, in their raw state resemble very much a piece of alum. The land on which they were found has never been known to grow anything and it is quite rocky and rough.

Mr. Ferguson has a large number of the diamonds concealed in a rock, but has several of them in an old pocketbook that once belonged to his father and which he showed the reporter, who called on him a few days ago.

Albani Wanted Them.

The owner of the much-coveted stones related an interesting story of how one time about five years ago, on the occasion of a visit to Cobourg, the great prima dona, Madame Albani, tried to purchase the diamonds from him. She was giving a concert there and during her stay in the town learned of his envied possessions. Mr. Ferguson was at that time a resident of Cobourg. The great singer visited him and offered him a large sum of money for the stones. She said that she wanted them to make a necklace, but he would not sell and if he continues in his present mind, he never intends to dispose of them. At different times he has had good opportunities to do so, receiving splendid offers. Neither does he intend to disclose the place where they were found. He remarked that he would leave it for some one else to find out the same as he had done.

Gave Some Away.

At the marriage of his daughter, Mr. Ferguson presented her with a diamond ring, which cost him three hundred dollars to have finished. He also gave others of them away to relatives. He has two that he placed in the dark in order to show their brilliancy. One time he placed them alongside two that were purchased at a big price by a Cobourg gentleman. The man did not see Mr. Ferguson arrange them, and when asked to choose his own he could not do so. He picked the others. That was another proof of their genuineness.

The Free Methodists Of Peterborough Are Planning To Build New Church Here Shortly

Notwithstanding the fact that several new churches have been erected in Peterborough lately, and preparations are in progress for others, still another one is contemplated.

A deal was closed to-day by which the Free Methodists of Peterborough came into possession of a fine lot on Aylmer street, between Charlotte and King, upon which they expect in the near future to build a church. The property is of 108 feet frontage, with a depth of 114 feet. It is expected that 75 feet of this property will be utilized for church purposes. A considerable sum has already been secured in cash and pledges towards the Building Fund, and Misses Babcock and Clarke, who have charge of the church here, say that they are meeting with gratifying success in their canvass for funds.

The society at present are worshipping in what is known as the "City Mission," on Water street, but the work has been much hampered by the lack of proper accommodation, and they believe that the time has now arrived for them to "go forward."

As the Free Methodist body in Peterborough is not large, and their religious beliefs not generally known, the following brief sketch of their history will be read with interest by Christian people generally.

The Free Methodist Church is a child of Providence that came into existence as an organized body in Western New York on the 23rd day of August, 1860.

The cause of its origin was a conflict between the spirituality and worldliness that was in the church.

In doctrine they are Methodists. They insist that it is the duty and privilege of every believer to be sanctified wholly, and to be preserved blameless unto the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. They look upon practical godliness as the never-failing result of a genuine religion experience. "By their fruit ye shall know them." Hence they insist that those who profess to be disciples of Christ should come out from unbelievers and be separate, abstaining from connection with all secret societies, renouncing all vain, pomp and glory, adorning themselves with modest apparel, and not with gold, or pearls, or costly array.

They believe Christians have no right to abolish any of the requirements made by Christ and the apostles, or to make obedience to them a matter of small consequence. The golden rule, they hold, applies equally to mankind.

The Government of the Church is not autocratic; but the members have an equal voice with the ministers in all the councils of the church.

They endeavour to promote spirituality and simplicity in worship; congregational singing is universal, and performances upon musical instruments, and singing by choirs in public worship are prohibited.

They do not believe in resorting to worldly policy to sustain the gospel hence they give no countenance to modern expedients for promoting Christianity such as selling or renting pews, picnics, Christmas trees, festivals, lotteries, fair, and donation parties. They have now forty annual conferences that extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and a membership of about 40,000.

They have missions in the West Indies, Norway, India, Africa, Japan, China, Ceylon, Santo Domingo and six seminaries and one college. They publish one weekly paper and other periodicals, and have a publishing house in Chicago, Ill.

It is about thirty years since they opened up their work in Canada, and they now have three annual conferences—the East and West Ontario. The membership numbers about 2,000 and they are growing slowly, but steadily. They have urgent calls to send preachers to other parts of Canada and the United States. Future prospects of this church are encouraging

DOUBLE DROWNING FATALITY WAS NARROWLY AVERTED AT THE LOCKS

Two Young Men in a Punt Come Very Nearly Being Swept Over the Dam Last Evening—Grabbed the Woodwork and Held There Until Assistance Arrived—Were Fishing.

CURRENT TOO STRONG.

Hanging to the platform above the locks dam with the swiftly running water beating about them, two young men were rescued from a most horrible death and a double drowning fatality was narrowly averted last evening about 7:30 o'clock. Three Englishmen went down to the locks in a punt to fish. They did not remain long when they decided to row back. It is said that they were not adepts in handling a boat, and knowing this, Mr. Howden, who looks after the swing bridge warned them about trying to row up against the strong current. He told them to pull their boat up above the bridge and then get in it. They followed his instructions just so far but they have taken it much farther. Two of them entered it and though they struggled hard at the oars the swift current was too much for them and it was quite evident that they were going to be swept away.

A Timely Rescue

The affair occurred at the sluiceway, the second one above the canoe slide. The water is very high and it is almost an impossibility for an expert boatman to make any progress against the strong, relentless current. Had not the occupants of the punt exercised a little presence of mind, and quickly grabbed the woodwork they would have been swallowed up in the rushing, foaming water below. They held there for a few seconds until some fishermen who were standing nearby, went to their assistance. They were rescued from their perilous position and the punt was also prevented from going over the dam.

The public is warned of the great danger of boating in the vicinity of the locks and are given timely warning that they are running a great risk in going around the locks at this season of the year.

DEMAND FOR ROY'S FAMOUS SOUVENIR POST CARDS

Their Popularity Such That "Age Cannot Wither Nor Custom Stale."

Fads may come and fads may go, but Roy's famous souvenir post cards will go on forever. Whatever may be the fate of the cheap, trashy, and worthless reproductions, few will care to enquire. Roy's artistic photograph views of special scenes in popular localities, favourite places of interest, public buildings, old landmarks, lake, and river beauty spots, and all home, business and residential views of special interest which the camera can catch, have taken too firm a hold upon the public to go out. There is a subtle charm in photographic reproductions, taken either by the enthusiastic amateur or the professional expert, which will keep alive the interest in real meritorious post card pictures throughout the world. Nothing in the realm of genuine photographic postcards in this country have done so much to demonstrate these facts than has the remarkable success which has made Roy's famous souvenir post cards continue to command such extensive sales. This firm has taken the position that their pictoral post cards are marked by an individuality and distinction that places them in a class by themselves. Peterborough's better buyers know this, and look for something altogether different from the common place. Their captivating creations in carbon, green, sepia, black and white fully sustain the reputation of the Roy studio. The range of the Roy views include almost everything of real interest in the vicinity where their artists have gone, and yet have subjects are in demand and being developed for this season, which will enhance the value of and interest in their extensive collection. These cards are on sale by all first-class dealers.

TRIED TO STEAL A RIDE

On the 8.25 G.T.R. Train This Morning—Two Tramps in the City.

Two tramps tried to steal a ride on 8.25 G.T.R. train this morning, but before it had left the depot they were detected. They ran and hid in a box car and eventually got away. They were strangers in the city and evidently had got here the same way that they were trying to get away.

SWIMMING FOR GIRLS.

The Young Women's Christian Guild of Toronto has acted wisely in providing for instruction in swimming for women and girls. Not only is swimming healthful exercise, especially appealing to the women and girls of Peterborough and district, where so many of them spend so much time on the water at the summer resorts with which Peterborough is so beautifully environed. The average woman and girl born more nearly to the proletariat, than to the purple, moves heaven and earth to get into the social swim which is, in comparison, vanity and vexation of spirit, a delusion and snare. Yet, as a class, they neglect the opportunity of getting into the really useful swim—to learn an art which not only conduces to health, and is delightful in experience, and a positive pleasure, but possesses a practical utility and even moral quality. The consciousness that one is able, not only to save one's own life under emergency, but, under similar circumstances, to save the life of others, is a precious possession. Knowing how to swim gives a courage and confidence which immeasurably add to the pleasure of boating, canoeing and sailing. In the frequent accidents that happen on our summer waters, the lack of the ability to swim is responsible for the majority of the fatalities which occur. Has it ever occurred to persons who frequent the water, that the ability to swim even a few strokes, represents the difference between life and death—by drowning. Panic is also another cause of fatal effects. Knowledge of swimming conduces to presence of mind and coolness. In case of a capsizing accident, she who knows how to swim, can afford to keep cool. She knows that she has more than a fighting chance for safety. The way boating parties are often constituted renders a knowledge of swimming indispensable. The young and the foolish are apt to be careless and reckless and to precipitate accidents, so that a knowledge of it as plainly indicated as the carrying of an umbrella when the rain is pouring. A young lady who knows how to swim may, with reasonable safety, go out even with the fool who rocks the boat. Whether the latter can swim or not makes little difference to society, or to himself, for a head so light would probably prevent the owner from sinking. Swimming is an easly acquired art. Among our summer lake population there are some expert lady swimmers. A Chemong Park summer girl, only a step or two into her 'teens, is credited with the ability to cross the lake by swimming, and others of less and greater age are experts, not only swimming girls, but diving belles. The summering season is just opening, and the ghastly procession of drowning accidents with fatal results, will soon set in. The harvest of death would be reduced to almost nil if everybody who frequented the water in boats or canoes, especially canoes, knew how to swim.

BEAUTIFY THE CITY

Beautify the city, is an injunction that is receiving its widest practical application at present. On every street, in every home, the "cleaning-up" and beautifying process is finished or in progress. The dregs of winter are being cleared away and plants and shrubs are being planted with more or less taste and skill. The humblest effort at tidiness and adornment is as dear to the maker as his elaborate efforts are to the pretentious owner of elaborate "grounds"; and their destruction by the numerous means of demolition is as serious and annoying to one as to the other. The discouraging and disgraceful feature of this general attempt at beautification and tidiness is that it is only temporary and the expense incurred and labour bestowed are rendered useless in a score of ways. One lady had the experience of having a fine row of sweet peas, destroyed by some skulking brute of a dog which scaled the fence and buried a big bone in the fresh soil of the trench. The result is that the continuity of the line of pea vines will be broken and the effect destroyed; other ladies have had their flower beds nicely levelled or rounded and vagrant dogs have tramped them down.

All this is discouraging enough but there are other causes of discouragement to improvement of premises. In some parts of the city public-spirited citizens have removed their fences; and, for a whole block, there is a beautiful sweep of lawn. This is done more in the interest of the public, for the public who pass by derive more pleasure from the view than the owners, for every lawn is a fine sight. But the greatest difficulty is experienced in keeping the lawns in order; dogs scratch and disfigure them and postmen, butcher boys and, especially, the hand-bill delivery boys, instead of using the walks to the successive doors make a highway of the turf of the lawn. The city is to blame somewhat for this condition. Certainly it is the duty of the authorities as it is in their power, to protect the ratepayers by enforcing the law against trespass upon their property. This form of trespass has become an intolerable nuisance.

Another way in which the city is to blame—another way in which tidiness and beauty of private premises are discouraged—is the beastly untidiness of the streets. No attempt worth the name is made by the city to keep the streets neat and clean; but a great deal is done by the city to add to their untidiness. At street intersections men are sometimes sent to clean out the traps or catch basins. The resulting heap of filth, dead leaves, etc., is piled up in a hideous mass close to the pavement and left there till it is kicked about and creates a wide area of untidiness. In scores of places last year's leaves, which were last autumn raked into heaps in the gutter are lying there still. Drainage of streets is neglected and in the rainy season there are perpetual mudholes in he gutters through which the butcher and the baker tramp carrying the mud into the premises which the annual house cleaning has renovated.

In another place in this issue is printed a letter from "Tidiness" which deserves attention. Peterborough with its streets of beautiful lawns and residences; its stately lines of shade trees, and handsome parks, is potentially one of the most beautiful cities in the country; but the terrible untidiness of its streets is a blot upon what would be otherwise mile after mile of urban loveliness. On Victoria Day we shall have a visit from six or seven hundred of the citizen soldiery of two of the most beautiful cities in the province. We should strive to create a good impression not only of our hospitality, but of our public taste and our eye for beauty of public streets and places. Why cannot the city authorities make an effort to put the city into tidy condition, just once. Brantford spends $9,000 a year on a garbage removal system. Peterborough hardly spends $9 to advantage. Why will our aldermen persist in a policy in this respect that obtains in the side-lines of the back townships? If we are one of the smartest cities in the country in some respects, why can't we be as good street keepers as our wives are good housekeepers?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Toronto World repeats the lie—the reader, to avoid lese majestie, is supposed to forget that Sir James Whitney made the original statement—that the Conservative Government's contract with the T. Eaton Company for its printing of school readers saves the parents of provincial pupils $500,000 the first year. How this can be since there are only some $45,000 worth of readers sold a year in the whole province, is a problem that defies arithmetic.

Winnipeg derives a revenue from the issue of building permits. This is a refinement of tax imposition. Winnipeg's assessed tax-rate is $17.40 per head and to this are added license and building permit fees. Deriving a revenue from building permits is very much like intensive taxation. Logically, one would think, a building permit should earn a bonus, since it is a condition of increased revenue—meaning a building that will increase assessment values.

The sitz-bath form of feminine hat is almost as much of a nuisance as some of the women and girls that wear them. On the street they are a "fright"; in the church they engender more profane than devotional feelings; one cant' see through them, literally or otherwise. A cynic proposes how to get women to discard big hats. Compel them to occupy one side of the church, while men occupy the other. He justifies his proposal by the suggestion that if all men and woman were separated by a deep river, without bridge or boats, the women who couldn't swim would be drowned by thousands.

The Dominion Cartridge Company, Limited is not limited in the matter of enterprise in getting into the advertising limelight. It has issued a bear brochure, containing a 20-page story of how a tenderfoot brought down a grizzly of gigantic ferocity, by the help of certain incomparable amunition. Then the company is not limited in the matter of modesty. It induces the newspaper man to furnish a little free advertising by tempting him to write a notice of a very pretty and fetching booklet, beautifully illustrated. The company should appreciate the value of this kindness; for the Examiner. Not averse to doing a little advertising on its own account, has no hesitation in asserting its superior value as an advertising medium—"the largest circulation and read in the best homes."

WHY IT COLLAPSED

A great deal of explaining is being done at Ottawa with reference to the snap division on Mr. Crothers' resolution. But the real explnation has not yet been given. The fact is that Mr. Foster was determined to make Mr. Carvell speak before him, and the representative of Carleton was just as determined that the last word should be his. The situation was a ludicrous example of the man who is roaring for his friends to hold him back while he "licks" his opponent. Mr. Foster was the gentleman who declared in bold accents about a week before that he intended to bring the New Brunswick Commission's report before the House. One would have thought that he would do so courageously and manfully, giving the man whom he accused the chance to reply to his charges.

Not so. The Opposition are not constituted that way. They are great on tactics—of the small and picayune sort. They deemed it would be clever to draw Dr. Pugsley's fire before any fresh matter was brought into the case. Accordingly Mr. Crothers was put up merely to read the report of the Commission. Dr. Pugsley frankly accepted this as the extent of the charges against him, and not only tore the report to tatters, but absolutely demonstrated the unblushing partisanship of the Commission.

Mr. Crocket succeeded him, his role being to spread garbled passages from the evidence on the pages of Hansard. It was calculated that this would draw Mr. Carvell, who was familiar with the whole case. Then Mr. Foster would have the field to himself. The cunningly-laid plan miscarried, because Mr. Carvell refused to be drawn, and as Mr. Foster would not allow anyone to follow him who had the case at his fingers' ends the debate collapsed.

The first principle of British justice is that one who is accused should be thoroughly informed what the accusation is, and what are the arguments which support it. These are not the principles which guide the Ottawa Opposition.—Globe.

RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES

(Pulp and Paper Magazine.)

Some surprise has been expressed both in Canada and the United States that the Dominion Government has shown no sign of taking action in respect to the proposed lowering of the United States tariff on Canadian pulp and paper in return for certain concessions or rather for the absence of certain restrictions. In reply to questions in the House, the Minister of Finance replied that the Government contemplated no discussion with Washington for the reason that proposals in the United States Congress and State could not be dealt with, because as yet they were in a very unstable indefinite form. And this is so. Nobody knows whether the proposals for reduction of the American duties on paper and of the practical abolition of duties on pulp will ever become law, wholly or in part. The Senate committee, it is stated, is actually considering the leaving of the rates of duty on pulp and paper almost as they were under the Dingley tariff or with only a very small reduction. Under these conditions of uncertainty it would be folly therefore for Canada to make any overtures to the United States.

Even, however, if the proposed reductions had been actually made, we do not believe that public opinion in this country is by any means favourable to restricting our own free hand. There is absolutely no inclination on the part of Ontario to abrogate its present restrictive legislation against the export of pulp logs. In Quebec, the proposed American changes seem to have had the effect of whetting the people's appetite to follow Ontario's example. In fact, the hanging of the sword of Damocles over the heads of Canadian provinces to make them good and [illegible] as Uncle Sam wants them seems to be having rather the effect of a boomerang. And while this proposed legislation was calculated in a measure to set the provinces one against the other in order to take advantage of its terms, it has certainly in greater measure set papermakers in the Western States against those of the East, owing to the way in which it discriminates between their respective sources of wood supply.

But while few will cavil at the Canadian Government for not immediately opening negotiations with Washington, it is to be deplored that they are sitting still and doing nothing with regard to the better conservation of our pulp-wood resources. The American Government, even if its methods are not particularly wise, is at least attempting to do something for the future of its forests (even though it be at the expense of Canada's). Meanwhile we do nothing except wait and allow things to take their course which in the end means a golden opportunity wasted. We have the wood the Americans need for their mills. We should make the terms in no enmity to them but with a clear view to our own future.

STRETCHING THE TRUTH.

A mild form of complaint of "stretching the truth," remarks Lady Gay in Saturday Night, "which one come across now and then afflicts the man or woman who writes accounts of his or her doings, dress, manners, appearance and belongings for the press. You exclaim that no one would be such a fool. I assure you that many are what you call fools in this matter. No one knows but the editor how often the "beautiful and charming" Mrs. —— supplies her own adjectives, or how the "well-known and clever" man of profession or business or art is self-described. And editors smile and keep the secret. Newspaper works breeds patience and long suffering and a broad mental sweep sweep of kindly tolerance and good-will. Mrs. —— may be a harmless self-sufficient snip, but gently, gently, let her down. Better the cynic should smile at you, the vulgar person ask how much you got for that notice, the rival professional man or artist or fashionable fop like at social records and the chronicle thereof than you forget the watch-word of your craft: 'Give nothing away.' The close mouth goes with the kindly pen in successful journalism."

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

New York, May 15.—The market opened generally weaker, although in the industrial section particularly some fair recovery from the losses represented by final prices yesterday were made. There was a hardening tendency in the early dealings among the railroads and Con. Gas was very strong and the demand for this stock still seems to be quite good. The market during the morning was a hesitating one, and showed the effects of realizing from commission houses, particularly in the Eries, Rock Island, Wabash, Copper and Steel. The market in some respects shows rather a weak undertone, and while we do not look for much activity for the present we would not hesitate to pick up good stocks on any dip during the early trading on Monday. The buying among the good railroad stocks continues very good and will result in better prices in the not-distant future. The London was dull and price changes unimporant. Foreign houses had no orders of consequence here. The bank statement was a very fine one and this market closed quiet but with B. R. T. and C. F. I. showing strength.

Situation in Eastern Europe continues tranquil.

Senate discussion of tariff bill continues, but with only small progress.

Railroad inquiry for steel better than for some time past.

Banks gained $4,988,000 on week's currency movement.

Copper continues to hold firm with large sales of electrolytic around 13 cents.

Anthracite coal inquiry adjourned to Philadelphia.

Crop season in Northwest is now only ten days late, as aginst three weeks a short time ago.

Dun's Review says long desired re-adjustment of whole industrial situation and better weather most important trade developments.

Bradstreet's says irregularity still characterizes trade, crop and industrial situation.

Toronto.—A reported strike on the Beaver caused some sensational moves in that issue to-day. It opened at 30, jumped to 42, fell back to 33, and then steadied. Large blocks were sold on the bulge and were well taken. Other Cobalt issues quiet and slightly firmer.

Baring says: Look for strong market next week. On any weakness would buy Reading, Copper, Smelters, the Hills, Harrimans and Goulds, except Denver, which, I think, will go back to 45.

PE-RU-NA AS A TONIC AND BLOOD PURIFIER.

Mrs. Paul Casavant Writes From 219 Monroe Street, Topeka, Kansas, Concerning Peruna. Read Her Letter Below:

In Spring and Early Summer a Tonic is Needed.

The source of good blood is fresh air and well-digested food. If anything interferes with digestion the blood becomes impure.

A catarrhal condition of the stomach prevents perfect digestion. Such a condition allows the food to ferment and decompose in various ways, instead of digesting. The blood is thus contaminated with various materials that do not belong in the blood.

This gives rise to spring fever, eruptions on the skin, general lassitude and constipation.

Peruna corrects all these difficulties by striking at the source of them. By eradicating the catarrhal condition of the stomach Peruna at once restores digestion, the blood is thereby purified, and the whole machinery of the body is put in working order.

Peruna has probably made a more remarkable record in cases of catarrh of the stomach than any other medicine. These cases are very frequent, and we have a host of testimonials in which Peruna has received lavish praise for prompt and permanent relief in cases of catarrh of the stomach

Mrs. Emily Kellogg, 5649 S. Lawrence St., South Tacoma, Wash., Gives Her Experience With Peruna. Read Her Letter Below:

MRS. PAUL CASAVANT.

MR. CALEB H. BORTELL.

MR. WILLIAM HOGE.

MRS. EMILY KELLOGG

Mrs. Paul Casavant, 219 Monroe street, Topeka, Kansas, writes:

"I have found Peruna very effective in restoring my health and strength after I had been worn out and run down for a long time. I began to use it about six months ago when I was unable to leave my bed. My nervous system was shattered and I was daily losing flesh and strength. This condition was completely altered after a few bottles of Peruna had been used and I kept on using it until I was finally restored to perfect health and had gained about fifteen pounds.

"I feel so grateful for what your medicine has done for me that I am pleased to give it my hearty endorsement and shall always be glad to speak a good word for it."

Tones up the System.

Mrs. William McRoberts, Waverly, Minn., writes:

"I am perfectly well of the catarrh. I took Peruna and Manalin. I recommend your medicine to every one and cannot praise it enough. It is a fine medicine to take any season of the year. Taken in the spring it tones up the system and acts as a gentle stimulant."

A Good Tonic.

Mr. Joe Leonard, Flat 3, 283 Allen St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"I have good reason to endorse Peruna as I have found it a good tonic, stimulating the system and sustaining it under great pressure, imparting unusual endurance and enabling me to work much longer and harder than the system could possibly do were it not for the great powers with which it endowed me. It gives one nerves of iron."

Mr. Caleb H. Bortell, Police Officer, 212 North Paca street, Baltimore, Md., writes:

"For several years I was troubled with catarrh of the head, throat and stomach. Many times I would vomit before and after eating.

"I took seven bottles of your Peruna, and I am glad to say that it has cured me.

"I feel more like living and working, and am not bothered at all with my old troubles.

"I take great pleasure in recommending Peruna to all sufferers with catarrh, and I thank you for what you have done for me, for none but those who have suffered as I have can appreciate a great cure as I have found Peruna to be."

Splendid for La Grippe.

Mr. Frank H. Fielder, 218 Pleasant Ave., Montgomery, Ala., formerly principal of Haynesville High School, writes:

"I can truthfully say that Peruna is a splendid remedy for la grippe, and a good tonic for building up the system."

Pain in Chest.

Mrs. A. W. Gustin, 5209 Lake Ave., St. Joseph, Mo., writes: "When I began taking Peruna I had quite a severe pain and ache in the left of my chest. I suffered a great deal with it.

"I wrote to Dr. Hartman and asked him what I should do. He advised my taking Peruna, which I did. I took three bottles, and I can say I am cured.

"Thanks for kind advice and Peruna."

Mr. William Hoge, President Commercial Travelers Association, 280 Broadway, New York, N. Y., writes:

"I endorse Peruna as the most effectual remedy for catarrh I have been able to find in my travels in this country or Europe. I can truly say that I have spent thousands of dollars in this country alone trying to find a cure, and it was not until I was induced to give Peruna a trial that I obtained anything like permanent relief. As a tonic it is simply great. It ought to be in the grip of every commercial traveler on the road. It cured my wife as well as myself. We have not had the slightest symptom of catarrh for a long time."

In a later letter Mr. Hoge says:—"I have used Peruna for many years, never without a bottle in my grip. I am the youngest feeling and youngest looking man of my age in New York, which I think is entirely due to Peruna."

Hay Fever and Catarrh.

Miss Mayme E. Smith, 444 East Mound St., Columbus, Ohio, writes:

"Have used Peruna for catarrh and hay fever. The results being remarkable, I can highly recommend it to all who are suffering with the above diseases. I am happy to be able to say it has helped me wonderfully."

Eyes Red and Watery.

Mr. William S. Hoarn, 1068 Segal St., Camden, N. J., writes:

"For about two years I was troubled with my eyes being red and watery, and my general health was very poor.

"Finally a friend advised me to try Peruna. I had tried almost everything else, so I purchased a bottle of Peruna and commenced to take it at once, and before I had finished the first bottle I found I was improving.

"I wrote you for special advice concerning my eyes, which I received. I continued to take the Peruna until I had used six bottles.

"Now my eyes are absolutely well, and I feel like a new man in every way.

"I honestly advise any one similarly afflicted to try Peruna."

Mrs. Emily Kellogg, 5649 S. Lawrence St., S. Tacoma, Wash., member of Ladies of the Maccabees, writes:

"Three months ago I had an attack of biliousness which threatened to undermine my health and strength. Luckily for me, I tried Peruna at the suggestion of my friends before it was too late. I found in a few days' time that I did not have the usual sick headache, neither did food nauseate me any longer. In two weeks' time Peruna had completely rid my system of the poison and bile, and I was in a much better condition. My skin assumed its normal color, I had a splendid appetite and I was in every way improved in health. I used Peruna for a month longer and it wrought a wondrous change in my entire system."

Better than for Years.

Mrs. Mahala Reid, Corbyville, Ont., Canada, writes that she had constipation, rheumatism and kidney trouble. She took Peruna and Manalin, and is now completely recovered, better than she has been for years.

Council In Committee Deals With Important Questions

The Committee of the Whole Council met last night when several questions were brought up and all were dealt with. Alderman Phelan was in the chair and all the members were present.

Outside the Tree Line

A deputation was present headed by Mr. Kidd, asking for a sidewalk near the Normal school outside the tree line. Their petition had asked for that as the council had secured additional property for the roadway they thought they should have it on the outside. The engineer, however, had started to work on the inside.

On motion of Alderman Turner and Alderman Buller, that the engineer proceed with the work for the time being and that this matter be referred to the Board of Works.

Alderman Morgan said the Board of Works had already decided to build no walks outside the tree line, he would move in amendment that the walk be built outside the tree line. Alderman Metherell seconded the amendment.

Alderman Buller stated that he understood the walks outside of the tree line would be on top of the water mains. If that was so the walk could not go there.

Mr. Kidd stated that the walk could be laid outside and be within 18 inches of the main at the narrowest place.

The original motion was carried.

Cost of Report

A letter was received from Mr. W. J. Francis stating that he would be glad to place himself in the services of the city. He said his price was $50 per day for such work as going over the plans of the city engineer on the Smith street bridge. But knowing the thoroughness of Mr. T. A. S. Hay, he would state as a price $100 for the work.

On motion the chairman of the Board of Works was instructed to complete arrangements with Mr. Francis.

Building By-law

Alderman Turner introduced the matter of amending the building by-law. He said that as it stood now it was not satisfactory, and did not meet the requirements of the city. He suggested several changes so that the thickness of the solid brick walls would be more in proportion to the size of the building. The aldermen will prepare his amendments and submit them to the Board of Works at the next meeting.

Dogs at Large

The dogs running at large destroying property, was another matter introduced by Alderman Turner. He was very fond, he said, of all dumb animals, but he considered that dogs should be put under constraint. There are altogether too many canines running loose and wild and the owners should be compelled to keep them off the streets. This matter will also come up again.

THE NOX TASTELESS LIQUOR, DRUG AND TOBACCO CURE.

We have yet to hear of one failure to cure where a fair trial has been given. Can be given without the person knowing it, is harmless and absolutely without taste. Mother, sister or wife, you would be doing a great work by giving this remedy to some members of your family. We will mail a full month's treatment for five dollars. Grand Pastorale and Hunting Fantasie—"Le Fremersberg," Koennemann.

Synopsis.

The Margrave's horn, echoed by the mountains, is heard summoning the huntsmen and the fanfare, heard first in the ditsance, then drawing nearer, indicates their approach the signal for the hunt to commence. During the rustic scene which follows the horns are heard both near and in the distance. Then comes the song of the country folk—solo with the song of the country folk—solo with refrain and dance. During the dance a storm approaches, the wind rises and the peasant's dance becomes more animated. A peal of thunder stops the dance—the peasants rush shrieking away to seek shelter. The lightning flashes; the storm grows in intensity; at last it bursts forth in full fury; rain falls in torrents; the thunder crashes.

The Margrave, who has been overtaken by the storm, is heard crying for help—in vain—the noise of the storm drowns his appeal. Overcome by weariness the Margrave falls to the ground. Suddenly he hears the monastery bell and chant of the monks. Following the sound he finds the Fremersberg. The storm ceases, and the retainers who have been seeking the Margrave, find him in the Monastery. All join joyfully in the Te Deum.

Accompaniste: Miss Sisson.

REV. J.E. SAWDERS IS TO PREACH

Special Series of Evangelistic Meetings Have Been Arranged.

Rev. J. E. Sawders, of Watertown, N. Y., arrived in the city last night, to hold a special series of evangelistic meetings, in an empty store room, on Water street, half a block north of the post office, next to Mason's greenhouse. Services Sunday 10 a.m., 2:30 p.m., and every day 2:30 and 7 p.m. Mr. Sawders is one of the prominent Pentecostal teachers, and has been wonderfully used of God in other cities. He says the work has been much misrepresented here, and he believes in nothing foolish or fanatical, but preahes the Bible truth without fear or favour. The Pentecostal work is the miracle of modern missions, sweeping around the world in the last three years. The speaking in tongues, is alright in Bible order.

A SECOND LIFE

"If I only had another chance!"

How often are these despairing words uttered when a man feels his strength ebbing, his vital forces depressed, his health undermined—often as the result of his own errors or follies—and he realizes the infinite possibilities which might lie in his grasp, could he indeed receive in Shakespeare's phrase, "a second life."

Happily for the world, this other chance, this "second life" is to be had for the asking by means of that which has been aply described by a famous physician as "the last word science has spoken" on the subject of such remedial agents, and to which by virtue of its health-giving properties, the name of Vitol—meaning life "health-producer" - has been given.

So potent is its force that it will not only restore the health and vigour which have been lost, but, if persevered in, will in addition impart the highest measure of nervous and physical vigour of which the individual is capable; for there is a maximum capacity of health for everyone, though he may not hitherto have had the fact impressed upon him. Doctors endorse this and daily prescribe Vitol in increasing quantities. The constituents which give this power are known to every physician, and one has testified to the supreme merits of Vitol as

A Revitalizing Force

after wasting illness and as a restorer of health, not only in nervous diseases (with their innumerable symptoms of discomfort and distress, including loss of memory, insomnia, irresolution, weakness of the will, &c.), but also in anæmia, digestive disturbances and consumption.

GRAND CONCERT BY MURRAY ST. CHOIR

An Excellent Musical Programme Given Last Evening—A Large Attendance.

One of the best musical concerts that have been heard in Peterborough for some time was that given last evening by the choir of the Murray St Baptist Church. Choruses, duets, and solos formed a most pleasing programme. The audience was large and that it thoroughly appreciated the various numbers was manifested by the enthusiastic encores accorded each number. The choir, under the capable leadership of Mrs. Miller, has made splendid progress and their choruses were sung in perfect harmony. Space will not permit to specialize on any one number, the programme being a lengthy one. The singing of the solos, duets and quartettes cannot be praised too highly, the artists acquitting themselves most favourably and won merited applause from their hearers.

The pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, acted as chairman in his usual pleasing manner and introduced the following programme:

Chorus—Great and Marvellous—Choir.
Solo—Yeoman's Wedding Song—Mr. Ferguson.
Duet—Kind Words—Mrs. Hurt and Mrs. Miller.
Quartette—Hail Smiling Morn.
Reading—Miss Aldridge.
Solo—Should He Upbraid—Miss Kidd.
Violin Solo—Miss Miller.
Ladies' Chorus—The Gipsy Chorus.
Solo—The Gift of Rest—Miss Pilling.
Quartette—My God, My Father.
Solo—Land of Hope and Glory—Mrs. Miller.
Reading—Miss Aldridge.
Solo—Mr. Ferguson.
Ladies' Quartette—Rock-a-Bye.
Chorus—Take Up Thy Cross.
Doxology.

Mr. Geo. Schneider presided at the piano in his usual efficient manner. After the concert the choir were entertained to supper in the school-room.

"Tidiness" Advocates This Departure for Peterborough—Good Service in Other Cities.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—St. Paul and other large cities have what they call a clean-up week every spring. Would this not be a capital idea for Peterborough, especially in view of the visit of the Brantford and St. Catharine Regiments her on the 24th inst.? All these strangers will carry away with them their impressions of our city and will convey their impressions to thousands of others. Something should be done and done at once.

Yours truly,
TIDINESS.

OUR SCHOOLS AND TEACHERS.

I have reason to believe that my last Article has called forth a good deal of comment from teachers and pupils, and, indeed from the public at large. Many have spoken to me, and all, so far, approvingly. I have been thanked by parents who were grieved and indignant at the treatment their children have received at the hands of teachers whom they freely name. Trustees who felt that some action on their part would be necessary, have commended the step I have taken, in the hope that they may not now have to resort to more drastic measures. Pupils, especially among the more favoured ones, rejoice that there is some prospect of justice being done to their fellows, and that they themselves may be relieved from the unenviable position in which their teachers, without intending it, have placed them.

I have charged certain teachers with discourtesy, and a wilful, cruel, and long-continued neglect of duty. They will not attempt a denial; for they know the charges are true, and that I can prove them. The discourtesy is of no consequence to me, personally, but it was witnessed by the pupils, some of whom have expressed their indignation, not to me, but to others. The neglect of duty is a more serious matter, involving as it does, both dishonesty and cruelty. How a teacher can take money from a parent for educating his children, for that is what he virtually does, and know that he is all along wilfully ignoring his part of the contract, is hard to understand. Such conduct is not even reconcileable with common decency.

That all sorts of motives, except the right one, will be attributed to me is, I suppose, to be expected. I have stated nothing but the bare truth and the teachers may congratulate themselves that I have not stated all the truth. Had I wished to injure them, my statements would have been equally truthful, and certainly not less injurious. I have no favours to ask of teachers; but I would prefer being on friendly terms with them all. This I know to be now impossible.

But why more now than before? Lacking utterly in professional spirit, it is characteristic of them to despise an old, worn-out, member of the profession.

Well! I shall bear it as best I may.

At the time of my visit to the Normal School, that institution had been only for a short time in operation, and my chief object in going was to see the interior arrangements of the building.

Though my experience with Normal Schools has been rather limited, while my High School experience has been large, I approached the building in Dixon Park with greater confidence than the one in Central Park. This could scarcely be due to the character of the buildings, since the Normal School is the more imposing structure. I had frequently met and conversed with the two Principals, and was not aware of any unpleasant relations with either of them. Of most of the subordinate teachers, I had little or no knowledge. To what, then, do I ascribe my feeling of reluctance, for the feeling existed, to visit the Collegiate Institute? The difference in the characters of the two principals, though in part, the cause, cannot wholly explain it; for I am affected in much the same way whenever I visit similar institutions. I have invariably found in High Schools a want of naturalness and openness; an air of mystery and restraint, of suspicion and distrust, an offensive exclusiveness. I found these characteristics in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute all the time I taught in it, and I found them oppressive. I shall not attempt, at this time, to analyse these feelings. I know they exist, and have often wondered whether others have had similar experiences.

Shortly before I gave up teaching I had occasion to visit Toronto, and took advantage of the opportunity to visit the Jarvis-St. Collegiate Institute for the special purpose of meeting Mr Chase, the chief teacher of English. The Principal seemed to be determined to prevent my going to Mr Chase's room, and it was not until I asserted my right as a High School teacher in actual service that I was permitted to see Mr. Chase. Some time afterwards, Mr Chase asked me to visit him, but stipulated that I was not to go to the school.

I have frequently visited the Toronto Normal and Model Schools and have never had cause to complain of my treatment, and have never been affected, in any Normal School I have visited, by the objectionable features mentioned in connection with High Schools.

In the early spring of 18[illegible], I spent three weeks in Montreal, and, during that time, I visited the High School, then under Dr. Kelly. I did manage with difficulty, to get into Dr. Kelly's room, but I got no further. I have been waiting vainly ever since for Dr. Kelly to make good, by some great act, his opinion of himself expressed during that visit. Needless to say, Dr. Kelly was successful in keeping me from prying into the affairs of his school.

I several times visited the McGill Normal School, and was naturally and humanly received, and twice, at Prof. Parmelee's request, taught classes.

I have already described my reception at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, I shall now tell of my reception at the Peterborough Normal School.

I still think it to be regretted that this fine buildings has not been given a position more worthy of it. One is not so much surprised at a blunder of this kind by a lot of aldermen; but we did have reason to expect better things from Dr. Seath and Mr. Colquhoun. We might have known that the prospect of a free site would, with the average Peterborough Alderman, make short work with any aesthetic objections. Dr. Seath, seeing, no doubt, how little Peterborough deserved a Normal School was comparatively indifferent as to where it was put so long as the Government requirements were met.

What a pity that Dr. Seath's attention was not called to the fact that he was helping our greedy aldermen to steal a park, given to the little children by one of our citizens

One thing, however, we have demonstrated, and let the Germans take notice. We may not have an inordinate thirst for knowledge, but we have for blood. We may show a disregard for the student, but we are most considerate, even loving, in our treatment of the warrior.

We may send a hundred and fifty young ladies, twice a day, through all kinds of weather, over Smith-town Hill, to hunt up a Normal School, but we only ask our soldiers to take an easy walk to Central Park. We carefully hide away an educational institution of the higher class, but we give a drillshed the finest and most convenient site in the city.

But I shall not be able to "rail the seal from off" Dr. Seath's "bond." There is no help for it. I must climb the hill. There will be however, some compensation. The prospect from the top will be fine.

I proceed to climb and, at last, reach the summit. The view of the City and the winding Otonabee, and its Little Lake, is very fine. The site of the Normal School is, after all not so bad. I hasten on until I get opposite the building. Again, I turn towards the city. Where am I? City and River have disappeared. I look around. A few trees; a few scattered houses; a few uninteresting fields, surrounded with snake fences; a huge unsightly old ditch; a large, handsome Normal School building, on a site sloping to the North, ending in low, wet ground, with some cheap looking buildings on a rise of ground to the South, cutting off the only view worth looking at. So much for greed and mismanagement.

Why was the Normal School not given to Norwood, or some other place where it would be appreciated? Surely Norwood was not left out because East Peterborough was represented by my kind old friend, Anderson.

I was filled with grief and disgust, and entered the building, where I looked for something of a more pleasant character. And I was not disappointed!

But I do not deny that there is something to be said on the other side. The present nicely-balanced appearance of Central Park must, to the artistic eye, be "a joy forever."

Besides, the Military Authorities and the Board of Education, with the assistance of Mr. Dumble, will have things so arranged, that, neither the people in the vicinity of the Park nor the passing public, will be annoyed by pestilent playing children.

But, then, if Mr. Dumble succeeds in keeping the military off the front part of the Park, how are the officers and men to show their fine clothes, or the people to have their war spirit aroused by watching the intricate, but exact evolutions of the gallant 57th?

To those who know Mr Walker, it will not be necessary to say that my interview with him was most pleasant. Fortunately for me, Dr. Merchant Inspector of Normal Schools, was making a visit at the same time. Too well I know that had I been visiting the Collegiate Institute, though I might have seen an inspector at a respectful distance, a worn-out, worthless, old teacher would not have been permitted to come near his sacred person. It will surprise the Institute teachers to learn that neither Mr. Walker nor Dr. Merchant seems to have a deep sense of his own importance. I do not remember meeting Dr. Merchant before, but we knew each other by reputation. Needless to say I was not anxious to learn what part of my reputation had made the most lasting impression. However that may be, I found him a most pleasant gentleman, strong enough to need no adventitious aids to maintain a becoming dignity.

After talking for a short time, Dr. Merchant cordially seconded Mr. Walker's proposition to show me through the building. This was done, every part being carefully explained by Mr. Walker.

My last act was to visit a room where I needed no introduction. It was a real pleasure to me to meet again my kind friend, Dr. Park before his class. I have known Dr. Park from his early boyhood, and knew his parents and grand-parents. The doctor never had the misfortune to have me for a teacher, but his amiable wife did not escape this unenviable distinction. I do not believe, however, that either of them harbour any grudge against me on that account. In fact, I am not sure that they have not only forgiven me, but even think all the more of me.

On my entrance to Dr. Park's room, the class arose, and, after I was introduced, bowed, and took their seats. I may say here that this rising and bowing were repeated when I left the room.

After a short stay in Dr. Park's room, I returned to the Principal, and, soon after, took my leave, feeling happier than when I left the Collegiate Institute.

Whether it was by accident, or the result of good judgment, and some former appointments might lead one to think the first, that the Board of Education secured two such men in succession to fill the position of Public School Inspector as Mr. Walker and Mr. Mowat, they have much reason to congratulate themselves. Fortunately we have Mr. Walker with us still, in a capacity less important, it may be, to the city, but having a much wider range of usefulness, and we sincerely hope that the Board will long continue to retain the services of Mr. Mowat, as Inspector, and give him the confidence and support which he deserves. I am convinced that the best thing that can happen to our Public Schools is to give Mr. Mowat, as far as the School law and Regulations will permit, a free hand.

The less such men as Mr. Walker and Mr. Mowat are interfered with either by the Government or the Board of Education, the better for all parties concerned.

I have continued these articles longer than I intended, and have been surprised that there has not appeared to be any falling off in interest on the part of the public. Indeed I am often found fault with for not furnishing one each week as at first—a task which I soon found too much for my strength. In now taking leave of my readers for a time, I have to thank them for the kind consideration they have shown for my defects, and, at the same time to assure them that nothwithstanding whatsome may think my reason for writing has been a sincere desire to do good.

Health permitting, I shall resume writing after the holiday season is over, and shall discuss, among other subjects, the following:

Lady Teachers in High Schools.
The School Curriculums.
The Board of Education and the Ministerial Association.
The Board of Education, Past and Present.
The Government and Education.

OBITUARY

ROBERT RIDDELL

The death occurred yesterday afternoon at his late residence in Otonabee of Mr. Robert Riddell, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of Peterborough. He had been ill for some time. The late Mr. Riddell was 71 years of age and was born in South Monaghan, where he resided until about three months ago when he took up his residence in Otonabee. The deceased served in the South Monaghan council two years, one of which he was reeve of the township. He was a man of many sterling qualities and lived a most exemplary life. He was unmarried.

In religion he was a Presbyterian and was prominently identified with the South Monaghan Presbyterian Church. He was from 1853 until two years ago, connected with the Bensfort Sabbath school, as both superintendent and teacher. In politics he was a staunch Liberal.

Two brothers, Messrs. Joseph, of Winnipeg, and John Riddell, Homewood Ave., are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral will take place at three o'clock this afternoon from the residence of his brother, to the Little Lake cemetery.

ROBERT SHANNON.

The funeral of the late Robert Shannon, who passed away in Campbellford on Thursday, took place this morning from the G. T. R. station to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. H. J. Keith, of Knox Church, conducted the funeral service. Many friends of the deceased here turned out to pay their last token of respect to the memory of the deceased.

"I inherited poor health from my parents," Mr Baillargeon says. "I was bothered with Rheumatism, Lumbago and Gravel. I was always tired and nervous. In fact I was a total wreck. I tried all kinds of medicines but I got no relief till I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. They did me good and [illegible] I took fifteen boxes in [illegible] but I am cured.

"My wife has also taken Dodd's Kidney Pills and received great benefit from them."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys. Cured Kidneys strain all impurities, all the disease seeds, out of the blood. That is why they always cure Rheumatism, Lumbago, Dropsy and Heart Disease.

A PARTICULARLY PLEASING SHOW

The fact that it's the original William Downie McPhee at the door smiling, as the ticket taker tears off the checks, is sufficient guarantee that the show is a good one. The McPhee Stock Company that appeared at the Grand last night, and is playing its concluding engagement here this evening, is decidedly the best popular-priced show that has ever visited this city.

"For Her Brother's Sake" proved an interesting and splendidly presented offering, and the company immediately won the favour of the large audience.

The vaudeville features are really excellent, and the artists in this department are of unusually high calibre, and much superior to any that have appeared here with a stock organization. The juggling act was frequently interrupted by outbursts of applause, and was a wonderfully clever feature, and the head juggler proved a revelation to the audience, and did some almost impossible work. The singing and dancing were bright and appealing, and the Company's large orchestra played superbly.

Ald. Hicks Favours A Broad Power Policy For Peterboro'

Special Power Committee Talks Over the Possible Amount of Power the City May Receive From the New Waterworks Dam—Will Meet Seymour Power Co.—The Water Commissioners Views.

MAY OUTLINE A POLICY.

What was probably the first step in the city's outlining a power policy was the result of a conference between the Special Power Committee and the Water Commissioners yesterday afternoon at five o'clock. The latter, consisting of Messrs. T. F. Matthews, W. H. Hill, and W. H. Moroe, met the committee, who were present, as follows: Ald. McIntyre, chairman; Ald. Phelan, Morrow, Hicks, Bradburn, and Gillespie.

Ald. Hicks, in referring to a former motion, as read by the chairman, stated that the Committee desired to learn what power could be given the city from the waterworks dam.

Mr. Matthews remarked that instructions had been given the engineer to make preparations necessary to provide for a power house. The plans were practically ready and tenders would be called for in a few days.

Superintendent Henderson of the water works department, stated that there would be about 700 h.p. surplus at the new dam.

Ald. Hicks considered that the city should launch upon a larger power policy and should look for a greater supply than could be found at the new dam.

Ald. Morrow in referring to the question, said that the power would be utilized for the water works requirements, and secondly for lighting the streets. As the city increases, the work of pumping will be correspondingly increased, and the surplus power will be greatly diminished. The question therefore, was how many thousands of dollars could the city expend for the use of the surplus power at the dam for ten or teen years or at least until the city has grown to such an extent that all the power generated there will be required for pumping.

Ald. Hicks stated that the committee wanted to determine upon some plan to follow out when the Seymour Power Co. waits on the Council next week. The Water Commissioners did not suggest any idea, but stated that they would be present when the representatives of the company are present next week.

ST. ANDREW'S BANQUET WAS IN EVERY SENSE GREAT SUCCESS

Enjoyable Affair Held Last Night Under the Auspices of the Young Men's Bible Class.

TOASTS WERE HONOURED

The Young Men's Bible class, of St. Andrew's Church held a very successful and enjoyable banquet in the school hall last evening. For some time past a membership contest, in which the Blues and Reds have been endeavouring to secure new members, has been held, and as the Reds were successful in obtaining the larger number, the Blues had to put up the banquet, and they are to be congratulated on the splendid manner in which all the arrangements were carried out. The semi-annual reports were read last evening, and these showed an encouraging state of affairs in the work of the Bible class. The officers for the year were also elected and are as follows:

Hon President—Rev. J. G. Potter.
President—Edson Wegg.
Vice-President—Wm Langford.
Secretary—J. Evans.
Treasurer—G. Carter.

Mr. J. S. Ferguson was made an honorary member.

After the reading of the reports and election of officers the large number present sat down to the well-laden and inviting tables, on which were spread all the delicacies which can only be properly prepared by the ladies, and their work was very much in evidence last night. After the company had done full justice to the many good things, the following toast list was carried out, and Mr. Wm. Longford, jr., acted as toast master in a capable manner.

The toast to the King was first proposed and honoured by the singing of the National Anthem, after which Rev. J. G. Potter rendered a vocal number, "Keep Digging."

The toast to "The Reds," winners of the contest, was proposed by Mr. C. Thornton, and honoured by Mr. E. Wegg.

A toast to the success of the class was proposed by Rev. J.G. Potter, and honoured by Mr. H. McCulloch.

The toast to the teachers of the Bible class was proposed by Mr. Ballard, and honoured by the teacher, Mr. Cornish.

The toast to the retiring president and newly-elected president, was proposed by Mr. John Evans, and honoured by Messrs. R. Patterson and E. Wegg.

The last toast was "The Ladies," and in proposing the toast Mr. T. O. Donaldson thanked the ladies for the kind and willing manner in which they had performed their duties of the evening. Mr. H. McCulloch honoured the toast on behalf of the ladies.

During the evening Miss Mary Potter presided at the piano and her numerous selections were enjoyed by all.

The singing of Auld Lang Syne brought to a close a most enjoyable and successful function.

HIGH WATER FILLS THE SEWER FROM THE RIVER TO ROMAINE ST.

Mr. Willis Chipman, of Toronto, has charge of the surveying of the southwest part of the city for the purpose of making a report upon a proposed trunk sewer down Park street. Mr. Chipman will present the report to the Council some time during the month of June. He has been unavoidably delayed by a trip to the Pacific coast on business.

Mr. Chipman, speaking of the Lock street sewer, stated that the water in the river was now nine feet higher than when he saw it last and, as a result the water filled the sewer up as far as Weir or Romaine streets. This checked the flow of sewage for the time being until the water in the river resumes its normal level.

Whitney Government Places Spoils System On Wheels

The Whitney Government, the Canadian patentees of the "spoils system" in politics, works its patent privilege "for all it is worth." It even gets its machinery into the Education Department, which one would think should be kept in a serene zone, or stratum far above the petty influence of political pull.

It appears that our Normal School is used as the medium of the local application of the spoils system. Omnibusses are employed to convey the pupils or teachers-in-training to country schools in the vicinity of the city, where the pupils are to be made the objects of pedagogic experimentation. It is stated that Mr. Gibbs, the livery stables keeper has the contract of furnishing three or four 'buses at $4 per day to transport the damsels to their destination.

Now Mr. Gibbs is a good Tory; a local pillar of the party, and here is where the spoils system comes in. He is faithful to the principles of the ruling powers and enforces the spoils system. He instructs his drivers that they are not to patronize any but Tory farmers for shelter and refreshments for man and beast, while on duty.

This arrangement often leads to inconvenience and hardship; but in the assertion of the high principles involeed in fidelity to the spoils system, sacrifice is to be expected. It sometimes happens that the driver of the spoils-system omnibus, finds himself in a neighbourhood where civilization has gained such an ascendency as to preclude the local existence of Tories. Such an occurrence came about the other day. A 'bus driver found himself in a vicinity where there were no Tory farmers. Faithful to his trust he followed the letter of his instructions. He and his team fasted and he himself spent the hours of waiting in sleeping in his conveyance. This men's fidelity to the spoils system should be recognized. If he is not made a beneficiary of the "Carnegie hero fund," he should at least be appointed a constable at a polling both at the next general election. Hereafter, if the Government should not provide him a Tory farmer it should not least furnish him with a small bag of oats for his horses and some biscuits and cheese for himself—bought, of course, from some Tory merchant sound in the faith.

It is also stated that ratepayers of rural sections want to know why their schools should be invaded when the city spent $25,000 or $30,000 to make the Queen Alexandra school an educational experiment station, not counting the King Edward school.

THE HAIR BRUSH.

Breeds Dandruff, Which Causes Falling Hair and Finally Baldness.

Prof. Unna, Hamburg, Germany, European authority on skin diseases, says that dandruff is as contagious as any other malevolent disease, and that one common source of the spread of dandruff is the use of the same hair brush by different persons. The way to avoid catching dandruff or any other disease from another brush is to insist on the use of Newbro's Herpicide. It not only kills the dandruff germ, but it is also an antiseptic that will prevent the catching of any disease whatever through contagion of another's brush. Sold by leading druggists. NOVEL CURE FOR CATARRHAL ILLS.

Stops Bronchitis, Relieves Hoarseness, Cures Asthma, Prevents Throat Irritation.

The most effective way to treat and cure ailment of the breathing organs is by inhalation.

Now as this method is in application, its practice is as old as man. Down from Adam has spread the reputation of the air of the pine woods, charged with balsam and healing for diseases of the throat, lungs and nasal passages.

Yet medical men neglected to employ the natural curative agency for diseases of the throat, lungs and nasal passages until the wonderful results which attended the Catarrhozone dry air method were brought to their notice and compelled attention.

The air of the pine woods, charged with little drops of balsam and ozone, has been enhanced by the Catarrhozone method through the addition of vegetable antiseptics more powerfully healing than the air of the pine woods.

This balsamic and healing vegetable compound is broken up by the air INTO MINUTE PARTICLES so small that the air is enabled to carry them to the remotest parts of the lungs, throat and nasal passages—in fact, it is the air of the pine woods concentrated a thousandfold. and you can have it at home.

FAILURE IS IMPOSSIBLE.

You can now understand why Catarrhozone cures with such certainty. It is medicated air carried to the seat of bronchitic congestion or situation here the micro-organisms which excite asthma or hay fever exert their baneful and dangerous influence.

The air distributes evenly over the entire diseased surfaces a covering of healing Catarrhozone. Immediately congestion is relieved, inflammation is subdued, the microbes which cause the trouble are destroyed, and cure follows as inevitably as the sun follows the night.

THOUSANDS CURED DAILY.

No other medicine has achieved [illegible] success, and to-day [illegible] than twenty thousand physicians [illegible] America alone are prescribing Catarrhozone. And why? The way a RUSSELL car climbs hills

The way it plows through sand and mud that would stagger an ordinary machine—the way it stands up for months and years of pounding, jostling service over rough roads: these are the things to consider in your choice of a car. : : : : : :

We have recently received the following telegram from Mr. Fred. S. Crosby, St. John, N.B., to whom we recently shipped a RUSSELL "Thirty" Touring Car:

St. John, N. B.—Car received. It's a corker; takes everything on high gear.
(Signed) FRED. S. CROSBY

It is so every time. Mr. Crosby's satisfaction is the common experience of every owner of a RUSSELL car. But, most important of all, it's a satisfaction that has only just begun.

It is a significant fact that the most enthusiastic praise for the RUSSELL comes from those who have driven the car not for a week or a month, but for year in and year out.

That is becuase quality is built into it—quality that you can see in external things and qualily that you can't see as well.

When a car like the RUSSELL has persistently made good for years, is it not worth investigating before you buy?

The RUSSELL is reliable—absolutely. It is comfortable—wonderfully so. It has the standard features adopted by the leading cars of the world.

Models from $1,500 to $4,500, 18 to 50 Horsepower.

Two Leading Cars: Model L, $2,000, 24 horsepower, the RUSSELL "Thirty," Model H, $2,500. Each the extreme value for the price—each standard in all features and contruction. Model H is large with more powerful motor than Model L, and with a degree of elegance usually found only in cars costing far more. Ask for a demonstration. Shall we not send you our catalogue?

SENIOR BASEBALL LEAGUE FOR PETERBOROUGH IS STILL POSSIBLE

Proposal Has Been Made to Form a Three Club League, the Teams Having Power to Import Batteries if They Desire---Would be Appreciated by the Fans Who Want to See Some Ball During the Summer.

A senior baseball league for Peterboro is still a possibility. The matter is under discussion at present and steps may be taken in the near future to get the organization under way. Corny Burns will organize a team to enter the League, and it is understood that the Strathconas and T. A. S. are quite willing to jump the Intermediate or Kindergarten League for the senior company if the proposal proves feasible. The proposition is to allow the teams to import batteries in order that they may be strong enough to put up a fast article of ball. This is done in Brantford where they have about the best City League in the country, The T. A.S. would be well fitted out with pitchers, but would need a catcher, while both the other teams would require a battery as pitchers and catchers of senior calibre are scarce around this part of the British Empire just now. There is plenty of material to round out the teams and with strong batteries the League would prove a great success even with three teams.

The motion passed by the Intermediate League last night barring any players who have ever participated in a Midland League game is partially responsible for the proposal to form a Senior League. It is felt that the fans want to see faster ball than the Intermediate League is liable to produce and a senior circuit would be a step in the right direction.

BALL FAN CRITICIZES ACTION OF INTERMEDIATE BALL LEAGUE

Sporting Editor of The Examiner,—The men at the helm of the Intermediate City League, seem bound to keep the organization as near to a scond-rate proposition as they can. Their attitude in regard to Midland League players seems ridiculous, especially the action of the president, who, it might naturally be supposed, would be in favour of any step that would tend to improve the quality of ball played in his League. If the intention of the League is as stated, to develop the young players they take a very narrow way of doing business, or they would not make it impossible for the fast youngsters to have a chance to break into faster company. If it is to help young players there should be an age limit in the constitution, if not it should be thrown open.

Surely the officers of the League do not want to see another season of cricket score games, and record-breaking stunts in the error line, such as was perpetrated on an unsuspecting public last year. They should remember that last year there was no charge for admission, so that the crowd had no license to howl if the scores were big, and the error list bigger. And surely they don't expect the fans to part with their good money to watch the games if they are anything nearly as bad as most of the games were last year. There is a bunch of players in the League who have been playing ever since it was organized, and who will probably be playing intermediate ball ten years hence if their performances in the past can be taken as a criterion. Officers of a League generally try to boost the quality of the games, instead of lowering the standard, by barring everyone who ever played in a senior team, but this is apparently not the case with the Intermediate League. "It doesn't matter how old you are, as long as you can't play ball," seems to be the pass-word for that organization. That's a great boost for the gate receipts, isn't it, when you practically advertize the fact that no real ball players are wanted in the League?

Yours,
"A Fan Who Wants to See Some Ball This Season."
